GOOD MUSIC GIVEN BY SCHOOL CHORUS.

Large Attendace at Musicale Given by Pupils of The Plainfield High School.

PROGRAMME EXCELLENT.

GIVEN UNDER THE DIRECTION OF CHARLES L. LEWIS.

Great Variety of Choruses Were Sung—There Was a Solo by Miss Cornelia Miller—Was Held in Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

A most enjoyable programme of vocal music was rendered by the pupils of the Plainfield High School under the masterly leadership of Charles L. Lewis, their instructor, at an entertainment given in the Seventh-Day Baptist church last evening.

Although the affair had been arranged rather hurriedly the large edifice, in which the entertainment was held, was crowded long before the time of beginning. Many had come who were desirous of hearing the Easter contata sung some time ago by the pupils, though all were especially anxious to witness the progress made by the pupils under the skillful instruction of Mr. Lewis.

Every number of the programme was well rendered and the audience was unstinted in its applause. Particularly was this the case with the rendition of "The Lost Chord," which received prolonged applause.

As an introduction a choir of young women sang the "Morning Invitation" by Veazie and this was followed by a medley of childhood songs composed of such rhymes as "Jack and Jill" and "Baa, Baa, Black Sheep." A pleasing selection proved to be a soprano solo by Miss Cornelia Miller, with which was coupled a violin obligato by Miss Dorothy Waldo.

Reginald DeKoven's musical setting to Rudyard Kipling's "Becessional" was sung with much inspiration, but Sir Arthur Sullivan's masterpiece, "The Lost Chord," received by far the greater reception from the audience.

As a concluding number of the first part of the evening's entertainment, an Easter anthem was sung by a chorus composed of all the pupils of the school.

"The Story of Calvary," an elaborate Easter cantata, was rendered by the entire school under the leadership of Mr. Lewis. Briefly stated, this work is divided into three distinct parts. A chorus forms the "introduction" and it is entitled "Sing, My Tongue, the Saviour's Glory," and then follows the "story" which starts with a baritone solo by the narrator, Mr. Lewis, and in turn is followed by a chorus by the multitude, whose part is taken by the pupils. Succeeding these are solos by the narrator, chorale of women's voices, chorus by men's voices, and a climaxing chorus as the finale, entitled, "Hail, Holy Cross."

Miss Mabel Maxson very ably accompanied the singers in all the various selections. In the cantata and "The Lost Chord" Howard Case presided at the organ.

When the delightful entertainment drew to a close, Mr. Lewis and his pupils, as well as Miss Maxson and Mr. Case, were warmly congratulated by those who had the good fortune to be present.

The special chorus of eleven young women, which sang two selections, was composed of the following: The Misses Marjorie Fleming, Elizabeth Bowen, Jeane Douglas, Dorothy Waldo, Cornelia Miller, Martha Anthony, Mae Batchelor, Nancy VanDeventer, Alma Dyer, Elsie Goddard and Mildred Ulrich.

MISS REMINGTON ILL.

Teacher in North Plainfield High School is Seriously Ill at Ridgewood, N. J.

Miss Cora Remington, the teacher in the Third grade of the North Plainfield schools, is seriously ill at her home at Ridgewood, N. J.

During her Easter vacation Miss Remington contracted malaria and subsequently peritonitis set in and she became very ill. It is now reported that Miss Remington is also suffering from appendicitis and that an operation is being seriously considered by her attending physician.

Moved Big Safe.

William Hand & Son have been busy of late in moving large safes, which is a feature of the firm's business. Saturday the firm placed a big safe in W. A. Woodruff's office at the corner of Front street and Park avenue, and also removed a safe from Mr. Woodruff's place to the office of Leifke & Laing on Park avenue.

OLD CITIZEN LAID TO REST.

FUNERAL OF J. SMITH CARRETSON TOOK PLACE YESTERDAY.

Many Relatives and Friends Gathered—Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., in Charge of the Services.

Many relatives and friends of J. Smith Garretson gathered at his late home on Lee place, yesterday afternoon, to pay their last respects to his memory. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., who was the deceased's pastor for many years, was the officiating clergyman. In the course of his remarks, he spoke of Mr. Garretson's beautiful Christian life, his affability and his home loving tendencies. He also referred to his faithful attendance at church, it being a rare thing to see his pew vacant until the time the illness began which resulted in his death. At the conclusion of Mr. Schenck's discourse, prayer was offered by Rev. C. E. Herring.

The Trinity church choir, composed of Miss Katheryn Glen, Miss Minnie Williams, Joseph C. Martin and T. R. VanZandt, sang in a touching manner, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Asleep In Jesus."

There were several handsome floral tributes, among them being a large set piece with the words, "Father." A second one was entirely composed of beautiful lilies.

At the close of the services, the remains were interred in the North Plainfield cemetery beside those of his wife, who died in 1894. Those who acted as pall bearers were three elders of his church, F. E. Smith, H. E. Gayle, A. L. Force and a neighbor, Norman Barnes.

STRUCK BY POST.

Charles Hack Injured by Too Intimate Acquaintance With a Block Signal.

Charles Hack, of Dunellen, one of the crew on drill engine No. 67, narrowly escaped serious if not fatal injuries while at work yesterday morning. The engine was slowly pulling up a side track, near the Cadmus Mill, with a string of freight cars, on one of which Hack was standing. One of the large block signals overhangs the track at this point but a few feet above the cars. Hack was unaware of his of his proximity to the post until he was struck a terrific blow on the side of the head.

Fortunately he was standing in the centre of the car, otherwise he would have fallen between the bunkers. As it was he was stunned and a deep gash was cut in his forehead. He was assisted down from the car and taken to the hospital where the injury was dressed. It required several stitches to close the wound.

LIVED HERE ONCE.

Druggist Frasick, of Northport Fame, Formerly Kept Store in Borough.

L. A. Frasick, of Northport, L. I., who is charged with haying caused the death of Mrs. Vinna McCann, a customer by wrongly compounding citrate of magnesia, is said to be the druggist who formerly conducted the business at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place in North Plainfield.

The woman died some days ago and Frasick subsequently left the town saying he would return shortly. He did not appear, however, when wanted and a summons has been issued for his arrest. It is said that he admitted to the coroner having used the wrong acid in the compound.

Returned From Porto Rico.

Louis Darling, of South avenue, who has been in Porto Rico during the past six months, where he was superintendent of a large plantation, returned home yesterday. His many friends gave him a cordial reception and hearty welcome back to Plainfield. Mr. Darling will probably remain at home for some time.

Funeral of Mrs. Cox.

The funeral services of Mrs. Silas Cox, of East Fourth street, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Nolan, at Elizabeth, will be held from St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

A May Festival.

The Advance Circle of the King's Daughters proposes to hold a May festival in the Miller building, corner of Fourth street and Park avenue, Thursday evening, May 23. The affair will be held from 6 until 10 o'clock. Ice cream and cake will be on sale.

Annual Meeting at Newark.

The Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society of New Jersey will hold its annual meeting in the Clinton Avenue Baptist church, Newark, Thursday, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning. A number of local members will attend.

DESTROYED GARDEN.

Was Carefully Kept by Children of Kindergarten Only to be Ruthlessly Destroyed.

The kindergarten of Watchung School has taken much pride in a handsome flower garten which was under the children's immediate care. The little ones were permitted to plant the flower bulbs and shoots and were given practical instruction by the teacher in elementary botany.

When school adjourned Friday the garden was in excellent condition. Monday morning the pupils were much grieved when they discovered that some scoundral had uprooted all the plants and carried them off. The garden was conpletey destroyed and there is no clue to the perpetrator of the act of vandalism.

"JUMBO" LEWIS GUILTY.

MANY CASES TRIED IN COURT AT SOMERVILLE.

Lewis and Other Offenders Will be Sentenced Friday—Court Adjourned Until Tomorrow.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, May 1—In the Somerset Courts yesterday, before Judge Schenck, a verdict for $192.50 was given the plaintiff in the case of Nellie Stiger against Andrew Dominick, the defendant not appearing. W. K. McClure represented the plaintiff and J. P. D. Kirch was the lawyer on the other side.

Frank Smith, indicted for larceny of four pair of trousers and a coat, was acquitted. Horace Codington was his lawyer. Andrew Marsen, Jr., who pleaded not guilty to assaulting his father, retracted and pleaded non-vult. The trial of Antonio Chevadi, indicted for malicious mischief in killing a valuable hunting dog belonging to Wm. Lare, of Bound Brook, resulted in a verdict of guilty. Edward Mack, colored, indicted for larceny at North Plainfield was acquitted. Horace Codington defended him. Jumbo Lewis, colored, of North Plainfield, was tried and found guilty of stealing chickens. Wm. Douglas retracted his plea of not guilty of assault and battery and pleaded non-vult.

There will be no more court until tomorrow, when the Lusardi case will be tried. Odessa Powell laid her pocketbook down and it disappeared with $12. The Lusardi Bros. are accused of having appropriated it. Friday will be sentence day.

ORGAN IN USE.

Necessary Repairs Completed to Pipe Organ at Crescent Avenue Church.

The large pipe organ at the Crescent Avenue church was used for the first time in four weeks Sunday, after undergoing extensive repairs.

Next Sunday will be the new year for the choir connected with the church when one change is to be made. E. S. Fish, who has acceptably filled the position of tenor soloist for some time past, will resign to accept a New York engagement.

DID NOT KNOW OF TAX.

Former Judge Bartine in Town to See About Tax on Elkwood Building.

Former Judge Bartine, of Somerville, was in Plainfield yesterday looking after his interest in the Elkwood building, upon which there is tax owing to the city. Mr. Bartine claims that he never knew that any tax was owing on the building until he read it a few days ago in The Daily Press.

While in the city he called at the office of Collector F. H. Smith for the purpose of paying the tax, but the collector was out and Mr. Bartine will be obliged to come again.

Right Foot Crushed.

A heavy casting fell on the right foot of Leondard Bunn, of Monroe avenue, as he was at work in the Pond Tool Works a few days ago. Several of the toes were badly crushed. On account of a case of diphtheria at his home he was taken to a relative's house on Mariners avenue, where he now is. It is feared two of the crushed toes may have to be amputated.

Address by Miss Mair.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church will meet Friday evening at 8 o'clock, at which time Miss Rachel Mair will make an address. Those who have flag envelopes are requested to bring them to the meeting.

Miss Stevens Improving.

Miss M. L. Stevens, who underwent an operation for appendicits at Muhlenber Hospital lately, is rapidly recovering and is expected to be able to be taken home in a few days.

Building Handsome Home.

The work of erecting a handsome home for Mrs. Lincoln, on West Eighth street, has been started and is now well underway.

MR. MEREDITH CALLED TO HIGHER POSITION

Vice Principal of City High School Chosen Superintendent of Schools at Nutley.

BEEN HERE FOUR YEARS.

FORMALLY CHOSEN AT BOARD MEETING LAST EVENING.

Albert B. Meredith, Vice Principal and Science Instructor at Plainfield High School, Will Leave Plainfield in June to Take Better Position

Albert Barrett Meredith, who has been vice-principal and science instructor at the Plainfield High School for the last four years, will leave Plainfield in June to accept the position of superintendent of schools at Nutley, one of the residential suburbs of Newark. At the meeting of the Board of Education, of Nutley, last evening, the committee on teachers reported favorably on Mr. Meredith's name as the new superintendent, and the Board formally voted to confirm the appointment.

The news of Mr. Meredith's change will come as a general surprise to his many friends in this city. Mr. Meredith came to Plainfield four years ago and has since gained many friends here. He has greatly improved the work in the scientific department of the city High School and has introduced the principles of science into the lower grades. Having had practical training in a military organization, Mr. Meredith has been commandant of the High School cadet battalion and has given instruction in tactics. Considerable experience in college athletics has enabled Mr. Meredith to greatly assist in the advancement of school athletic line. He is, at present, faculty director of the High School athletic association and has coached the various school teams.

Mr. Meredith graduated from the Lynn (Mass.) High School and, after two years of business life, entered the Boston University. After two years there, he went to Wesleyan University, receiving the degree of B. A. after two year's study. He was pitcher on the famous Wesleyan baseball nine of 1894. After graduation he became an instructor in Dr. Hobart's Military School at Sing Sing, N. Y., where he remained until he came to Plainfield.

Mr. Meredith's change will be in the nature of an important promotion. Nutley possesses three eight-room school buildings and plans have just been drawn for a fourth, which be will ready in the fall. The present course of study and general management of the schools is not satisfactory and it will devolve on the new superintendent to entirely revise the old methods. Nutley is exclusively a residential community and possesses much wealth. The Board there is anxious that its schools shall equal any in the State, and is willing to do everything possible to bring about the desired state of affairs.

Mr. Meredith's work in the High School has always been of a very satisfactory nature and Superintendent Maxson is very loth to lose such a valuable assistant. No one has been considered as a successor to Mr. Meredith.

ACCIDENT AT GOLF CLUB.

Horse Ran Away and Threw Out Occupants of Carriage.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, May 1.—A serious runaway accidnt occurred near the Westfield Golf Club grounds Sunday afternoon, when Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tremaine and Mrs. Herbert Proudfit, of this place, were thrown from their carriage and sustained painful injuries. They were out for a pleasure drive and the horse became frightened at an object in the road. Before Mr. Tremain could gain control of his horse, the wagon was upset and the occupants thrown in the roadway. All of the occupants were more or less cut and bruised, but prompt medical aid was secured and they are now doing well.

SACRED CONCERT.

W. E. MacClymont Will Bring Over Choristers of Holy Trinity Church, New York, to Sing.

Wm. E. MacClymont, who has accepted the position of choirmaster of the Church of the Holy Cross, contemplates bringing over from New York in the near future his choristers of Holy Trinity church for the purpose of giving a recital in church music. The sacred entertainment will probably be held in the Church of the Holy Cross.

Towards the latter part of the present month Mr. MacClymont proposes to hold an organ recital at the North Plainfield church, which will be the first of a series which he will give. The other recitals in the services will be held in the fall.

DEFENSE OF SCHOOL BOARD.

L. N. LOVELL, A MEMBER, WRITES CONCERNING THE CHARGES.

Says That Annual Report Had Full Figures and Was Widely Circulated in This City.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Referring to the estimate for school expenses as submitted by the Board of Estimate to the Common Council and the statement that the affairs of the Board of Education are not known by the people generally, I beg to call your attention to the report of the Board for 1900, which has been distributed to very many of our citizens, on page eleven of which report you will find the following figures:

ASSETS.

Sept. 1, 1900, balance in banks	$ 168.13
Martin Act money in City Treasurer's hands and not paid over, net a'mt	6,277.12
Martin Act taxes not yet collected	4,413.04
Due from Lincoln School Building Account	2,782.50
Arrears of taxes not in Martin Act Account	11,693.23
		$ 25,329.02
Sites, buildings, furniture, etc.		232,000.00
Total		$257,329.02

LIABILITIES.

Bonds and coupons due Sept. 1, 1900	$ 2,960.00
Bills payable	100.20
Coupon bonds...$48,000.00
Bond & Mortgage 23,000.00	71,000.00
Surplus assets over liabilities		$162,141.46

You will note that the back taxes amount to more than the floating debt and the true position of the board was shown in that report. The floating debt of the board is the result of failure to receive the taxes apportioned to the Board of Education for several years.

The present condition of the board was fully explained and discussion had by the Board of School Estimate and the estimate as submitted provides for the reduction of the funded debt which provision by the terms of that indebtedness must be made in each year's budget and forms one of the large items of it.

The largest amount of money required is for teachers' salaries and that cannot be reduced except at the expense of the efficiency of the schools or without suffering on the part of the teachers. L. N. Lovell.

FUNERAL OF MRS. HUMMER.

Took Place at Her Home in Annandale—Plainfielders Were Present.

The funeral of Mrs. Mansfield Hummer, of Annandale, whose death was caused by paralysis superinduced by a fall from a coach sometime ago, was held from her home yesterday noon.

Some weeks ago Mrs. Hummer, while riding in a stage from Clinton to Annandale became frightened by the unruly stage horses. She jumped from the coach and struck her head on the ground. Paralysis of the brain set in and Mrs. Hummer died Friday.

Mrs. Hummer was a sister-in-law of L. A. Hummer, of Somerset street, and Charles Hummer, of Linden avenue. Attending the funeral services were Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hummer and Mrs. Louis Hummer.

Funeral of Mrs. Schwartz.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Sophia Schwartz were held from her late residence, 520 West Front street, this morning at 9:30 o'clock and at St. Mary's R. C. church at 10 o'clock. Rev. Father Smyth, rector of the church, officiated. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The interment took place in St Mary's cemetery.

Funeral of Mrs. Hannan.

The funeral services of Mrs. Mary Hannan were held this morning from the late residence, 752 East Second street, at 8:15 o'clock and from St. Mary's R. C. church at 9 o'clock. At the church a requiem mass for the repose of the soul was said by Rev. Father Smyth, the rector. The interment took place in St. Mary's Cemetery.

WON HIS WIFE IN PLAINFIELD.

CORNELIUS W. LOCKWOOD, OF NEWBURGH, WEDDED TO MISS SUTPHEN.

Ceremony Took Place at Bride's Home on LaGrande Avenue, Yesterday Noon—Was a Quiet Affair.

A very pretty wedding took place at noon yesterday at the home of Mrs. Fanny Sutphen, of LaGrande avenue, when her daughter, Miss Margaret Louise Sutphen, became the wife of Cornelius Wygant Lockwood, of Newburgh, N. Y. On account of a recent death in the groom's family, it was a quiet affair, only the immediate relatives of the couple being present.

Rev Dr. W. R. Richards pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, performed the ceremony as the young people stood in the parlor. Behind them was a background of palms and lilies while the remainder of the room was tastefully decorated with cut flowers. The bride, who was unattended, looked very charming in a gown of white organdie. She carried bridal roses. The groom was accompanied by John Sutphen, a brother of the bride.

The ceremony was followed by a luncheon after which Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood left for a wedding trip. They refused to divulge the destination. On its conclusion, they will make their home at Newburgh, where the groom is one of the faculty of a large academy.

The young couple were the recipients of a large number of handsome presents. They consisted for the most part of silver and cut glass articles, diverse in kind as they were numerous.

FENCE EXTENDED.

Will Try to Prevent Any Possibility of Passengers Crossing The Tracks.

Central Railroad workmen yesterday extended the iron fence, separating the east and west bound tracks at the depot, across the Park avenue and Watchung avenue bridges. This effectually blocks passengers from crossing at these points, which has been the custom heretofore.

To make doubly sure that hurrying commuters do not get to their trains other than by the prescribed route, a board fence has been erected along the east abutment of the Park avenue bridge nearest Dunn's grocery store. This has always been a faverite short cut.

CHANGES ON CENTRAL.

One Plainfielder Resigns And Another is Advanced to a Higher Position.

Announcement was made this morning of several important changes among the officials of the Jersey Central Railroad. The resignation of J. S. Chambers, who resides on East Fifth street, from the position of division master mechanic, took effect today. His successor is J. McGie, formerly master mechanic of the Great Northern Railway at Great Falls, Mont. He will reside at Elizabeth.

B. O. Cumback, of East Fifth street, who has been general foreman of the company machine shops at Elizabethport, has been promoted to superintendent of shops, a new office. He will have charge of the big car and machine shops now being built at Elizabethport.

DEATH OF JOSEPH C. OHL.

Died From Pneumonia Caused by Exposure While Out Snipe Shooting.

Word has been received from Camden telling of the death of Joseph C. Ohl, aged fifty-three years, son of Henry S. and Maria Ohl, and a brother of Percy Ohl. Death was due to pneumonia. He had been ill only a few days. He had been snipe shooting and allowed wet clothing to remain on him too long.

Joseph Ohl was very well-known in this city among the sporting fraternity, and many will regret to learn of his sudden death. The funeral was strictly private, but many of Mr. Ohl's friends and relatives attended.

Interesting Meeting of Primary Union.

A very interesting meeting of the Primary and Junior Sunday-school Teachers' Union was held last Monday afternoon, when Miss Baldwin, of Philadelphia, who is county superintendent of the Union, was present and told much concerning the work. She also taught the Sunday-school lesson for next Sunday.

Dime Social.

Friendship Lodge, D. of R., will hold a dime social at the residence of Mrs. John Rittenhouse, of New street, Thursday evening. The members are preparing an excellent programme for the entertainment of their guests.

Summer Uniforms For Letter Carriers.

The letter carries today donned their summer uniforms and hats in anticipation of warmer weather.

CLEVERLY PICTURED BY THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

LARGE AUDIENCE PRESENT.

PROGRAMME CONCLUDED WITH ALLEGORY "THE WORLD FOR CHRIST."

Third of a Series of Entertainments for Members of Sunday School of Park Avenue Baptist Church—It May be Repeated.

A large audience gathered at the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening, to enjoy the very excellent entertainment given under the auspices of the Sunday-school. This was the third in a series, all of which are free to the members. This feature of the Sunday-school work is greatly enjoyed by the members and teachers, and has resulted in good to the school in various ways.

Superintendent George E. Hall presided at the entertainment last evening and he was ably assisted by the following committee that arranged the programme: Joseph M. Hawkins, chairman; Miss Bessie Giles, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, E. Frank Vail and Aaron D. Thompson, Jr. The entertainment was such a success that several have requested its repetition. The artistic features were worthy of special mention.

The entertainment consisted of pictures from life, the first of which was "Rock of Ages," represented by Miss Emily Runyon. The hymn was sung by Miss Elsie Giles. "The Three Graces" were the Misses Elsie Giles, Essie Thompson and Lillian Richardson, and Harold Smalley played "The Wayside Chapel" on the piano. "Diana" was represented by Miss Mary Giles, and "The Sculptor's Dream," by Miss Bessie Giles and S. Arthur Krom. Then followed a soprano solo, "Little Black Me," by Miss Elsie Giles.

"Interrupted tete-a-tete" was given by Miss Henrietta Cuming and Aaron D. Thompson, Jr., in three scenes, during which there was the rendition of popular selections on the piano by Harold Smalley. "Christmas Eve" was given by Miss Jennie Giles, while Miss Elsie Giles sang "Home, Sweet Home." Miss Lizzie VanWinkle and Harry Cuming represented "Coming Thro' the Rye." The other representations were as follows: "Outside the Firing Lines," Herbert Brokaw and Clinton Hall; "Uncle Tom and Eva," Joseph M. Hawkins and Miss Marjorie Brown. This part of the programme concluded with a vocal solo by Miss Elsie Giles.

Part second of the programme was devoted to an allegory "The World for Christ." The characters were "Liberty," Miss Elsie Giles; "Little Columbia," Miss Arline Brown; soldiers, Herbert Brokaw, Harry Thompson and Ernest Whitney. Fourteen foreign countries were represented. The various parts were well taken and very instructive.

The final scene of the allegory represented the fourteen foreign countries and the soldiers grouped about "Liberty," who was in the centre. "Little Columbia" was in a conspicuous position, holding aloft the Bible. The American flag was waved by one of the soldiers. All united in singing "Neath the Banner of the Cross." The large white cross was stationed directly behind "Liberty" and was slowly raised on high as they sang.

Arbor Day Entertainment.

A brief entertainment consisting of recitations and songs, appropriate for Arbor Day, will be given by the pupils of the Irving school, Friday morning at 9 o'clock. The parents and friends of the pupils are cordially invited to be present and to visit the different grades. Attention is invited to the pictures and other works of arts recently placed in the assembly room of the building.

Claims Wages Are Due Him.

Charles Willis, of North Plainfield, has brought suit against the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, claiming $30 due him as wages. The case will be tried in Justice Huff's court Wednesday morning, May 8, at 10 o'clock. Francis J. Blatz will represent Mr. Willis.

Annual Mission Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Elizabeth District of the M. E. church will be held Thursday at Roselle, with morning, afternoon and evening sessions. A number of members from this city will attend.

Low-Rate Summer Tours to the Pacific Coast and Mountains of the Canadian Northwest, via the Pennsylvania Railroad.

In view of the extremely low rates authorized by the various transcontinental lines on account of the International Conference of the Epworth League at SanFrancisco in July next, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces a thirty-day tour across the continent, leaving New York, Newark, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and other stations on its lines east of Pittsburg, on Monday, July 8, returning to New York Tuesday, August 6.

The route will include stops at all the really important points for rest and sightseeing, among them being Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Colorado Springs, Glenwood Springs (with a daylight ride through the Rocky Mountains, including the Royal Gorge and Grand Canon of the Arkansas), and at Salt Lake City, arriving at SanFrancisco 10 a. m., Tuesday, July 16, before the Convention opens. Six days will be allotted to SanFrancisco, for which time no hotel accommodations or other features will be included in the tickets. Leaving SanFrancisco Monday morning, July 22, Monterey, Santa Barbara, and LosAngeles will be visited, all traveling over the new Coast Line of the Southern Pacific Company being done by daylight, in order to view what is reputed to be the most attractive scenery in California. Leaving LosAngeles, San Jose will be visited, thence Portland, with two days' stop, after which will come the crowning feature of the tour, the journey homeward via the Canadian Pacific Railway through the unrivaled mountains of British Columbia.

The schedule over the Canadian Pacific Railway will be prepared with especial care, and the train sidetracked at night where necessary, in order that no part of this delightful feature may be missed by night traveling. This in itself is a rare opportunity. In addition, stops will be made at Banff Hot Springs and St. Paul.

The tourists will travel in the highest grade of Pullman equipment, and the special train will be composed of vestibuled dining car, sleeping cars and an observation car. The latter car will be similar to those used on the famous Pennsylvania Limited.

With the exception of the time devoted to San Francisco, passengers will be located on the special train during the entire tour. Breakfast, luncheon and dinner will be provided in the dining car while en route and when side-tracked at the various places visited. Our patrons will therefore avoid the expense of high-priced hostelries, the hurry and annoyance of meal stations, and the unsatisfactory accommodations afforded by inferior hotels.

A thoroughly experienced Tourist Agent and a Chaperon will accompany the party, and in fact the entire tour will be conducted under the same careful management that has made the "Pennsylvania Tours" world famous.

The total rate for entire trip as outlined above, covering one double berth and all meals in dining car from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Harrisburg, Altoona, and points on the Pennsylvania Railroad east of Pittsburg, will be $188.50; two persons in a berth, each $168.50.

Rate, going with the main party, with Pullman berth and meals up to arrival at San Francisco, returning from San Francisco independently by any route, with transportation only on return trip, $118.10, two persons in a berth, each $108.10.

Rate, transportation, Pullman berth, and meals on special train to SanFrancisco, with transportation only returning independently via Portland and Northern Pacific Railway, or Canadian Pacific Railway and St. Paul, until August 31, $127.10; two in a berth, each $117.10. This route will especially appeal to those who desire to visit Yellowstone Park on their return journey. The tickets admit of stop-over at Livingston, at which point a ticket covering five and one-half days' hotel accommodations, with stage transportation through Yellowstone Park, may be purchased for $49.50.

Rate, covering same as preceding trip to SanFrancisco with transportation only returning independently via LosAngeles, SanFrancisco, Portland, and Canadian Pacific or Northern Pacific and St. Paul, $131.60; two in a berth, each $121.60.

Rates from Pittsburg, $5 less than above figures.

For the information of those who desire to travel independently after arrival at SanFrancisco, it should be noted that tickets permit stop-off within limit of August 31, at and west of Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Col., and west of St. Paul. Stop-over will be allowed until August 31, at Niagara Falls and Buffalo, for Pan-American Exposition, on tickets reading through those points.

Descriptive booklet will shortly be issued, giving the schedule and further details. Diagrams are now open, and as the number who can be accommodated will be strictly limited, names should be registered immediately.

LITERARY.

A powerful chapter from one of the most remarkable of recorded human experiences, appears in McClure's Magazine for May—Captain Alfred Dreyfus's own story of his arrest, degradation and transportation to Devil's Isle. To this story is added a portion of the diary kept by Dreyfus on the island, for his wife, and referred to so often and so mysterious in the Rennes trial, but never made published. The book, from which this remarkable document is taken, containing the story of Dreyfus's entire five years of suffering and imprisonment, is to be published by McClure, Phillips & Co. in May. c

No one will fail to find pleasant, profitable diversion in the May Ladies' Home Journal. Its thirty and more contributors cover a wide range of interesting subjects. "When John C. Calhoun Went a-Wooing," the delightful romance of the great statesman, is no less engrossing than "The Brilliant Social Reign of Harriet Lane" in the White House, or than Clara Morris' "Frank Sen," the love tale of a little Japanese girl acrobat. There are three architectural articles, and the usual contributions concerning work in and about the home, fashions, etc. The half a dozen or more notable pictorial features include "In the Fold," the best photograph of the twenty-seven thousand submitted in the Journal's contest; a page reproduction of W. L. Taylor's painting, "President Lincoln's Call for Volunteers," and "A Glimpse of Picturesque Canada." By The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar a year; ten cents a copy. c

For men "The Trust Builders," in the May number of Leslie's Magazine, is the name of an article of extraordinary interest. It is based upon the personnel of the management of the mightiest contemporary commercial enterprises.

The May installation of the "Road to Frontenac," is an exciting one, and shows the full dramatic power and charm of the story. "When Love Was Arbiter," is a capital story of Jacobite days, by William McLeod Raine, and we wish to call especial attention to "How the Tobacco Trust was Bled," a business story by S. R. Nelson, that gives a very illuminating idea of modern business methods. "Red and White," by W. R. Lighton is a humorous story of a frontier adventure, and "The Invisible House," by Mrs. Ella W. Peattie, is one of the prettiest tales of sentiment we have seen in years.

Marginalia appears at its best.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by L. W. Randolph. Only 50 cents.

—Edward Applegate, a former resident of this city, has removed from Perth Amboy to Clinton avenue.

—Mr. W. J. Baxter, of North Brook, N. C., says he suffered with piles for fifteen years. He tried many remedies with no results until he used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve and that quickly cured him. L. W. Randolph.

Thomas Callahan, of Richmond street, is constantly improving from a recent injury which necessitated the amputation of a leg.

Miss Mary E. Beerbower, who is at the hospital under treatment, will be removed to the Hotel Kensington Friday of this week.

The Misses Startup, of Middletown, N. Y., have returned home after a pleasant visit with their brother, W. C. Startup, of Westervelt avenue.

Miss Margaret Cramer, a trained nurse, who has been taking a finishing course in her studies in New York, returned to Plainfield today. She will resume duty at Muhlenberg Hospital.

—J. A. Todd, of South Second street, has removed to 172 Duer street.

—"Our little girl was unconscious from strangulation during a sudden and terrible attack of croup. I quickly secured a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure, giving her three doses. The croup was mastered and our little darling speedily recovered." So writes A. L. Spafford, Chester, Mich. L. W. Randolph.

WEDDED IN SAN JUAN.

Daughter of General Davis Married to Cashier Mumford.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 1.—Miss Carmen Davis, daughter of Brigadier General George W. Davis, former governor general of Porto Rico and now provost marshal at Manila, was married at noon yesterday to Mr. Philip Mumford, cashier in the banking office of De Ford & Co. The ceremony took place at the episcopal residence, the Very Rev. James H. Blenk, bishop of Porto Rico, officiating. Only a few intimate friends were present.

In the afternoon a brilliant reception was given at the Davis mansion, and the newly wedded couple left for the United States on the steamer Ponce. The honeymoon will last a month.

The other members of the Davis family will leave San Juan on the next transport to join General Davis in Manila.

Hearing on Bridge Bill.

ALBANY, May 1.—It was after 12:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon before Governor Odell opened the hearing in the executive chamber on Senator Raines' New York and New Jersey bridge bill, which its opponents say not only gives the bridge company a terminal elevated railroad on West street, but also allows the bridge company to circle the shore front of the island with an elevated road. Those for and against the bill reached the executive chamber about noon, many coming up on the Empire State express. Of course Senator Raines was present. Not in years has so much interest been shown in a hearing before the governor on a bill awaiting executive action, nor have so many persons crowded the executive chamber.

Kidnapers Make an Offer.

OMAHA, May 1.—An agent of the kidnapers has made a proposition to Edward A. Cudahy to return $21,000 of the money paid for his son's ransom, demanding in return a withdrawal of the $25,000 reward and an abandonment of the determination to punish the criminals. The proposition came in a letter from Elgin, Ills., and Mr. Cudahy is convinced of its authenticity. He went to Chicago ten days ago because of it, being summoned there by his brother in response to overtures that had been made. He refused to consider it for a minute and declares his unchanged resolve to prosecute to the end the search for the men who stole his boy.

To Shorten the B. and O. Line.

CUMBERLAND, Md., May 1.—There is now before the directors of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad a project to shorten the line about eight miles between Cumberland and Baltimore by means of two tunnels and several bridges over the Potomac river between Bairds and Pawpaw. The improvement will cost $2,000,000, and it is believed it will be ordered.

Armor Tested.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—An 11 inch harveyized armor plate, representing 180 tons of the armor for the monitor Florida, was tested with good results at the Indian Head proving grounds. Three shots were fired at a velocity of 1,800 to 1,900 foot seconds without materially injuring the plate.

Train Wreck Near Campbell Hall.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 1.—A coal train on the Lehigh and New England railroad, running at a high rate of speed, ran into an open switch near Campbell Hall. Several cars were wrecked, the locomotive partly buried in the mud and the fireman injured.

No Strike Among French Miners.

Cardinal Elect Martinelli Receives Official Emblem.

PAPAL GUARD MAKES PRESENTATION

Brief and Simple Ceremony Performed In Washington—Taking of the Oath Deferred Until Later In the Week.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Cardinal Elect Martinelli last night received from the hands of a member of the papal guard of Pope Leo XIII, Count Stanislaus Colacicchi, who had just arrived from Rome, the consistorial letter formally advising him of his elevation to the cardinalate and the red zuchetto emblematic of that high office. The ceremony, which was brief and simple, occurred at the papal legation at 6 o'clock last evening in the presence of a number of church dignitaries.

Count Colacicchi arrived in New York in the morning and was met in New York by Dr. Rooker, secretary of the legation here, and a delegation of the clergy from New York and Brooklyn, who escorted him to Washington. The party arrived here shortly before 6 o'clock and were driven to the papal legation, where preparations had been made for the ceremony to occur as soon as the papal representative arrived.

Putting aside his cloak, Count Colacicchi stepped into the parlor in the brilliant full uniform of the famous guard to which he belongs, with sword at his side and spurs clanking from his heavy military boots. In his hand he carried two large letters and a leathern case inclosing the zuchetto. Saluting the cardinal elect, Count Colacicchi handed him one of the letters, which was read aloud, and proved to be the credentials of the official messenger. Then the second letter was handed to the cardinal elect, who ran through it and handed it to Bishop Keiley of Savannah to be read. It was from Cardinal Rampollo, dated April 15, and was as follows:

"In the secret consistory of this morning his holiness deigned to elevate to the sublime dignity of the cardinalate Mgr. Sebastian Martinelli. This gracious and sovereign favor is brought to the notice of your eminence for your knowledge and guidance."

When the letter had been read, Count Colacicchi opened the small red morocco case and took therefrom a red silken zuchetto, or cardinal's skullcap. Dr. Conaty removed the purple cap from the head of Mgr. Martinelli, and the latter placed the red cap of high office in its stead.

Dr. Rooker was the first to congratulate Cardinal Martinelli on his elevation and was followed by Dr. Marchetti, the ablegate, and many others present. The cardinal then invited his guests to join him at dinner. It was understood that the formalities of taking the oath would follow the ceremony, but this was deferred until later in the week.

Work on the Constitution.

BRISTOL, R. I., May 1.—John Hyslop, the New York Yacht club measurer, came from New York yesterday to measure two new racing sloops of the 21 foot class, named Rogue and Oonagh, and incidentally viewed the Constitution in the south shop. The work of burnishing the plating with emery in the hands of the seamen is practically completed. The top side plates show very bright indeed. Some work is still going on from the staging aft in finishing up the rudder. Captain Terry and his men are overhauling the timbers of the railway upon which the launch is to take place and will finish the job by Monday next. Material of steel for timbers of racing yachts, two Oregon pine spars in the rough and a lot of small sticks of tamarack for spars arrived here yesterday.

Big Coal Lands Deal.

PITTSBURG, May 1.—Pittsburg and Carnegie business men have purchased 1,900 acres of Washington county coal property, which they will develop independently of the existing coal companies. At first the coal will be sold in the markets, but it is planned ultimately to erect an extensive coking plant to convert a large part of the product. About $300,000 is being invested to start the initial operations of the new coal syndicate, which will apply for a Pennsylvania charter next week under the name of the Sterner Coal and Coke company. The coal property purchased lies near Midway Station, on the Panhandle railroad, and a tract of 700 acres included extends along the Chartiers branch of the Panhandle.

Admiral Rodgers at Colombo.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Admiral Rodgers, aboard his flagship, the New York, has cabled the navy department the announcement of his arrival at Colombo. The collier Alexander has left Santa Lucia for Montevideo, Uruguay. The Alexander has 5,000 tons of coal aboard to stock the new American coaling station at Pichalinqui, on the west coast of Mexico. She must make the long and perilous voyage around Cape Horn and up the west coast of South America.

New Yale Club Opened.

NEW YORK, May 1.—One day before the time promised the doors of the new Yale club on West Forty-fourth street have been opened. It is said to be the finest college club building in the country. Construction was begun only seven months ago. It has 11 stories and a roof garden besides. In one of the private dining rooms of the building the council of the institution held a jubilee dinner.

Bread and Work Promised.

LEMBERG, Galicia, May 1.—The governor and burgomaster of this city have promised that relief works will be started. Bread was distributed to the unemployed. As cabled from Lemberg Monday, a riotous mob of the city's unemployed paraded the streets, breaking shop windows, raiding the bread booths at the market place and shouting, "Give us bread or work!"

Italian Government Not to Interfere.

ROME, May 1.—Signor Giovanna Giolitti, the Italian minister of the interior, announced yesterday in the senate that the government would not interfere in the present strikes, as they constituted a movement to improve economic conditions. Any mistake made by the government might have very serious consequences.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; warmer; variable winds.

SECOND DAY'S TRIP.

President Speaks In Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi.

A HALT FOR THE NIGHT AT MEMPHIS.

Pleasure Journey Performed Without an Untoward Incident—A Basket of Trout and a Loving Cup For Mrs. McKinley.

MEMPHIS, May 1.—At 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon the train bearing President McKinley and party arrived at the Central depot promptly on schedule time. The greeting accorded the distinguished arrivals was very enthusiastic. The day's journey had been successfully performed, and not a break occurred to mar the pleasure of the trip.

A committee headed by Senator Carmack met the train at Corinth and escorted the party to this city. A national salute of 21 guns signaled the approach to the city. At the station Governor McMillin and others met the party. A military parade, with a company of grizzled Confederate veterans in their old uniforms acting as the guard of honor, escorted the party in carriages through the principal streets and around the custom house, whence a view of the Mississippi, now almost overflowing on the Arkansas side, was obtained, to Court square. The city was elaborately decorated with flags and bunting. Not a residence or business house seemed to have escaped from the desire to decorate in honor of the president's coming. Banners were stretched across the streets bearing such inscriptions as, "Mr. President, the City Is Yours," "The Nation's President," etc.

The cheering through which the procession passed was tremendous at points along the route. In Court square, where the open air reception occurred, the platform was so hemmed around with roses and other blossoms as to make it a flower show. Over 10,000 people were packed into the square when the president was introduced by Mayor Williams. In response to the cheers which greeted him the president made the first really notable speech of his trip.

His theme was the resistless power of a great united people and was delivered in his best vein.

At Corinth, Miss., an arch of cedar spanned the track, and there was a profusion of flags. The town has about 2,500 inhabitants, and every man, woman and child seemed to be at the station. The crowd about the president's car was so dense that by Mr. McKinley's direction several of the children who were in danger of being crushed were lifted over the rail to the platform. Many of the old Confederate veterans fought for the honor of grasping the president's hand.

The mayor of Sheffield, a thriving manufacturing town of 4,000 situated on the banks of the Tennessee a mile away, in a neat patriotic speech presented the president with a handsome floral piece. As the president was about to begin his remarks there were cries of "Put the flags down!" referring to the flags held by the children who were near the car, at which the president exclaimed, "Never lower that!" When the cheering had subsided, he spoke briefly.

Secretary Wilson also spoke of the agricultural progress of the state and aroused great enthusiasm when he spoke of the fact that two years ago when the cotton crop was short and it was worth millions the administration notified the people, so that the foreign speculators did not get the millions, but the producers did.

President McKinley is popular at Huntsville, in the region where General Joe Wheeler is a most distinguished citizen and where Rrepresentative Richardson of Alabama, General Wheeler's successor in congress, has often preached the doctrine of industrial progressiveness. Mr. Richardson presented the president to a large crowd at the station, and Mr. McKinley responded to an unusually cordial demonstration.

Just as the train was leaving Decatur an old man handed to Mrs. McKinley a basket of brook trout, and two of her old friends who formerly lived in Canton, O., presented a silver loving cup, the gift of the ladies of Decatur.

There are about 3,000 inhabitants in this town, and apparently every man, woman and child was at the station when the train arrived. Mr. McKinley made one of his graceful speeches, suiting his words, as usual, to the occasion.

The president rose early yesterday morning, thoroughly refreshed by his night's rest. The train left Bristol and crossed the Tennessee boundary at 7 o'clock for the dip into the northern part of Alabama and Mississippi, visits being scheduled for Huntsville, Decatur and Tuscumbia, Ala., and Corinth, Miss., on the way to Memphis. The day dawned as brightly in these states as it did in Virginia Monday, and the president and all the members of his party were in high spirits.

Plot Against the Czar.

BERLIN, May 1.—The Lokal Anzeiger prints a dispatch from Breslau, Silesia, which says: "An extensive nihilistic plot has been discovered in Russian Poland. Six hundred arrests were made, of which number 200 were transported by special train to the Warsaw citadel. The towns of Sosnovice, Sielce and Dombrowa have been occupied by two companies of Cossacks. Secret correspondence was discovered at Sielce by which the plot was revealed."

Higginson Takes Command.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Rear Admiral Norman H. Farquhar this morning relinquished his place as commander of the north Atlantic squadron, now at the Brooklyn navy yard, to become chairman of the lighthouse board of the United States navy. Rear Admiral Francis J. Higginson will be the new commander of the squadron, and ceremonies incident to the transfer of the command were held on board the Kearsarge.

Railway Shops Burned.

SAVANNAH, May 1.—The pattern shops of the Plant railway system have been destroyed by fire. In the shops were patterns that had been saved for 40 years and many of which can be duplicated only with extreme difficulty. All were lost, together with a lot of valuable rosewood and mahogany. The cost of the shops was about $20,000.

Fire at Hampton, Va.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., May 1.—Several large buildings in the business center of Hampton, including a public school, were burned last evening. Loss not yet ascertained.

ROOSEVELT IN BOSTON.

Vice President the Guest of the Home Market Club.

BOSTON, May 1.—An imposing array of speakers, headed by Vice President Theodore Roosevelt, held the attention of 1,600 members of the Home Market club, the most widely known Republican organization of New England, at its twelfth annual dinner in Mechanics' hall last night. Seated at the great tables were representative manufacturers, merchants and professional men from five of the six New England states.

Vice President Roosevelt was seated on the right of the president of the club, George A. Draper of Hopedale. The others on the right of President Draper were Senator George F. Hoar, Hon. Joseph H. Manley of Augusta, Me.; Right Rev. William Lawrence, D. D., Episcopal bishop of Massachusetts; Hon. William F. Draper of Hopedale, former embassador to Italy; Rear Admiral William T. Sampson and Congressmen Greene and Roberts.

To the left of Mr. Draper were Lieutenant Governor John L. Bates, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, General Curtis Guild, Jr., of Boston, Hon. George H. Lyman, collector of the port of Boston, and United States Senator Henry E. Burnham of Manchester, N. H.

After the especial guest of the evening, Vice President Roosevelt, the principal speakers of the evening were Senators Hoar and Lodge and General Guild.

Previous to the dinner a reception was held in honor of Mr. Roosevelt, lasting from 4:30 to nearly 6 o'clock.

Railway Men Want Nine Hour Day.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 1.—Machinists, boiler makers, blacksmiths, carbuilders and laborers from all the shops in Scranton and all along the lines of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have presented a petition to their employers for the inauguration of a nine hour day at the same rate of wages that now obtain for ten hours. Invitations were sent to the officers of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western and the other companies to be present at a meeting in the Lyceum theater to receive the petition from the assembled delegates of all the petitioning unions. Only a few officers of the smaller companies responded, but the petition was formally presented and notice publicly given that an answer would be expected within ten days. What the men will do in case a favorable answer is not received was not intimated.

The Eastman Trial.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 1.—The pendulum of evidence in the Eastman murder trial yesterday swung slightly over to the government's side of the case through a favorable decision in the morning and some expert testimony late in the afternoon tending to show that the bullet taken from Grogan's body came from the center fire revolver, although Eastman in his many statements said that the accident took place while he had an old rim fire revolver in his hands. Members of Grogan's family testified that Eastman had said that he was not on good terms with Grogan. The expert testimony offered on the composition of the rim fire and center fire cartridges was of interest, as Professor Wood found tin in the fragment of bullet taken from Grogan's body, which corresponded with the composition of the center fire bullet, while the rim fire bullet was of pure lead.

Women Playing Whist.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Five hundred women are concentrating their energies upon the game of whist at Sherry's, Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street, where the Women's National Whist league will be in session until Friday night, when the contest will close. Eight hundred names were enrolled for this, the fourth congress of the league. Nearly every state in the Union is represented in this whist league. The prizes to be awarded have for the most part been donated by the different clubs in the league, while several of the handsomest are the gifts of individual members.

Governor Voorhees' Illness.

TRENTON, May 1.—Governor Voorhees did not come to Trenton yesterday as is usual with him on Tuesday. He is still quite ill at his home in Elizabeth. Executive Clerk Fox went to Elizabeth with some papers, but the governor was not in condition to give them consideration. He is in the hands of his physicians and a trained nurse. He had two chills and a high fever and spent a very restless night. The governor was taken ill at his office last Saturday.

The Druggist Recommends
LAXAKOLA
The Great Tonic Laxative, as the One Great Family Remedy for All Stomach Ills.

Skin Blotches Muddy, Sallow Complexions Can Only Be Cured by Purifying the Blood. Laxakola Does It.

Blotched, sallow, unwholesome and muddy skin, with its consequent mortification, often leading to morbid seclusion, shows that your blood is bad. The only way to clear the complexion and restore it to its normal healthy, velvety condition is to clean out the entire system, purify the blood and remove the causes. Laxakola does it, as well as acting directly on the pores and assisting the perspiratory glands to throw off impurities.

Constipation Can Be Surely, Quickly and Permanently Cured. Laxakola Does It.

You have a full feeling, with dizziness, headache, heartburn, palpitation, foul breath and bad taste, the stomach becomes distended, the eyes heavy and yellow, and the skin pale, sallow, muddy and blotched, accompanied by loss of sleep, appetite and vitality. Laxakola at once relieves and speedily cures these by toning up the stomach, increasing the flow of gastric juice, resulting in a return to the natural feeling of good health.

For the Children Children Die from Stomach Diseases which Laxakola will Speedily Cure.

It is a dangerous thing to give little babies violent remedies that rack and rend their little bodies. DON'T DO IT—Give them Laxakola. For constipation, coated tongue, simple colds and fevers it is invaluable. It is the best and most effective laxative for children. BEST because it is safe and made entirely of harmless ingredients. BEST because it is non-irritating and never gripes or causes pain or irritation. BEST because it is sure and never fails. BEST because "Children like it and ask for it."

At druggists, 25c. and 50c., or free sample of THE LAXAKOLA CO., 132 Nassau Street, N. Y., or 356 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

NORTH LUZON AT PEACE.

General Tinio, With His Entire Command, Surrenders.

MANILA, May 1.—The rebel general Tinio, with his entire command, has surrendered to Captain Fred V. Krug of the Twentieth infantry at Sinait, La Infanta province, Luzon. This completes the general pacification of north Luzon.

General Baldomero, formerly secretary of war under Aguinaldo, and Colonel Pedro Aguinaldo, cousin of the former rebel chieftain, and Colonel Nactagal and 12 other officers surrendered to Colonel Baldwin at San Francisco de Malabon, province of Cavite, and took the oath of allegiance to the United States. There was a great popular demonstration and a parade, while Aguinaldo's band played popular airs.

Colonels Callao and Kalibac, two of General Malivar's best officers, surrendered to Colonel Kline at Lipa, Batangas province, on Sunday with 23 officers and 108 men, with 86 rifles.

Major Smith, accompanied by the Filipino colonel Abad, who surrendered to him some time ago and promised to use his influence in inducing other rebels to come in, has returned from a tour of the island of Marinduque. They received the surrenders of four officers and 52 men, with their arms, at Torrijos and Santa Cruz. This ends the insurrection on the island of Marinduque.

The New Naval Arch.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The trustees of the Naval Arch association have approved the general design for the arch submitted by Ernest Flagg and referred it to their finance committee, with instructions to organize at once for the collection of funds. Simultaneously the design goes to the municipal art commission. The architect's estimate now fixes the cost of the arch, including its statuary, at $830,000. The approaches, beacons, sea wall and monuments thereon will cost about $300,000 additional. A model of the arch in miniature is being prepared and will be placed on exhibition in about two weeks. The arch will be 125 feet wide and 125 feet high up to the cornice. The "Victory" and "Sea Horse" groups will add 35 feet more to the height. The entire structure will be of white marble, with the exception of the base, which will be of granite. On each side of the pier will be colossal groups typifying naval ideas. On the frieze and above will appear the arms of the United States, of the state and the city of New York, of the navy and of the United States Naval academy. A historical record of the battles of the navy and a tablet with the names of the donors and builders will be placed inside the area.

A Battle In a Restaurant.

ALGIERS, May 1.—M. Max Regis, the anti-Semite mayor of Algiers, and the editor of La Revanche du Peuple, each of whom was accompanied by friends, had a battle in an Algiers restaurant yesterday over statements which M. Regis had circulated regarding the editor. The furniture of the restaurant was hurled about, and then pistols and knives were used. M. Regis was hit in the head by two bullets, and his brother and two friends were also shot, none of them, however, seriously. One combatant was stabbed twice and is believed to be dying. Various noncombatants who were dining in the restaurant at the time were injured.

New Pier at San Juan Burned.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 1.—The new $150,000 pier here caught fire yesterday afternoon and was totally destroyed in half an hour. A large stock of sugar and rum was lost in the fire. The value and quantity of the goods destroyed are not known. The fire continues to rage and threatens to spread to the stores of the custom house. Lives may have been lost, but this is not yet ascertained. The fire started 15 minutes after the steamship Ponce sailed for New York.

Electric Railway Incorporated.

LYONS, N. Y., May 1.—The Macedon Electric Railway company was incorporated here with a capital of $30,000 to connect the village of Macedon with the Central Hudson and West Shore railroads, a distance of three miles. The stockholders are Wayne county capitalists, with the help of Fairport and Rochester citizens. The same parties are trying to put through an electric road from Syracuse to Rochester with connections to several villages.

D. A. R. Members Visit West Point.

WEST POINT, May 1.—About 40 members of Martha Washington chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of New York city paid the Military academy a visit yesterday afternoon. They lunched at the West Point hotel and during the afternoon were shown about the post and through the different buildings by courtesy of the superintendent, Colonel Mills. At 4 o'clock the party witnessed inspection and review on the plains by the battalion of cadets.

Ball Player Killed.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 1.—Thomas G. Esterbrook, the baseball player of New Brighton, N. Y., jumped from the window of a train near Tuxedo yesterday afternoon while he was being conveyed to the Middletown State hospital in charge of his brother and an attendant. He was brought to Thrall hospital here, where he died later.

Halifax to Be a Great Naval Station.

HALIFAX, May 1.—Halifax will soon cease to be a military station and pass exclusively under the control of the British admiralty. It is now proposed to make it one of the greatest naval stations in the world, and in addition to the men of the fleet there will be stationed a reserve consisting of about 2,000 soldiers and marines.

Wife Accused of Poisoning.

BRANTFORD, Ontario, May 1.—Charles White died very suddenly on April 14, with symptoms of poisoning. The coroner's jury has brought in a verdict to the effect that the deceased had been poisoned with strychnine administered by his wife. Mrs. White was arrested and placed in jail.

From Chicago to Europe.

CHICAGO, May 1.—The Northman, the second of Chicago's transatlantic line to sail for Europe, left here yesterday, bound for Hamburg. The round trip is expected to take 50 days.

Forest Fires In Maryland.

CUMBERLAND, Md., May 1.—Forest fires are raging in three directions on the mountains just east of here. The one on Warrior mountain is doing much damage.

PREPARING TO LEAVE

French Commander to Withdraw to Tien-tsin.

IMMEDIATE REDUCTION OF FORCE.

Each of the Powers to Be Represented In Garrisons at Tien-tsin and Shan-hai-kwan by Three Hundred Men.

PEKING, May 1.—General Voyron, commander of the French forces, is about leaving Peking for Tien-tsin. He will make his headquarters there and supervise the reduction of the French troops, who will be gradually withdrawn in accordance with the wishes of the ministers of the powers, who desire that a partial reduction of the foreign troops should be begun immediately.

Yesterday Count von Waldersee sent the reply of the generals to the views of the ministers regarding the military questions discussed by the generals in conference. The reply agrees in the main with the suggestions submitted by the ministers and names 300 as the number of troops by which each of the powers shall be represented in the garrisons at Tien-tsin and Shan-hai-kwan.

At their meeting today the ministers will receive the report of the special commission that has been investigating Chinese finances.

Unrest In China.

LONDON, May 1.—"It is reported that the Japanese government has reserved a subsidized mail steamer for its own use," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Morning Post. "This suggests that Japan is preparing for emergencies. The desperate state of the private finances of Japan is said to be making the war propaganda popular. According to opinion in Shanghai an outbreak of hostilities would be the signal for a rising throughout China." "Everywhere among the Chinese there is a feeling of unrest," says a dispatch to The Standard from Tien-tsin. "There is no doubt that petty attacks on foreigners continue, and the statement is correct that bodies of well armed Chinese are secretly drilling. Chinese picked troops are reported in strength in the vicinity of Pao-ting-fu. The situation demands the retention of the foreign troops for the present."

Dr. Morrison, wiring to The Times from Peking April 29, protests that Count von Waldersee's policy of punitive expeditions has "thrown the greater part of the province of Chi-li into anarchy and disorder." "This is so complete," he says, "that the neighborhood of Peking is now more unsafe for foreigners than at any previous time since the occupation began. The trade with the interior is crippled. The only armed Chinese are robbers and Boxers. Restitution to the Chinese of territorial jurisdiction has become a paramount need."

After Chaffee's Army.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The transport fleet at Manila, which is to be used in transporting General Chaffee's army from China to the Philippines, will leave Manila today for Taku unless some change has been made in the prearranged programme of which the war department has not been advised. There are 1,600 soldiers and about 1,000 horses and mules to be transferred from China to the Philippines, together with a complete field outfit. The transports Indiana and Sumner are to transport the troops and the transports Lenox and Pakling the horses and transportation and field equipment. It is expected that these vessels will be sufficient to move General Chaffee's entire army in one trip.

Rumored Sale of Steamship Company

NEW YORK, May 1.—The Herald says: "Reports having been circulated to the effect that the Maine Steamship company, with a line of boats plying between New York city and Portland, had been purchased by J. P. Morgan and his associates and that a change of control had been arranged for yesterday in New York city insuring a 'community of interests' in connection with the operations of the Leyland line and the Atlantic Transport company, Mr. Horatio Hall, representing the Maine Steamship company, said: 'I will neither affirm nor deny any statements which may be made regarding the Maine Steamship company. I am the only man in the country who can give out the desired information, and I absolutely decline to be interviewed at this time."

Celebrated the Steamer's Arrival.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The arrival of the steamship Grosser Kurfurst of the North German Lloyd line at Hoboken last evening was made the occasion of an enthusiastic welcome, this steamship being the first to arrive at the new piers which were constructed to replace the ones burned last June. The welcome of the evening was preliminary, as the official welcome by the city was to be celebrated Thursday evening. The citizens, however, decorated the streets in the vicinity of the piers with flags and bunting, while the business houses displayed the same emblems and many bands of music played patriotic airs.

Center of Population.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The center of population in the United States is described as latitude 39 degrees 9 minutes 36 seconds and longitude 85 degrees 48 minutes 54 seconds. In ten years the center of population has moved westward 14 miles and southward 2½ miles. This is the smallest movement ever noted by the census bureau. It shows the population of the western states has not increased as rapidly as in former decades.

German Laborers Warned.

BERLIN, May 1.—The director of the government shipyard at Wilhelmshafen has issued a warning to all the laborers employed at the yard against absenting themselves from work and participating in May day processions. The laborers are threatened with dismissal.

Cherokee Treaty Defeated.

KANSAS CITY, May 1.—A special from Fort Gibson says the latest returns indicate that the Cherokee treaty was defeated at the polls Monday by a majority ranging from 500 to 800 votes. The defeat of the treaty means the enforcement of the Curtis law.

Wall Street Records Again Broken.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Yesterday was the busiest day in the history of the New York Stock Exchange. The total sales were 3,303,000, breaking all records. The best previous record, made Monday, was 2,740,200.

The Tramp Nuisance.

It is announced that the authorities of Middlesex county intend to take severe measures to do away with the tramp nuisance at the "Greenbrook tanks," between Dunellen and Lincoln. It is high time such action was taken. For years the pumping station and sand house of the railroad company has been the favorite rendezvous of the hoboes from all over the State. The railroad officials have tried in vain to break up the party of unbidden guests, but their efforts were unavailing without co-operation from the county authorities.

Hardly is a crime committed by any unknown person in this vicinity than the police look toward the "Greenbrook tanks" as the possible location of the criminal. Many crimes and minor offences have been traced directly to the regular habitues of this place. Nobody questions the statement that this gatnering of tramps is more or less responsible for the petty thefts along the line of the railroad for nearly a dozen miles either way.

This is not a new condition of affairs. It has long existed and has been a standing disgrace to the county which would allow such a state of affairs to continue without objection. The hoboes have congregated there for many years and only occasionally do the local officials make any attempt to disperse them.

If it is really true that the Middlesex county authorities are finally awake to a realization of the situation, it is a subject for general satisfaction. It is to be feared, however, that it is only an outburst of duty which is likely to grow lax as the immediate remembrance of the recent repredations grows faint. Any movement to clear out these very undesirable neighbors will bring forth general commendation from all the surrounding communities.

The announcement that Albert B. Meredith, vice principal and science instructor at the Plainfield High School, has just received the appointment of superintendent of schools at Nutley, N. J., comes as a great surprise to the people of Plainfield. During the four years that Mr. Meredith has been connected with the local schools, he has won the universal esteem of all with whom he has come in contact. His steady attention to duty, combined with his interest in the welfare and pastimes of his pupils, has made him one of the most popular teachers in the public schools. He has done his work well and placed the scientific department of the High School so that it is now the equal of any in the State. While his departure is greatly regretted, all his friends will wish him the best of success in his new position.

It is not an easy thing to investigate the question of municipal ownership properly and it requires time to do so. The committee appointed by the Borough Council to investigate that subject has discovered that it will not be able to report fully on the subject in time for the meeting Friday evening so the report will be delayed until such time as the committee can gather the necessary material together. The committee has not been losing time in its labors but it is a question which takes time and so it must not be expected to be fully prepared to make a statement without the proper time to investigate.

If the City Police Board attempts to follow the wishes of everybody, its members will have a difficult undertaking on their hands. When burglaries followed each other in rapid succession, some of the citizens were very anxious that the police force should be greatly increased and now a worthy man bore witness in the City Court that he could greatly improve the force by dismissing half the men.

By Saturday if the weather permits, the golf season in Plainfield will be opened in earnest. The course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club is open for play today and the first events of the season are scheduled for Saturday. The Park Golf Club links opened last Saturday.

The general introduction of water meters will put into operation a far more equitable arrangement between the Plainfield Water Supply Company and its patrons than now exists. A demand from the whole people is the only thing which will influence the company to put in meters.

Auguste Saltzman has again been honored by the United States Government. He will represent the fire chiefs of this country at the coming world congress of fire chiefs in Berlin. There is no doubt but that Mr. Saltzman will make a worthy representative.

The newly chosen officers of the new borough of Roselle Park are not satisfied with the allotted salaries and it is said that they will resign unless the Council increases their pay. That borough seems to have begun its troubles early in life.

This is the season of the year when Plainfield is at its best. Every Plainfielder should take pride in pointing out its beauties and attractions to the rest of the world.

The question of the location of the new hospital buildings is still unsettled. There is promise of an answer in the near future, however.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

On Sunday many residents of this city took advantage of the ideal spring day and took a stroll in the mountains. Wetumptka Falls and Watchung Lake, as usual, were the principal attractions, but naturally the entire scenery about that locality came in for a good share of attention. Improvements are at present being made to the dam below the lake and consequently the water had been drawn off which had the effect of spoiling the beauty of the lake. A large crowd of cyclists peddled along Johnson's Drive all day and well filled that beautiful thoroughfare.

New Train Between New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo and Chicago on the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

In order to accommodate the increase in travel, the Lehigh Valley Railroad announces that with its spring change in time, about June 1, a new fast train will be put in service between New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo and Chicago via Niagara Falls. This train will leave New York 10:00 a. m.; Philadelphia, 10:30 a. m., arriving Buffalo 9:00 p. m.; Chicago 1:28 p. m. Returning, train will leave Chicago 11:45 a. m., arriving New York, 4:25 p. m.; Philadelphia, 4:00 p. m. The train will be equipped with new cars just turned out of the shops, and will be hauled by locomotives especially designed to make fast time.

Musical Prodigy.

Master Walter Leslie Billings, who is regarded by the press and public to be the greatest musical prodigy of the age, will appear at the Mount Olive Baptist church tomorrow evening. He plays creditably familiar airs upon twenty instruments, in addition to performing numerous difficult feats upon the violin. He will be supported by Madam Catherine E. Lowery, the famour pianist and L. A. Sears, comic reciter.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

IMPORTANT

WHITE GOODS SALE.

We have consummated the largest purchase of White Goods in the history of our business. The lot represents the entire line of several of the largest cotton mills. There are about 300 styles, a variety which no N. Y. city house would be able to display. These goods are the pieces opened at the mills and from which their agents' samples are cut. They are all new, fresh and perfect. The variety is simply bewildering and the patterns bewitching. The inducement to buy so enormous a quantity was the ridiculously low prices quoted. We depend upon the good people of Plainfield to help us out with them.

More styles	at 15c "	" "	20c, 25c and 30c yd
Still more styles	at 20c "	" "	25c to 35c yd
" " "	at 25c "	" "	30c, 35c and 40c yd

A few rare values as high as 50c per yd.

If you want white goods for waists, skirts, dressing sacks, dresses, children's dresses or for any other purpose you should see these goods for they are beautiful and cheap beyond the telling. Don't write for samples, come and see the goods.

IN THE CARPET STORE.

We are showing a large line of the new American grass twine carpets. They are deservedly popular for they are very pretty and wear excellently. They are 36 inches wide, reversible and rapid sellers. We have rugs of the same in the following sizes—

18x36 at 75c 26x54 at 98c 30x60 at 1.25 36x72 at 1.50 9x12 at 9.50

Should be glad to show them to you.

Our Carpet store is an extremely busy place at present, but not so busy but that the wants of all may be properly attended to. If interested in new floor coverings by all means visit us, for our stock of Biglows, Wiltons, Moquettes, Axminsters, Savonneries, Body Brussels, etc., is replete with choice patterns. An unusually strong line of all wool, extra super Ingrains for bedrooms is also shown. Oilcloths and Linoleum in a great many designs. Shades made to order. Daily Budget Of News Gathered By The Daily Press' Corps of Special Correspondents.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence.)

Dunellen, May 1—The authorities of Middlesex county are determined to abate the tramp nuisance at the Greenbrook tanks and will hereafter make periodical raids Several police officials from New Brunswick swooped down a number of hoboes who had camped there early Monday evening and captured five of the party. They were taken to New Brunswick, where they will be placed at work in the chain gang. This will be the fate of all tramps captured at the tanks in the future.

At the prayer meeting in the Methodist church this evening an address will be made by Miss Rachael Mair, of Plainfield, who has but lately returned from Africa. The address will be in relation to her work among the natives of that country.

Mrs. Elam TenEyck, received word yesterday of the sudden death of her brother, Fred Wheaton, which occurred at his home in Pompeii, N. Y. Mrs. TenEyck left today to attend the funeral services which are to be held tomorrow.

Aleck Harris was in town yesterday with a number of fine shad. He claims they were the first captured in the Raritan this season. He returned to the river today and will remain the rest of the summer.

There are letters remaining uncalled for at the postoffice addressed to Benjamin Allen, Clara Jacob, Mary E. Caldwell, John Walters, Miss Reiner, C. Wakeman and Edward White.

Charles Vliet has commenced the erection of a barn in the rear of his residence on Front street. J. N. Apgar is the contractor.

Mrs. Ruth Castner and son, of Rockford, Ill., have taken up their residence with Sanford C. Staples.

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Dickerson have returned from a brief visit with relatives at German Valley.

Mrs. Margaret Blank and Mrs. J.H. Peters were the guests of relatives at Cranford yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Fisher attended the wedding of a relative at Somerville yesterday.

Mrs. Morris Barick has gone to Freehold for a week's visit with her parents.

Mrs. William H. Terry is the guest of Mrs. George Townley, of Elizabeth.

James McMahon has taken a position in a machine shop at Garwood.

Mrs. Annie Abbott spent yesterday with friends at Somerville.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence.)

New Market, May 1.—Mulford Casterline, for two years proprietor of the Hotel Nelson, left today for Potter's Crossing, where he will reside in the future. All of his goods were disposed of at auction yesterday. A large crowd was in attendance and fair prices were realized. The new proprietor, John H. Adelmann, formerly superintendent of the Plainfield trolley system, took charge this morning. He has a lease for three years. He will retain James Lanning as bartender for a time.

The citizens of New Market are very anxious to have a substantial flag-walk laid from Centre street to the schoolhouse. At present the sidewalk is in anything but a satisfactory condition. There is a good walk all the way from Centre street to Dunellen, and the contrast is noticeable.

The committee in charge of the social to be given at the home of Mrs. Stanley Day, this evening, has prepared an excellent programme and a pleasant time is assured. The affair is under the auspices of the Willing Workers of the Episcopal church.

The "duck" dance, which is to be given in Friendship Hall, May 7, will be an invitation affair, and all holding invitations will be admitted.

Miss Hannah Danz leaves today for Brooklyn, where she will take a course in a business college.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barnes, of Rahway, were the guests of Mrs. Evelyn Calhoun yesterday.

Mrs. Clarence White, of Red Bank, spent yesterday with Mr. and Mrs. Abner Coriell.

PLAINFIELD AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence.)

Scotch Plains, May 1.—The several cases of sore throat among the school children in town seem to have disappeared and no outbreak of fever is looked for. At one time the conditions were of such a nature as to cause some alarm among residents. The Board of Health has been vigilant and any evils will be promptly corrected.

An improvement is noted in the condition of Albert Gibbs, who was seriously injured at Jersey City a few days ago. He passed a comfortable night and the physician has hopes that his arm may be saved.

The fur mill will shut down for a brief time the last of the week to allow a few repairs to be made in the machinery. The prospects for a busy season at the mill are very bright.

Preparations are gradually being perfected for the closing of the public school in June. Superintendent John Morey has the matter in charge and is assisted by the teachers.

Mrs. W. E. Gibbs and her daughter, Miss Margaret Gibbs, who have light cases of scarlet fever, continue to improve and a speedy recovery is looked for.

Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, is in a flourishing condition, both as to membership and finances. Several new members are expected to join.

Mrs. Johnston and children, of Tenafly, N. J., are visiting Mrs. William Johnston, of Forest avenue, for a time.

The Epworth League Bible Study Class will meet this evening in the Methodist church at the usual hour.

Miss Anna Miller, of Fanwood, has recovered from a severe illness and is visiting her sister at Dunellen.

Chas. Wade has moved his grocery business in the Marsh building, which has been greatly improved.

Harry Pangborn has been entertaining relatives from Plainfield for a short time.

Roy Day is visiting friends in New York for a few days.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

(Special Correspondence.)

South Plainfield, May 1—Local residents are still expressing hopes of a trolley line between here and Plainfield. No objections can be heard. Merchants, whose trade might be adversely affected, are all heartily in favor of a trolley line.

Unclaimed letters are in the postoffice addressed to Mrs. Frederick Andrews, Charles Anderson, Mrs. Mary Wordsworth and C. B. Loomis.

Camp 41, Patriotic Order Sons of America, will meet tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Washington Hall.

Richard Elliot is again able to attend to his usual duties, after a sickness of several weeks.

Miss Bertha Gunther, of Metuchen, has been visiting at the home of her cousin, Daniel Laing.

Mrs. Oscar Thorn is entertaining for a few days friends from Plainfield.

Mrs. Thomas VanNest is improving from her recent illness.

Joel Manning is entertaining friends from out of town.

Reduction in Price of Ice.

F. T. Ostrom, sales agent for the Hygeia Ice Company, at 307 Watchung avenue, announces today a reduction in the price of ice to 30 cents a hundred. The ice sold by this company is of the finest quality and absolutely pure, being perfectly safe to use in drinking water. The company has a large supply of frozen water on hand and prompt delivery will be made to all parts of the city. The telephone calls are 804 and 44, either one of which will receive prompt attention.

AT THE THEATRES.

Something About the Attractions Which Plainfield Theatre-Goers May Care to Witness.

The big London, New York and Chicago production of 'Quo Vadis," under the management of F. C. Whitney and Edwin Knowles, will be seen at Music Hall tomorrow night. As is well known to most people, 'Quo Vadis" is a dramatization of Henryck Sienkiewicz's wonderful narrative of the time of Nero. All the resources of the theatre will be employed to make the production worthy of the book which it proposes to bring visually before the public. Scenery, costumes, properties, music, pageantry, have been made from models of the time, and it is promised that the big spectacle shall delight the eye, ear and brain. The cast is a long one, and contains the name of a number of America's most prominent players. Stanislaus Stange, who made the adaptation direct from the Polish tongue, in which the romance was written, is said to have followed the story closely and to have preserved the spirit of the period. He has divided his play into six acts and eight scenes, each of which has been especially prepared by New York's most prominent artists and stage artisans. The Whitney & Knowles' production is the only authorized presentment of this wonderful play, and is said to surpass in dramatic power and magnificence of scenic picture any production of recent years.

The continued prosperity shown in the big business being steadily done at the Madison Square Theatre is a well-deserved reward of merit to William Collier and his excellent company who are giving such a delightful performance of Augustus Thomas' brilliant farce "On the Quiet." No more satisfactory performance has been seen in New York this season and nothing but hot weather will stop its present run. Friday night the one hundreth performance will be given when handsome souvenirs will be presented to the women.

Too Small for Him.

"In the earlier days in the northwest," said M. H. Spencer, of Spokane, Wash., "I was mining in Idaho. At that time we used to have dances there quite frequently in the various camps. The male members of one camp would go into their jeans and make up a pot to defray the expenses, and when all arrangements had been made invitations would be sent out to the other camps for the members thereof to attend. The principal cost of these parties was for liquor, and the amount supplied varied in direct ratio with the amount contributed by the hosts There would be five, ten, twenty, or even more gallons, as the case might be, of whisky. 'Cockeye' Leary named these dances for all time when, in answer to a query as to whether or not he would attend a certain shindig soon to be given in a neighboring gulch, he made reply: 'Naw, you can bet I ain't going. It's only a five-gallon dance." —N. Y. Tribune.

Marriage by Assessment.

Marriage is admittedly always a hazard, but in Servia it has been made the basis of a novel variation on the usual modes of speculation. There societies for providing bonuses on marriage were formed, and flourished to such an extent as to greatly accelerate the marriage rate. The funds were obtained on the assessment system, and, as many members who got a bonus and a bride abruptly stopped their contributions, the aspiring celibate subscribers who were left found their obligations increasing more rapidly than is the experience of most married men. Consequently liquidation has set in among these companies with great severity, and the boom in matrimony is likely to be followed by a slump.—London Financial News.

"Gas Eyes" the New Disease of Fish.

"Gas eyes" is the newest thing in diseases of fish. It invariably attacks deep-sea fish which have been put in an aquarium. For some years it has been noticed by keepers of aquaria that deep-sea fish become covered with air blisters. Usually it appears first on the fins, gradually spreading over the body, at last attacking the eyes. A small blister filled with gas would appear on the eyeball and swell to such an extent that it would force the eye from the socket. Experts who have investigated this strange phenomenon have decided that it is caused by the removal of water pressure.—N. Y. World.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

The Rehearsed Wedding.

The wedding was, upon the whole, an artistic success.

The bride, particularly, evinced unmistakable talent. She trembled with all the technical accuracy of an aspen leaf, and the emotional intensity of a startled fawn. Her trembling, indeed, was irreproachable. If she cast down her eyes with something of amateurish gawkishness the fact is easily attributable to her inexperience—this being her first wedding—rather than to an essentially defective method.

She was fairly well supported.

The groom rose from his knees too soon and had to be knocked down by the prompter, but otherwise the minor parts were carried creditably.—Detroit Journal.

Talking Shop in the Woods.

Mr. Blank, a busy and successful oculist, spent his summer vacation in the woods, with his new shotgun.

Noticing one day that when using the left-hand barrel he generally brought down his game, and when using the other barrel he invariably missed, he tacked a small target to a tree and fired at it several times with each barrel, in order to bring the matter to a test.

The result confirmed his suspicions. One barrel was all right, or nearly so, and the other was all wrong.

"Well," he said, "as nearly as I can make out, this gun has a severe case of strabismus, with strong symptoms of astigmatism." — Youth's Companion.

Mongrel Men the Best.

It was once stated by an eminent naturalist that if three varieties of dogs—bulldog, greyhound and common yellow cur—were placed on a desert island and left to themselves, after a certain number of years the canine population of that island would be all yellow dog, because that is the nearest to the original tame wolf. It is exactly the same with the human race. The common "yellow dog" mongrel specimen, mixing half a dozen types in his one body, is the type to which all the others revert under unfavorable conditions. —Washington Times.

Pontificates of the Popes.

Pope Leo XIII.'s pontificate has been exceeded in length by only four popes besides St. Peter. Pius IX. was pope 31 years and seven months, Pius VI. 24 years and eight months, Hadrian I. 23 years and ten months and Pius VII. 23 years and five months. Leo's chances of surpassing the last three are good. Only three popes have reached a greater age than he, Pope Agathon, 107; Pope Gregory IX., 99, and Pope Celestin III., 92.—N. Y. Sun.

Horses in Africa.

A South African bred horse keeps his condition best, as he will get his head down and nibble whenever you get off his back. He is less excitable, too, than most English horses. An imported horse, bred north of the equator, takes at least a year to get used to the change of seasons, not to mention the change of food.—Longmans'.

The Best Preserver.

Customer—I want to get something that will preserve wood.

New Clerk—Yes, sir, here's just the thing you want.

"Nonsense! That's a padlock."

"Yes, sir. Put that on your woodshed door and no thief will ever get in."—Philadelphia Press.

He'd Settle Old Scores.

Tommy—O! Ouch! Stop that!

Mamma—Why, Tommy, aren't you ashamed? I wouldn't cry that way if it was my hair that was being combed.

(Fiercely) "I'll bet you would if I was doin' the combing."—Philadelphia Press.

American Agriculture.

Our agriculture, which amounted to $100,000,000 a hundred years ago, is now rapidly approaching $3,000,000,000 a year, and the value of the farms of the country is almost $15,000,000,000.—American Agriculturist.

"Do you think he can distinguish me in a crowd at this distance, Lucy?"

"I think not," answered Mrs. Nolan, indifferently. "My sight is good, and

"OUR MEETING DEPENDS ON YOU," SHE SAID.

I can't tell him from anybody else on the pier."

"Then I shall stop; my arm aches. Do you think he will do as I wish?"

"I don't know him as well as you do." Mrs. Nolan evidently laid no claim to perspicacity. "It looks to me like a mighty easy way to make money, but, of course, as you said the other day, it all depends on your grip on him. I think what we have to fear more than anything is his preachy tendency. Nobody but you would dare to attempt to work a man like he is."

"Yes, it all depends on the grip," admitted Jeanne; "and the longer we are separated the less my influence will be; so you see the absolute need of striking while the iron is hot."

Mrs. Nolan threw a startled look into her companion's calm face.

"Striking while the iron is hot?" she repeated, interrogatively.

"Yes; now come into the stateroom; we must clearly understand each other."

When they were in their room, Mrs. Goddard closed and locked the door. Then they sat down and conversed in whispers for an hour.

"Oh, I wish," protested Mrs. Nolan, when the conference was ended, "I wish you would postpone it till we are on land. I am such a poor actress."

"Well, it simply has to be done, and after considering a dozen plans there could be nothing so good as this. I couldn't tell him it would be so soon, for he would have backed down on the spot. When the news is telegraphed to him from Liverpool, and when he sees the papers full of the details, he will not dare to open his mouth. Even if I should fail, you see, they would conclude that the whole thing was simply the conduct of an insane person."

"The whole scheme stamps you as a regular genius," said Mrs. Nolan. "Are you sure you can stand the ordeal, and that there is enough for you to eat in the basket? It will not seem right for me to go down to warm meals in the salon while you are eating cold things up here."

"I shall put it off if possible till we are nearly in," said Mrs. Goddard. "Besides, you may order your meals sent here occasionally and we will exchange."

CHAPTER IX.

It was the third day out. The sky was cloudless and the sun was throwing down a genial warmth upon long rows of passengers in steamer chairs and rugs on the deck. Mrs. Goddard and her companion sat side by side. An inclination towards sociability had drawn most of the passengers together in half-hearted efforts at entertainment, but the two characters belonging to my history held themselves quite aloof from all.

The captain, who as a habit spoke to few of his passengers, seemed to have singled Mrs. Goddard out as a voyager of no little distinction owing to her occupation of the best stateroom on board, for he often bowed to her as he passed. To-day, when Mrs. Goddard saw him coming along the deck in their direction, she nudged her companion.

"There is a vacant chair next to me," she said. "If I can get him to sit down a moment I shall play my first card."

"Oh, don't say anything before me," entreated Mrs. Nolan; "I feel so shaky."

"You must get over that," ordered our arch conspirator, sternly. "Now, don't you forget what I told you."

The captain was now quite near. It was the smile of Mrs. Goddard that caused him to doff his cap and pause.

"A fine day, madam," he said, cordially.

She motioned for him to sit down in the chair on her left.

"I have been wanting to speak to you, captain, ever since the beginning of the voyage," she said, and there was a strange lack-luster expression in her eyes.

"I am at your service, Mrs. Goddard," he said, studying her face, curiously.

"Of course, I don't want you to regard what I say in the light of a complaint," she went on. "In fact, I make up my mind to put up with a great many horrible things at sea. But, captain, is there not a—a decided feeling among the sailors that we will never get into port alive?"

"Why, madam!" He opened his eyes wide with astonishment. "I don't understand you. Surely—"

"I have always heard they were superstitious people by nature," she broke in. "Now Lucy, here, has been trying to pacify me all day; but she is lying to me. I am sure my husband instructed her to keep me in the dark."

The captain glanced past her and tried to catch Mrs. Nolan's glance, but this woman was looking off in the opposite direction, her face deathly white, and twitching with excitement.

"You were saying that the sailors are superstitious by nature," he floundered about in his effort to appear both respectful and to get at her meaning.

"Yes, and you see, passing so many dead bodies of men, women and children would make them more so. I can't bear it. There are more of them on this side of the ship than the other."

"Why, what do you mean?" he gasped. "Madam, there are no dead bodies here."

Mrs. Goddard flared up and gave him her eyes steadily.

"My husband has instructed you to deceive me, too," she cried. "Lucy said you would agree with her. You are all in the plot to worry me—to kill me."

She rose suddenly and dropped her rug at her feet.

"I am going to my stateroom and try to sleep, but what does closing my eyes amount to? I can see them just the same."

The captain was on his feet almost as soon as she was and he walked with her to the door of her room. Then, with a face much disturbed, he came back to Mrs. Nolan. He put his finger on his brow significantly.

"Something is wrong with her," he said, in the peremptory tone of a superior to one beneath him; "what is it?"

"It is not at all serious, sir," stammered Mrs. Nolan. "She doesn't talk that way often."

"Did you know her mind was—was so when you left America with her?"

"She told me she had strange feelings sometimes—delusions, but that the ocean always cured her."

"Does her family know of her condition?"

Mrs. Nolan shook her head doubtfully.

"I think not, sir, it seems to me she was leaving home to keep them from finding out the truth."

"Ah!" he sat silent for a moment, then he rose. "If she is not better soon you must let me know, do you understand?"

"I will do so, sir; but I am sure she will give us no trouble. I will go see if she wants anything."

When Mrs. Nolan reached the stateroom she found her companion on the bed smiling from a rigidly expectant face; her eyes were gleaming with half-amused fear. She drew Mrs. Nolan down on the edge of the bed.

"What did he say after I left?"

Mrs. Nolan repeated the conversation.

"Good!" exclaimed the recumbent woman. "That is quite enough for the present. It will prepare him for the climax—divest his mind from all possible suspicion of trickery in the chief event when it comes. I must not cause him to set a close watch on me. Tell him when you meet him next that I have been to sleep and that I am decidedly better."

On the seventh day of their voyage, on entering the state-room suddenly Mrs. Nolan discovered Mrs. Goddard in the act of placing a little folding deck-stool into the closet.

"What is that for?" she questioned.

"You don't suppose I am going to stand up in there all the time I am locked in, do you?" smiled Mrs. Goddard. "There is not room enough to lie down and an emergency might occur in which I'd have to stand till I'd drop in sheer exhaustion. I am awfully glad the air comes in at the top. Now, just for experiment, I'll sit down and then you must lock me in."

Mrs. Nolan consented readily. She seemed better at rehearsals than at performances.

Owing to the shallowness of the closet Mrs. Goddard was obliged to sit sidewise, but she looked very comfortable as she leaned back against her gowns and skirts.

"Now, close the door," she said. And when this was done no one entering the room at that instant would have imagined that the apartment contained more than one woman.

"There is plenty of air, too," chuckled the prisoner when she was liberated. "Now, for all you do, don't leave the room while the stewardess is putting it straight. The hints I have dropped in her presence about keeping the closet locked will make it appear thoroughly natural for it never to be open. She knows we have both the keys."

"But, my Lord, after—after you disappear—what if they were to order the door opened?"

"You must not cross a bridge before you come to it," quoted Mrs. Goddard. "Now, so far you have done beautifully; don't make a failure at the very end. I tell you our plan is going to run smoothly and without a single hitch. Then, if I get ashore all right, I shall be free; and we shall have money enough to be free on, think of that—think of the money, Lucy!"

"I shall do my best," said Mrs. Nolan, borne into hopefulness by the breezy confidence of her friend.

Taking up her rug and a book, Mrs. Goddard went to her chair in a sunny spot on the deck. She saw the captain approaching. A critical look lay in his frank eyes, but she bent over her book and allowed him to pass without a word. It struck him that, having recovered from her delusion, she was embarrassed by the remembrance of her wild remarks a few days previously.

RIPANS

DON'T WORRY;
USE RIPANS.

Thomas M. Stafford, living at 213 Main St., Clayton, N. Y., writes: "My age is thirty years and I am a glass blower by trade. I suffered with nervous dyspepsia. I could not sleep nights because the wind seemed to get around my heart. I worried about it all the time, but the more I worried the worse I got. A friend suggested my trying Ripans Tabules and I got a box and commenced taking them. Every time I felt bad around my heart or bad in my head I would take one, and I took four boxes. After the first two I felt much better and did not feel nervous, and after I had taken them a month I felt like a different man, and, in two months I felt entirely cured. As I do not have much time at noon to eat my dinner, I am in the habit of eating very fast, but if I take a Ripans Tabule after each meal I do not feel any bad effects from either indigestion or dyspepsia."

THE WELL DRESSED WOMAN

She Gives Attention to Minute Details of Attire.

It is in the attention given to details that the attire of a truly well dressed woman is distinguished. In general form, style and color it follows the prevailing mode, but it is most carefully put on, is the perfection of fit and neatness and has some slight touch of originality in trimming or accessories which at once stamps it as the product of individual taste. Sometimes a set of quaint and unusual buttons gives the note, sometimes an odd buckle, a different belt, a bit of remarkable lace as a cravat, but there is always something to differentiate the costume from that worn by everybody else.

Today's illustration shows a gown of dull red cloth. The skirt has a group of stitched plaits in front and at each side, the plaits being free at the foot. The tight bodice has a short basque at the sides and back and is pointed in front. It is trimmed with lines of stitching and bands of dull red velvet, and there are three gold buttons at the waist. The collar, cravat and chemisette are of white organdie. The tight, plain sleeves have flaring cuffs of red velvet. The wide hat of black straw is ornamented with a wreath of red flowers, and a culster of flowers is placed under the brim upon the hair.

when wraps are abandoned. There are very pretty ruches of mousseline de soie, with long ends of crepe de chine, embroidered and sometimes fringed. Others, of white and black mousseline de soie combined, have the ends all white or all black. Many scarfs of silk or lace are worn, tied as a cravat, with long ends falling to the foot of the gown.

Indoor blouses are often cut slightly away at the neck. The one illustrated consists of a blouse of ecru guipure, over which is a loose bolero of white taffeta bordered with blue, with a sailor collar to match. Flowers of blue taffeta are placed in applications along the edges of the bolero and collar. The half length, full sleeves of white taffeta are gathered under a blue scarf and chou at the elbow, the edge of the sleeve forming a frill, bordered to match the bolero. An empire scarf of blue silk comes from under the arms and fastens by a chou across the bust, and there is a wide, draped belt of blue silk. JUDIC CHOLLET.

SIGNS OF PROGRESS.

They Are Visible in Every Section of the New South.

Marvelous Changes in the Commercial and Agricultural Conditions of Georgia—Natives Encourage Enterprise.

[Special Atlanta (Ga.) Letter.]

GEORGIA is in a more prosperous condition than at any period since the close of the war between the states. This is owing mainly to eastern capital and intelligent labor, well applied. The conditions have always been here—that is, the rich soil and other natural resources. but until very recently the people did not seem disposed to avail themselves of the bounties of nature, but rather trusted to luck, and politics. In what is known as the "wire-grass" region, n southern Georgia, vast tracts of cheap but productive lands, easily and inexpensively cultivated, have been put under cultivation, and now produce not only the main southern "stand-by" cotton crop, but nearly all kinds of fruits and garden truck. This wilderness of pine barrens has been made highly productive, and villages have sprung up making a market for the small farmer. The mild winter climate of this once inhospitable region has recently attracted farmers of small means from the northern states, who have bought these apparently valueless lands at nominal sums and on long credit. Unlike the average southern farmer, they did not rely entirely upon a cotton crop, which, if it failed, placed them on the verge of starvation, but they diversified their crops. They farmed on business principles, just as a merchant would conduct a store, and perhaps more business-like than many of them do. They raised hogs, horses, vegetables, and anything that will grow in this fertile soil. The waste places of Georgia are being rapidly "settled" by immigrants, and a new order of things is under headway, which is changing the face of the country, and the old order of doing things.

In southern Georgia and throughout the state, the farmers are prospering, because they have lately learned to farm with their heads as well as with their hands—that it requires skill as well as manual labor. With this intelligently applied labor, and the diversification of crops, the farmer is not dependent upon cotton, and the advances of the merchant. He "raises" nearly everything that he needs, even to the weaving of his clothing, and if his cotton crop fails, or the price sinks to five cents a pound, as it did a year or two ago, he can live, while the country merchant is not so sure about it. The conditions are being reversed—a small crop, or no crop, made the merchant wealthy in a few years, because he sold his advance supplies for the crop at high tariff rates, and a few successive failures put him in possession of the land. At last the farmers, at least of this state, have generally learned this object lesson, which the press has so long unavailingly preached to them—"produce everything you need for your family, and your cotton will be a surplus." They are improving upon this by making a specialty of stock-raising. Instead of getting their meat from the cities where they formerly shipped their hogs, they kill and cure their own hogs at home, and sell the surplus. They raise their own farm horses and mules, and some of them make a specialty of raising mules for the Atlanta market, from whence they are shipped to Cuban ports.

GEORGIA MOUNTAIN HOME.

In addition to agriculture much of the progress of the state is due to the lumber and turpentine industries, which of late have received an impetus. The demand for the yellow pine was never larger in the history of the state. The trade with Spain, South Africa and South America in this timber is increasing, and is now beyond the expectations of the lumber shippers. The trade increased about 25 per cent. last year, and the indications for the present year are even brighter. New settlers are clearing these lands of the famous yellow pine, and thus realize enough from the sale of the timber to pay for the lands. It is then easy enough to get supplies for a crop, and thus the country becomes "thinned out" and settled. Then comes the schoolhouse, the church, the store, and, finally, the railroad—and the forest is transformed into civilization.

While the farmer, as a rule, has prospered, especially in the southern part of the state, the country merchant has not done so well as formerly. This is mainly owing to the growing independence of the farmer, and his fewer purchases at "credit prices," which are usually 100 per cent. above cash prices. The good price of cotton for the past two seasons has also helped to take the farmer out of the grasp of the country merchant. This especially applies to the negro, who is naturally improvident, and when once in debt is generally held in pecuniary bondage by the merchant. The darky would be permitted to buy almost anything he fancied—to the limit of his prospective crop. When the crop was marketed he rarely had anything coming to him, and bought next year's supplies on credit at ruinous prices. He is learning better now, and, unless he has the money, denies himself some things he needs, or imagines he needs. The negro farmers of this state, generally, are industrious, and conduct their farms more intelligently than formerly. They were virtually ruined for years by the unlimited credit system, which was conducted on the pawnbroker style. His ignorance was taken advantage of in many instances, but at last he has learned by sad experience that it is folly to "eat his crop" before it is made.

SOUTH GEORGIA WATER POWER.

Millions of dollars are being invested in manufactories in the south, and Georgia is rapidly becoming a manufacturing "center," and will in a few years become a large importer of articles that are now bought by southern merchants in England.

As yet there are only a few educational institutions in the south where men are taught to operate machinery for the manufacture of cloth, but Georgia is taking the lead in this much-needed enterprise; also in textile mills and the manner of conducting them. There are not, however, enough of these technological schools in this state, nor in the south, to educate specially a sufficient number of skilled workmen to equal the increasing demand. The greater portion of the larger investments in this state is in manufactories, and before these factories are built it is necessary to have technically educated men to manage and operate them. It is proposed to call an "industrial educational convention" of the southern states within the next few months. The matter of establishing technological schools throughout the south and educating young men in textile and various other technical lines will be the subject for discussion. Textile and other mills are being rapidly built throughout the south, especially in Georgia, and they will continue to increase in number, for a wave of general prosperity has reached the south, and, from the amount of capital being invested in these enterprises, the wave will continue to expand.

The mining industry in Georgia has revived. Though this is the oldest mining state in the country, it has cut no important figure in that product since the war. The Dahlonega district is the center of gravitation for capitalists and prospectors. This old town was located on one of the first mints to be established in the United States. It ceased coining at the beginning of hostilities.

In the mountainous districts there is a large number of "prospectors," half an ounce of gold upward a day. They say that this "beats farming." Some of them are farmers, and when their crops are gathered they take their picks and shovels and make "extra money." The prospecting is mainly confined to the beds of shallow streams, some of which are rich in mineral deposits. There is considerable capital, however, being invested in mining, and several smelters have recently been erected in the state. Another field which capitalists are prospecting is the phosphate beds, in which this state is rich. A unique industry is that of exploring and developing the old "nitre caves," where the confederates extracted nitre for the manufacture of powder. Capitalists of this section evidently do not intend to overlook anything.

A BIT OF GEORGIA SCENERY.

This changed condition, brought about by immigration and the introduction of capital, is more marked in this state than perhaps in any other state in the south, especially in the manufacturing section. Prejudice is rapidly dying out, and except in the remote rural districts little is heard of the old political troubles. The newer generation look to the future, while the veterans of the Lost Cause attempt to forget the sad past.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The North Plainfield High School team and the Leal' School nine will play a game of baseball on the Pittis' field diamond this afternoon, provided the weather permits.

The Plainfield High School baseball team left on the train at noon today for Newark, where the boys will cross bats with the strong nine representing the Newark Academy. The make-up of the team and the batting order will be the same as in the game against the Alis nine Saturday.

Teams from the North Plainfield Grammar School and the Whittier School played an interesting game of baseball Monday afternoon on the Westervelt avenue diamond. The borough boys were victorious by the score of 9 to 3. Conover and Emmons composed the battery for the borough team, while Brokaw and Hillyer occupied those places of the Whittier team.

An exciting game of baseball took place on the old golf grounds yesterday afternoon, between the Whittier Eagles and the Underwood A. A. The latter team was defeated for the second time this season by a score of 14 to 12. Superior batting on the part of the Eagles made them the victors. The battery for the Whittier Eagles was McVoy and Rogers and for the Underwoods, Jack and Will Douglas.

GOLF.

Arrangements have been made by the golf committee of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club to open the course today for general play. There will be no events, but many of the members are anxious to get on the course, and as the recent pleasant weather has put it in fine condition, the committee feels justified in allowing the use of it. The regular opening will take place Saturday with several events. There will be play for the Golf Committee cup and prizes for the best gross score, this cup to be played for each Saturday of the season by active members.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Dudley S. Miller has purchased a new Wolff-American wheel of the latest pattern.

BURNED HOLE IN ARM.

Peter W. McDonough Injured at Sharkey's Blacksmith Shop.

Peter W. McDonough, of West Front street, who is employed as a blacksmith in William L. Sharkey's shop on Lincoln place, accidently received a severe wound while at work shortly before noon today.

Mr. McDonough was burning a hole through a leg of a wheelbarrow when the hot iron slipped and caught him in the left wrist. A small artery was severed and the blood gushed out until a strap was tightened about the arm.

Dr. P. J. Zeglio was summoned and gave prompt attention to the wound, but owing to the fact that Dr. Zeglio was on his way to a regular patient, who required immediate attention, the wound was dressed by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan.

Injured Left Hand.

While using a cold chisel in repairing the roof of George D. Hallock's property on Willow avenue yesterday, William Wyman, of West Fourth street, severely lacerated his left hand. The wound was dressed and Mr. Wyman expects to be able to be at work again shortly.

MEMORIAL DAY PLANS.

Exact Programme for the Day Will be Announced at the Next Meeting.

The several committees from Winfield Scott Post, Sons of Veterans and Women's Relief Corps, who are completing arrangements for the Memorial Day exercises, met in Comrade Moffett's office last evening. Progress was reported by all. At the next meeting which is to be held Tuesday evening the exact programme of the day will be announced.

Arrangements were made for a service to be held in the morning at one of the cemeteries yet to be designated. It is not yet known who will make the customary address during the afternoon exercises to be held in Reform hall.

Try to Make Uniform Prices.

A meeting of the Plainfield branch of the Union County Retail Druggists Association was held last evening in the Y. M. C. A. parlors. All the druggists in the city with one exception were present. Several matters in regard to a uniform rate of prices were discussed but with no definite result. At another meeting which is to be held next week it is expected the matter will be agreed upon.

Graduates From Stevens.

HUNDREDS OF FARMS

Owned by William Scully, Greatest of American Landlords.

His Largest Holdings Are in Central Illinois and in Bates County, Mo. —How He Makes His Land Pay Well.

William Scully owns a greater number of farms than any man in the United States. Their aggregate area is 200,000 acres. They are worth $10,000,000. They are located in central Illinois, western Missouri and Kansas. They represent the accumulation of 50 years of the life of their owner.

He is the richest farmer in the richest agricultural section in the world. His wealth the New York World estimates at $25,000,000.

William Scully came to this country shortly after the Mexican war for the purpose of investing his money He chose to put it into farming lands

At that time he was William Scully, gentleman, of Ballecohey, Ireland. Now he is William Scully, American citizen, owner of the John A. Logan residence in Washington, and multimillionaire.

Ever since he came to America he has been either Lord or Viscount Scully, although he never gave anybody reason to believe that he held a title. He is not a lord. Neither is he a viscount.

In 1897 the Illinois legislature modified the alien land-owner law This law necessitated Mr. Scully's removal to the United States and his naturalization prior to 1903.

When the Scully agents went to Bates county, Mo., six years ago to purchase farm land there, people became alarmed lest Scully import an undesirable tenantry. This criticism of Mr. Scully has covered a period of more than 40 years. Not one word of defense ever came from him. Criticism seemed never to touch the rich Irishman. His policy was silence.

WILLIAM SCULLY.
(Irish Landlord Who Owns Scores of Farms in the West.)

Meanwhile the Scully acres continued to yield great crops. Nobody ever heard of a sale of Scully land except a farm purchased in Sangamon county, Ill., by former Gov. Richard J. Oglesby. Nobody ever heard of a mortgage on a Scully farm.

At Butler, in Bates county, Mo., there are 125 Scully tenants, and they lease their lands for cash, paying from $1.25 to $2 an acre, and make their own improvements.

The Scully agents are particular about leases. The farmer who applies for one of them must be a practical farmer. His stock must look well fed. His machinery must show good care. He must have a good reputation, be temperate and industrious and pay his debts. He must not quarrel with his neighbors.

Three years ago Mr. Scully increased his holdings in Bates county, Mo., to 43,000 acres, all purchased in cash at from $27 to $35 an acre. None of this land is encumbered. William Scully has visited Bates county several times. He has inspected his farms and carried away samples of their soil in little paper sacks, leading his tenants there to believe he must have at his home samples of every piece of the land he owns.

A year ago the people of Bates county voted on a proposition to build a new courthouse at Butler. Mr. Scully's agent wrote to him and inquired to know what he would advise his tenants to do. Mr. Scully answered that they ought to vote for it. The proposition carried.

This richest of American farmers is a modest man of simple tastes. He dresses simply in dark clothes, with an old-fashioned black bow tie. He does not drink or use tobacco. He is a member of the Episcopal church. He is slightly bald.

Mr. Scully spent several summers in Lincoln, Ill., on one occasion bringing his family. One of his sons married a Lincoln girl. The family lived very simply and became popular. Mr. Scully devoted his whole time to his lands and his books. He was never known to come to Lincoln or to depart from there without having with him an armful of books, principally devoted to agriculture.

Mr. Scully permits no detail of his business to escape him. He even sees that a new generation of scientific farmers will be on hand to take his place and the places of the men who work with him. He puts young men at work on the farms and then sends them to college at his own expense.

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J THURSDAY, MAY 2 1901. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

WANTS THE THEATRE IN NEW CITY HALL.

Mayor N. B. Smalley Has a Proposition Which He Believes Will Be Great Advantage.

TO PLAINFIELD RESIDENTS.

WOULD OPEN STREET FROM NORTH AVENUE TO FRONT STREET.

Offers $2,000 Toward That Improvement—Suggests That The City Then Build City Hall With Room For a Theatre Inside.

Mayor N. B. Smalley is advocating two propositions, both of which concern improvements in the city and which he believes are demanded at this time. One relates a practical method of relieving the congested condition of traffic which at times occurs on Park and Watchung avenues between Front street and North avenue while the other idea he advances has to do with the erection of a suitable municipal building and with it a much needed opera house or hall of amusement.

As to the first idea, the Mayor declares that a street should be cut through from North avenue, opposite the depot, to East Front street, parallel with Park avenue. This he says would afford a direct avenue for travel from the old railroad station to the main business thoroughfare. The cost of the properties necessary to be condemned for the purpose, he declares, would be amply met by the benefits which would be assessed against abutting property owners and by the extra taxes received from the resulting increase in valuations particularly on East Front street near the terminus of the new street.

Some months ago Smalley Brothers, in which the Mayor is a partner, directed a communication to the City Council offering to contribute $2,000, as the firm's share of the benefits provided the proposed street be opened so that Smalley' Brothers building, now in the course of erection on North avenue, would face it on the west. Nothing has been heard of this offer by him lately, the Mayor says, but he states that it still stands good.

According to the Mayor's proposition this new thoroughfare would strike Front street at a point directly opposite the old Gardner estate property on the north side of the last named street. On the tract of land belonging to that estate the Mayor believes that a handsome public building should be erected, as was advocated some time ago. The time has arrived, says he, when it is absolutely necessary for the various departments of the city government to be comfortably housed under one roof. A large structure, he says, should be built so that it would answer all the requirements should the city grow in the future as it has in the past.

In this building, the Mayor believes, provision should be made for a strictly modern theatre, which would reflect credit on Plainfield. The theatre could be leased to some metropolitan amusement syndicate or to some local concern, and the revenue derived therefrom would constitute a good item in the annual receipts of the city.

If these improvements are brought about His Honor is of the opinion that the Central Railroad will see the necessity of re-establishing a ticket office in the old depot, because of the increasing traffic on North avenue.

Y. M. C. A. Social.

In order to allow the members of the physical and educational departments of the Y. M. C. A. to become better acquainted, by mingling with one another after class hours, a series of socials has been inaugurated. The first will take place Saturday evening and will be termed a "quaint" social. A quaint programme has been arranged and every one is expected to form at least one new acquaintance. All young men, whether members of the association or not, are invited.

United Meeting at Newark.

The united lodges of the A.O U.W., of Essex county, will hold a meeting Wednesday evening, May 8, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Newark. The meeting is expected to be one of the most important and interesting ever held in this vicinity. A number of Workmen from this city will attend.

TO MAKE ARTIFICIAL ICE.

INCREASED PLANT OF THE HYGEIA ICE COMPANY.

Plant Has Been Remodelled and Fine Ice is Being Made of the Purest Water.

The Hygeia Ice Company, whose plant occupies a large space of ground on North avenue, near Berckman street, is now prepared to furnish the people of this city with the finest quality of ice manufactured from pure artesian water drawn from a well nearly 175 feet deep. The increased demand for the manufactured ice has compelled the company to install new machinery. This has recently been done and the plant is perfectly equipped to do the best work.

In installing new machinery the plant has been remodeled, thereby enabling a much larger production of ice at a minimum cost. The consumer will derive the benefit of this and the company announces that hereafter 30 cents a hundred pounds will be charged. Regarding the safety in using this ice there is no question. There is no chance for contamination either from chemicals or outside influences and this fact has made it very popular in many households.

Frank T. Ostrom, sales agent for the company, announces that prompt attention will be given to all orders. The delivery facilities are adequate for good service, and additional wagons will be used as the demand necessitates.

GIFTS FOR PASTOR.

Tokens of Esteem in Which Rev. H. J. Johnson it Held by His Old Congregation.

Rev. H. J. Johnson, who is well known in this vicinity as a former pastor of Grace M. E. church, was tendered a large reception by the congregation of the Summerville church, Mariner's Harbor, Staten Island, Tuesday evening.

Rev. Mr. Johnson has been re-appointed to the charge at Mariner's Harbor by the bishop, who had intended to transfer him to another field, but upon the urgent request of Mr. Johnson's flock, he was prevailed upon to rename him pastor of the Summerville church.

A multitude of friends helped to make the reception a joyous occasion. During the evening the congregation presented their pastor with a fine quartered oak roll top desk and chair as a token of their esteem. A cut-glass service was presented to the pastor's wife who has endeared herself to the congregation of her husband's church.

USED NEW PIANO.

Was First Put Into Service at Trinity's Anniversary Service Last Night.

The handsome Kranich & Bach baby grand piano, just purchased by Trinity Reformed church and Sunday-school, was placed in the lecture room yesterday and used last evening at the twenty-first anniversary service for the first time. The securing of this piano was made possible through special efforts on the part of the Sunday-school, as already stated, and it will be a great help in the worship at the church. After the meeting last evening those present remained to examine the piano, which is a very fine-toned instrument.

Debate Will be Chief Feature at Bethel Chapel Tomorrow Evening.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Bethel chapel will participate in literary exercises tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. A quartette of male voices from the Park Avenue Hotel will sing "The Holy City," "Blue and Gray" and other selections.

A debate will also take place upon the following subject: "Resolved, That the church is a more potent factor of civilization than the school." The contestants are: Affirmative, R. B. Norwood, Alex. Stitts; negative, E. A. Lightfoot, E. R. Williams.

Birthday Social.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will hold a birthday social in the church this evening. There will be a musical programme and other features.

State Missionary Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society of New Jersey is being held in the Clinton Avenue Baptist church, Newark, today.

Invitation Dance.

The clerks at I. H. Boehm's dry goods store will give an invitation dance in T. A. B. Hall Thursday evening, May 16.

Bowling Match.

The women members of the Gesang and Turn Verein will hold a bowling match in Saengerbund Hall this afternoon.

PARISH FAIR.

Industrial School of Holy Cross Church Will Hold a Sale Saturday Afternoon.

In the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross, on Saturday afternoon the teachers and pupils of the industrial school, a parochial organization, will hold a fair for the sale of fancy and useful goods.

The articles on sale will consist exclusively of the handiwork of the pupils. Another feature of the fair will be refreshments. Cake, candy, ice cream and other toothsome dainties can be had.

According to the arrangements the hours set for the affair are from 2 until 5 o'clock.

WOMEN CHOSE OFFICERS.

AT MEETING OF WOMEN'S HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Paper on Work in Burmah and Letters From Missionaries in India Were Read.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held a business meeting yesterday and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Reuben Knox; vice-presidents, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mrs William White and Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw; treasurer, Miss Ida Yerkes; secretary, Mrs. B. J. Shreve. Mrs. Josephine Lowerre and Mrs. J. A. Powlison were elected members of the board of managers in place of Mrs. George A. Chapman and Mrs. Bowman, who have been unable to attend the duties which the office calls for. The present board of collectors was retained but it was increased by one, Mrs. Charles Conover being appointed a member.

Following the election an original paper on missionary work in Burmah was read by Mrs. Brownell. In an interesting way the work of the missionaries was told from the time they commenced their labors until the present day, mentioning briefly what has been accomplished. Mrs. Charles Conover read two letters received by her from missionaries in India, from which an insight was gained of their daily life.

This afternoon a number of the members of the society will attend the missionary anniversary exercises being held in the Clinton Avenue Baptist church, at Newark.

ARBOR DAY EXERCISES.

Will be Held in Irving School Tomorrow Morning.

The pupils of the Irving school will hold interesting exercises tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock in celebration of Arbor Day. Miss Petrie, principal of the school, has prepared the following programme:

THE GAME WAS WON BY A SINGLE RUN.

Leal's School Boys Defeated Borough High School By Score of 8 to 7.

MUCH WILD PLAYING.

NEITHER TEAM WAS UP TO ITS OLD CONDITION.

Dupee Was Not Steady While Crite's Curves Were Finally Solved — No Distinguishing Features—Game Was Very Close However.

In a closely contested game of baseball played on Pittis Field yesterday afternoon the Leal's School team defeated the North Plainfield High School nine by the narrow margin of one run, the score being 8 to 7 against the boroughites.

The game was marked by numerous costly errors, chiefly made by the Leal's team, although the North Plainfielders were not far behind in this respect. Notwithstanding the closeness of the contest, few if any brilliant plays were made by either nine.

Dupee, in the box for the Leal boys, came far from putting up the game which characterized the match with Hope chapel last Saturday. At the beginning of the first inning Corwin, the second baseman, was given a trial at pitching, but it soon became necessary for Dupee to take his place. Not until well on in the game, however, did he get down to work in earnest, though it should be noted in this connection that the support given Dupee particularly in the first part of the game was wretched.

For the first few innings, Oscar Crite, the much heralded pitcher of the boroughites' team, did fine work, but gradully the opposing team got on to his curves and once or twice hit him quite lively.

It would be difficult to say just which players on the respective teams put up a good game, for the contest was totally devoid of distinguishing features. Wild throws and inexcusable muffs seemed to be the order of the day.

On the Leal's School team Don McGee held down his old position at second base with the exception of a couple of innings, when Corwin covered that bag. W. Schoonmaker was at centre field in the first inning and after that he occupied his regular place at third base. The right field was the scene of many changes. Minford, Corwin and Horn each took a turn playing in that position.

The make-up of the North Plainfield High School team was practically the same as at previous games. Townsend took his stand at right field. In the middle of the game he was relieved, however, and Woodland was put in his place.

At the end of the first inning the score was tie. From then on the borough boys forged ahead and retained the lead until the latter part of the fourth inning when the Leal's team scored three runs in succession. After that the Leal's boys increased their lead and at the beginning of the ninth inning the score stood 8 to 6 in their favor.

At the commencement of the ninth inning the North Plainfielders rallied sufficiently to score one run although they failed in their effort to tie the game.

The batting order follows:

Leal's School.	N. P. H. S.

SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT.

Class of 1905 of The City High School Will Give Programme Saturday Evening.

The class of 1905 of the Plainfield High School will entertain its friends in the hall of the Franklin school building Saturday evening.

An interesting programme has been arranged for the occasion. At the conclusion of the musical part of the affair a candy sale and informal social will be held. The patronesses will be Miss Prescott, Miss Whitney, Miss Benedict and Mrs. I. W. Travell.

The proceeds of the entertainment will be used to purchase a work of art to adorn the High School.

CRUSHING DEFEAT AT NEWARK.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL BOYS PLAYED BALL THERE YESTERDAY.

Newark Academy Won 18 to 0—Clever Work by VanAuken in Box for Plainfield.

A crushing defeat was administered to the baseball team of the Plainfield High School by the crack nine of the Newark Academy at the latter city yesterday afternoon. The score of 18 to 0 is the best evidence that the High School boys were completely outclassed.

Errors galore were the features of the local team's performance. The redeeming quality of their play, however, was the brilliant pitching of VanAuken who took Townsend Mason's place in the box To his credit it should be said that the poor support given VanAuken was largely responsible for the large score which the Newark boys rolled up.

On account of darkness the game closed in the middle of the seventh inning.

The batting order follows:

P. H. S.	Newark Academy.

TWO SPARRING EXHIBITIONS.

WERE PRINCIPAL FEATURES OF WEST END A. C. ENTERTAINMENT.

Clever Work on Slack Wire by Michael Burke — Other Acts — Dancing Followed Programme.

Fully five hundred people attended the first grand ball and entertainment of the West End Athletic Club, which was given in Washington Hall last evening

The first part of the evening was given up to a vaudeville programme. It consisted of a three round bout between Thompson and Pagram, of Newark; bag punching by Dennis Ward, of Newark; reel and jig dancing by Tony Hayes, of Elizabeth; popular melodies, by John Moran; a slack wire act by Michael Burke; a musical act by Jeanne and Renaud, of this city; and a four round sparring exhibition between Hall and Ward, of Newark. The boxing matches and Michael Burke's slack wire performances were greatly enjoyed.

Dancing followed until an early hour this morning. Music for the occasion was furnished by Prof. O'Reilly's orchestra. The dancers were kept in order by James Kane, who acted as floor manager, in which he was assisted by John King. The committee of arrangements consisted of John Dixon, Thomas Kane, Michael Burke, James Ennis, Harry Dilkes, Thomas Strapp and James Kane.

RAN THROUGH TOWN.

Exciting Runaway Yesterday Afternoon Resulted in Quite Little Damage.

As Miss Maude VanBoekerck and her cousin, Miss Bloodgood, of West Seventh street, were driving down Park avenue, near Fourth street, early yesterday afternoon, their horse became frightened at a dog which ran in front of it. The horse jumped suddenly causing the holdback strap of the harness to break and throwing the wagon on its heels. This frightened the horse still more and it ran away. The young women made every effort to stop the runaway, but without success. Several attempts on the part of pedestrians met with the same result.

Although badly frightened Miss VanBoekerck pluckily guided the horse through the maze of traffic on Park avenue. The wagon was just about to collide with one owned by Frank Linke, which was standing on West Front street, when the runaway was captured by Joseph Harris, of Manning avenue. Beyond a few cuts on the horses heels and a broken whiffletree, no damage resulted.

RETAIL CLERKS MET.

Will Organize a Local Branch of the National Union in This City Shortly.

The attendance at the retail clerks' meeting held last evening was by far the largest of any which has yet taken place. Organizer Gibson was again present and completed arrangements for the formal organizing of a local union. Sixty members are already assured and before the charter roll is signed, which it is expected will be done next week, this number will be increased to 100.

The union will also be constituted on the plan of a benevolent organization paying sick benefits and death claims. The final steps will be taken at the next meeting which is to be held Wednesday evening.

AT ANTIETAM COMMAND.

Will Go to Westfield Sunday, May 19, For Special Service.

The appointment of a pension committee was the important business transacted by Antietam Command, No. 1, Union Veterans' Union, at its meeting in G. A. R Hall last evening. The members of the committee are Col. Perry, Wm. H. Day and Fred Wendell.

An invitation extended to attend the Westfield M. E. church service Sunday evening, May 19, was accepted. On that occasion the pastor, Rev. Mr. Anderson, will preach a special sermon for the members of the Union Veterans' Union of this vicinity.

The mustering in of one new member was another feature of last evening's programme.

Let Him go With Warning.

James Corrigan, who claims New York as his home, was arrested at the North Avenue station early yesterday morning by Patrolman McCarthy on a charge of vagrancy. City Judge Runyon at the hearing this morning after warning Corrigan to keep away from the depot discharged him.

To See Council Instituted.

A new council, Degree of Pocohontas, will be instituted this evening at Paterson and several local members will attend. Great Prophet Wm. Newcorn and Prophet Francis J. Bistz, of this city, will also be present.

MUCH ACCOMPLISHED DURING THE YEAR.

Annual Reports Presented at Trinity Reformed Church Last Evening.

MANY INTERESTING FACTS.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING MARKED THE TWENTY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY.

Now Has a Membership of 544—Church Benevolences Were $1,692.99—What Has Been Done at Marconnier Chapel—Interesting Reports.

The annual meeting of Trinity Reformed church, as well as its twenty-first anniversary, was held last evening. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., presided. In speaking of the anniversary, Mr. Schenck told that the church was organized in 1880 with fifty-five members, and fifty-four members in the Sunday-school. Today the church membership is 544 and that of the Sunday-school 510. This statement was augmented with another one showing in detail the membership of the church up to April 1.

This statement showed that there are 255 families in the church membership. During the year there were received forty-three members, twenty-four on confession of faith and nineteen by certificate. The total number of communicants is 544. There were fourteen infants baptized during the year and ten adults. Thirteen members were dismissed to other churches and eleven members died as follows: Isaac Lance, Mrs. Cornelia VanDeveer, Mrs. Catherine Goodman, Phillip P. VanArsdale, John Rittenhouse, Mrs. Margaret Wallace Lee, Mrs. Henrietta Remsen, John H. Krymer, Mrs. Lucy A. Marsh, Fred Talmadge Ross and Mrs. Ella Augusta Pope. Mr. Schenck stated that he had officiated at twenty-three funerals during the year.

E. E. Anthony, who has been superintendent of the Sunday-school since 1884, presented a very interesting report. This showed that nearly $800 had been raised during the year, and the expenses were $448 50. Every bill is paid. The membership at present is as follows: Teachers, 10; officers, 41; adult scholars, 323; primary scholars, 136; total 510. A year ago it was 470. This is a net gain of 40 The average attendance was 306. Twenty-one members of the school have united with the church.

Miss Remsen, superintent of the home department, reported that her department was organized January 1, 1900, and soon afterwards had a membership of seventy. Several have joined the Sunday-school and some have been dismissed, leaving the membership about the same as at first. The offering during the year was $56 23. There are now six visitors in the department.

The report presented by H. W. Marshall, superintendent of Marconnier chapel, was most flattering. It showed that there has been raised for general purposes $471.33 and for missions $36. The membership of the chapel is eight-six with an average attendance of fifty-five. There were received during the year seven members and the total number of communicants is twenty-two.

Mr. Schenck presented the report for the Ladies' Christian Work Society, showing that there was raised and expended during the year, $375. This worthy society has a membership of nearly fifty with an average attendance of thirty.

In the absence of the president and the vice-president, F. E. Smith presented the report for the Senior Christian Endeavor Society. This showed the membership to be 117 active and eight associate. During the past six months twenty-nine new members were received and six applications were received at the last meeting. The average attendance during the past four months was seventy. The total receipts were $102 11, and there is a balance of 23 16. There were $68 65 raised for the missionary fund and $6.25 for the church building fund.

Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, presented her report showing the average attendance for the year to be thirty-nine. There was raised and given for various objects $44 50 and there is a balance of $1.50 in the treasury.

Mrs. Will F. Williams reported for the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters, showing an active membership of eleven and one honorary. The sum of $5 was given to both the

LITERARY.

A new short serial by Date Douglas Wiggin, to run through three months, is the leading feature of the May Scribner. Mrs. Wiggin's delightful humor, revealed so charmingly in the Penelope books, appears in every page of "The Diary of a Goose Girl." A young student of social questions, Robert Alston Stevenson, presents a most impartial study of "Saloons" in a great city. Walter A. Wyckoff, the author of "The Workers," also presents a social picture in his article "With Iowa Farmers." John Fox, Jr., concludes his presentation of "The Southern Mountaineer." His two articles have made real and vivid an important political and social element in three great States. Among the short stories in the number are another Raffles adventure by Hornung, a railroad story by Louis C Senger, and a tale of adventure on the Isthmus of Panama by Walter S Meriwether. These are all illustrated. The artists represented in this very rich number include Henry McCarter, John LaFarge, F.C.Yohn, W. Glackens, Claude A. Shepperson, Guerin and Miss Louise L. Heustis.

Jacob A. Riis' autobiography, published under the significant title, "The Making of an American," in The Outlook, continues to attract attention and forms one of the most popular serial features ever published in that periodical. The instalment contained in the May magazine number dwells in a somewhat humorous way on many incidents and adventures which befell the young Danish immigrant in his attempt to gain a foothold in American life. The full page illustrations are by Thomas Fogarty, who is rapidly coming into prominence as one of the best of American magazine artists. $3 a year. The Outlook Company, 287 Fourth avenue, New York.

Charles Dana Gibson and Malcolm Strauss are the two best American artists in line drawings. Gibson's "American Queen" has become famous, and Strauss' conception of her, which for May decks the front cover of The American Queen, is, in its style, quite as beautiful as the Gibson conception. It is very effective. Besides the usual short stories, well illustrated, the fancy work and the outdoor sports articles, The American Queen has this month the opinions of two celebrated New York physicians—a man and a woman—on "The Benefits to be Derived by Women From Judicious Outdoor Exercise."

Shudders at His Past.

To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by L. W. Randolph. Only 50 cents.

Some Plainfield People Fully Realize It Now.

When the back aches from kidney ills,
There's a certain way to find relief.
A sure way to be cured.
Doan's Kidney Pills will do it.
Plainfield people endorse this claim.

Mr. Robert Love, of 44 Duer street, member of the firm of Love Brothers, grocers, of 257 West Front street, says: "I suffered from kidney complaint for eight or nine years—pain across the back and a lameness over the kidneys. Colds always settled there and aggravated it. At last my back grew weaker and any heavy lifting or too much standing or sitting gave me additional pain. In the morning my back bothered me greatly until I moved about and took some exercise when it became better to a certain extent. I doctored and used different kinds of so-called kidney cures, but it was throwing money away. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended in our paper, and being in bad shape at the time, I got a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store. Before taking half of it my condition was greatly improved and continuing their use, all the pain left me."

IOWA GREETS CONGER

Home State Has Warm Welcome For Chinese Minister.

GOVERNOR SHAW AT RECEPTION.

Prominent People From All Parts of the State Flock to Council Bluffs Wearing Conger Buttons.

DES MOINES, May 2.—The special train bearing United States Minister E. H. Conger and party arrived in Des Moines at 10 o'clock last night. An immense crowd of people was at the station to greet the distinguished Iowan. With his party he was quickly transferred from the train to a carriage amid the cheers of a multitude and, escorted by a drum corps of veterans, passed up Fourth street to the major's home, just outside of the business district. There were no ceremonies, the party having had such a busy day at Council Bluffs and across the state that they were glad of an opportunity to rest. The formal welcome will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Auditorium, followed by a brilliant reception at the statehouse in the evening.

On the trip across the state from Council Bluffs last evening the train stopped at Avoca, where 1,000 persons greeted Major Conger; at Atlantic, where 3,000 were at the station; at Stuart, where another thousand waited, and at Dexter, Major Conger's old home, where the entire population turned out to affectionately greet him as "Governor" Conger. At each of these points Major Conger appeared and spoke briefly and shook the hands of all who could get within reach. Major Conger has grown perceptibly older since leaving here some years ago, and his hair appears much grayer.

EDWIN H. CONGER.

Major Conger was accorded a hero's reception by the people of his state as he first set foot on Iowa soil at Council Bluffs. His private car arrived in the city station of the Northwestern promptly at 11 o'clock and was greeted by more than 1,000 people who had assembled to do the first honors to the returning minister. The formal welcome began at 11:30 o'clock. Repeated cheers for Conger were heard during the reception, and the crowds were bright with gay colored ribbons and buttons bearing the name "Conger."

While the reception was at its height the special party from Des Moines arrived at the hotel, headed by a band. Governor Leslie M. Shaw and A. B. Cummins were enthusiastically cheered as they entered the rotunda.

Whitelaw Reid Injured.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2.—A Raymond excursion train ran into the rear of limited No. 2 at Yuba pass, four miles east of Emerald Gap, Cal. The private car of D. O. Mills was on the rear of the limited and was badly damaged. Fireman James Saunders was instantly killed, his skull being crushed, his back broken and his legs mangled and crushed. D. O. Mills and his granddaughter and Whitelaw Reid and his wife had just seated themselves at the dining table in the rear of their car when the crash came. All were more or less bruised and scratched, but none was seriously injured. Whitelaw Reid received an ugly cut in the face. Several train employees received slight injuries.

Dug Up a Kettle of Gold.

AKRON, O., May 2.—Joseph Meyers, employed on the old Oscar Osborne farm, dug up a kettle containing $3,600 in gold. It was found near the barn. This is the second discovery of gold made on the place, making a total of more than $5,000. Osborne's relatives have always contended that there was $20,000 hidden in various places. Edgar Johnson is now serving a life sentence in the Ohio penitentiary for the murder of Osborne. It is said that the murder of Osborne was the result of his refusal to tell where the gold was hidden.

Driver's Neck Broken.

KINGSTON, N. Y., May 2.—Henry Coon, a brickyard employee, was instantly killed at Glasco. He was on top of a load of wood, and driving under a kiln shed the team became unmanageable. Coon was caught between the load and the low roof. His neck was broken and his head crushed.

Coal Find In Jamaica.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, May 2.—Much interest has been excited by the discovery of what is believed to be a very large coal deposit on property near Kingston. Tests made show the coal in question to be equal to the Welsh article. A company is forming to immediately work the deposit.

Drowned In the Androscoggin.

BRUNSWICK, Me., May 2.—John Prescott Mayer, Jr., a Bowdoin college sophomore and son of a wealthy resident of Newton, Mass., was drowned in the Androscoggin river by the capsizing of a canoe yesterday afternoon. A college chum was saved.

A Librarian's Promotion.

UTICA, N. Y., May 2.—Melvin G. Dodge, Hamilton college, '90, and librarian of the college several years, has been appointed librarian of Leland Stanford university, California, at a salary of $5,000 a year.

NEARING THE GULF.

Crescent City's First Greeting to a President.

A WARM SOUTHERN WELCOME.

Journey Across Mississippi Creates Much Enthusiasm—Elaborate Banquet Last Evening—Trip to Be Resumed Tonight.

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—The presidential party traveled across the cotton belt yesterday from Memphis almost to the gulf of Mexico. Down the low lying, rich Yazoo valley, fertile as that of the Nile, it went to Vicksburg, teeming with its memories of 30 years ago, thence east to Jackson, the capital of Mississippi, and from there down into the land of the magnolia and orange to the old romantic city near the mouth of the Mississippi, with its traditions of French and Spanish rule.

The outpourings of the people to see the presidential train along the route were larger, if anything, than on the two previous days, and the demonstrations at Vicksburg and Jackson, the two principal stops, were very striking. The visit to Vicksburg was in some respects the most interesting yet made. Here a triumphal arch of cotton bales, with the magic word "Expansion," pointed out to the president as he passed under it the path of the new south.

Although it had not been intended to make any stops after leaving Jackson, the train was halted at several of the smaller towns where cotton mills are located to permit the president to see and speak to the operatives. At some of the stations the crowds actually impeded the progress of the train, and the engineer was obliged to slow down to avoid danger of running over enthusiastic people. As the sun was lowering the train crossed the bayous with their tangles of moss covered cypress and light oaks and, skirting Lake Pontchartrain, steamed into New Orleans.

This is the first time New Orleans has ever had a visit from the chief magistrate of the nation, and it was a royal reception that the old city extended to President McKinley. Mr. McKinley himself has been here. He made a notable speech here the year preceding his nomination for the presidency, and ex-President Cleveland was here upon one occasion during the interim between his two terms, but never before has a president while in office visited the Crescent City.

The air was filled with the blare of bands, the booming of cannon and the scream of whistles from the harbor craft as the train drew into the station. Here the president and his party were greeted by Governor Heard, Mayor Capdeville, Senators McEnery and Foster, the entire Louisiana congressional delegation, the city council and representatives of the various commercial exchanges. While the mayor was formally extending the hospitality of the city to the president a fine military band was completely drowning his words with New Orleans' favorite air, "Louisiana Lou."

The president and his cabinet passed out of the station between a line of smart looking militiamen on one side and a smarter looking line of young cadets from the Jesuit Military college on the other. The boys ranged in age from 8 to 14, but despite their youth they made a fine appearance in their gray uniforms as they presented arms to the presidential party. Outside the governor's staff, resplendent in gold lace and mounted on plunging chargers, awaited the presidential party.

The crowd around the station was so dense that it required the heroic efforts of the police to keep the path to the carriages clear. A big military parade, consisting of the Louisiana cavalry troop, the Washington artillery and all the militia from this end of the state, escorted the party along Camp and Canal streets to the new St. Charles hotel.

The city was liberally, but not lavishly, adorned with the national colors, but the crowds in the streets were tremendous. Never, except in Mardi Gras times, were they known to be so choked and jammed with surging humanity. The iron wrought galleries which embroider the fronts of the buildings here with their fine traceries fairly groaned under their burdens of human freight. The feature of the crowd was the great number of handsome women who watched the procession from the windows and galleries.

Mrs. McKinley and the ladies of the party dined quietly at the hotel and later received the ladies of New Orleans. The president and his cabinet, with the other gentlemen of the party, were given an elaborate banquet at the hotel in the evening. About 300 of the prominent men of New Orleans were present, and the banquet was said to have exceeded in every respect anything of a similar character attempted heretofore in this city.

The party drove about the city this morning and in the afternoon will take a sail along the river front. The presidential train will again resume its journey toward the Golden Gate at 6 o'clock this evening.

McClellan Monument Commission.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The commission in charge of the statue to be erected in Washington to General George B. McClellan met yesterday. Secretary Root was elected president and F. C. Squires secretary. Colonel Bingham, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, was made disbursing officer. The other members of the commission are Senator Wetmore and General Ruggles. A circular letter was drafted to be sent to different sculptors of this country asking them to submit models of the proposed statue.

What China Must Pay.

PARIS, May 2.—The foreign office has received a dispatch from Peking announcing that M. Pichon, the French minister, has presented the report of the committee on indemnity. The amount China is to pay has been fixed at 1,365,000,000 francs. How it is proposed that the indemnity be distributed among the powers is not set forth, but the dispatch does not mention The Hague.

May Day In Spain.

MADRID, May 2.—Several demonstrations occurred in Spanish cities yesterday, but there were no serious disturbances. At Barcelona a group of strikers pillaged the chapel of a convent and were dispersed by the troops.

President of Chile Ill.

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 2.—President Errazuriz is in ill health and will turn over the presidential duties to the prime minister, Senor Aniba1 Zanartu.

THE VENEZUELA CASE.

May Be Many Months Before Asphalt Controversy Is Tried.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The state department's information relative to the legal proceedings in Venezuela in connection with the asphalt controversy indicates that it will be many months before the issue will come to trial in the Venezuelan high court. As there is no disposition exhibited to dispossess the American concessionaires who are in possession pending the termination of the legal proceedings, the state department is entirely satisfied with the maintenance of the status quo as to this case. There are, however, other issues which may change the aspect of American affairs in Venezuela. An attorney named King, representing some of the interests connected with what is known as the Orinoco or Faribault concession, has laid before the state department complaints of arbitrary actions on the part of the Venezuelan government, and the department has notified Venezuela that it expects just treatment at its hands for American citizens and interests.

The official mail from Venezuela received by Mr. Pulido, the Venezuelan charge, continues to show a pacific and agreeable tone toward the United States. The Venezuelan authorities have taken notice of the fact that the unfriendly criticism of Venezuela made by some American newspapers has given way to more temperate discussion. On the whole the official advices show a reassuring state of feeling among those most influential in Venezuelan affairs. The personnel of President Castro's new cabinet is made known officially, and the minister of foreign affairs takes occasion, in stating that he will continue his duties, to pay a compliment to the Venezuelan charge at Washington for his discreet conduct of affairs here.

DEWEY CELEBRATES.

A Dinner by Officers Who Were In the Battle of Manila Bay.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Admiral Dewey's Chinese servant, who was with him during the battle of Manila Bay, swung a huge American flag from the flagstaff over the admiral's residence yesterday, recalling that it was the anniversary of that battle.

A dinner was given at the Raleigh hotel last night by 25 of the officers who participated in the battle, Admiral Dewey occupying the head of the table and having with him Captain Wildes, who commanded the Boston; Captain Lamberton of the flagship Olympia and Captain Walker of the Concord, together with many of the junior officers, who came from all parts of the country to join with the admiral in commemorating the day.

Many of the admiral's friends called on him during the day to pay their respects and to renew the congratulations over the event of three years ago.

A Deadly Quarrel.

WORCESTER, Mass., May 2.—John F. Reynolds, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, was shot dead yesterday afternoon by John P. Cummings. The men had been friends for years and on Tuesday evening had a quarrel. Cummings purchased a .32 caliber revolver and a box of cartridges and spent several hours walking about the city. The shooting occurred in Crompton park, where the men met. As far as the police can learn, Reynolds' death was deliberately planned by Cummings, and the men had been together but ten minutes when Cummings fired the shot which pierced Reynolds' heart.

Spurious Dies Captured.

MACON, Ga., May 2.—A solid car of whisky and brandy labels, dies and caps, said to be spurious, were captured at Eastman by Deputy United States Marshal Cliff Vigal, William H. Strauss, expert representative of several exporting and importing liquor firms of New York, and R. B. Thomas, special gauger for the government. The car was consigned to an Atlanta firm and was said to contain mill supplies.

Use For the Lampson Bequest.

NEW HAVEN, May 2.—The disposition of the Lampson bequest, which has just become available for use by Yale university, has been decided upon. The principal use to which it will be put will be the erection of a public lecture hall, to be known as the Lampson lyceum, at a cost of $150,000. Three new professorships—one in Greek, one in Latin and one in English—will be established also.

Canadians Challenge Oxford.

OXFORD, May 2.—A challenge has been received here by the Oxford University Athletic club from McGill university of Montreal and the University of Toronto to an athletic meeting to take place in Montreal previous to the Oxford-Cambridge and Harvard-Yale meeting at New York. The general opinion here is that the challenge should be accepted.

King Edward's Title.

LONDON, May 2.—At a meeting of the British Empire league it was disclosed that the colonial office has been in correspondence with the government of Canada in regard to including Canada in the title of King Edward. The result of the negotiations will not be made known until the correspondence is published later.

The Public Debt.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The public debt statement issued by the treasury department shows that at the close of business April 30, 1901, the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,072,745,256, a decrease for the month of $4,397,653. This decrease is largely accounted for by the purchase of bonds for the sinking fund.

Sick List Decreasing.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—A dispatch received from General MacArthur, at Manila, states that the hospital reports show 2,586 sick in hospital in the Philippines and 613 sick in quarters. This is 5.86 per cent, a less percentage of sick than has been shown at any time since United States troops were sent to the archipelago.

Mrs. Nation Returns to Jail.

WICHITA, Kan., May 2.—Mrs. Carrie Nation returned to Wichita after attending the funeral of her brother at Louisburg. She went directly to the jail and surrendered to await hearing on the charge of destroying saloon property.

Train Robbers Plead Guilty.

MACON, May 2.—O. W. Chestnut of Jacksonville and Cliff Jordan of Macon, charged with robbing an express car on the Central Railroad of Georgia, plead guilty and were sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary.

THE EXPOSITION BEGINS.

Buffalo Fair Not Ready — Formal Opening Later.

BUFFALO, May 2.—Under weather conditions more like the middle of March than the 1st of May the gates of the Pan-American exposition were thrown open unostentatiously yesterday morning, and admission fees to the fair were increased to 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children under 14 years of age. The exhibition is still incomplete. Although it was not intended to make any special display, merchants and citizens decorated their houses with flags, and the streets had a holiday appearance.

The air was raw, and a cold wind blew from the lake. Nevertheless there were many strangers in town and the attendance good, all things considered. A programme for the day had been arranged and was carried out at the fair grounds. The programme provided for the informal opening of the government building, a salute of 45 bombs, one for each state, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and the flight of 3,000 pigeons at 3 o'clock. The exposition was open until 11 o'clock last night, and there was an illumination of all the buildings as soon as darkness prevailed. The pigeons were from that part of the United States north of Georgia and east of the Mississippi river. Each bore a message announcing the opening of the fair. Band concerts by the Sixty-fifth and Seventy-fourth Regiment bands were also given.

Only a few places on the Midway were open for business, but it is thought that many persons will avail themselves of the days between now and May 20, when the formal opening will take place, to get familiar with the locations.

MORE SURRENDER.

Bolomen and Riflemen Lay Down Arms at Bangued.

MANILA, May 2.—Eighty riflemen and 1,000 bolomen have surrendered at Bangued, Abra province.

Colonels Juan and Blas Villamor, with 36 of their officers, ceremoniously took the oath of allegiance to the United States at Vigan yesterday in the presence of their entire force.

Advices received at the headquarters of the Federal party are to the effect that the last of the leaders of the rebel soldiers in the province of Ilocos Norte surrendered at Laoag. The province is entirely pacified now except for the presence of some banditti.

The steamship California brought 7,920 tons of raw sugar from Hawaii to Philadelphia.

Arabs, armed with bludgeons, attacked and plundered the village of Okuillalla, Algeria.

A company has been incorporated at Albany to build an electric road from Cattaraugus to Hamburg or Buffalo.

A baby buffalo was born in the Central park menagerie, New York. The baby weighs 60 pounds and has been named May, in honor of the month.

Quiet Anniversary In Porto Rico.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 2.—The first anniversary of the establishment of civil government in Porto Rico, which occurred yesterday, was in no way observed here. The trades unions, carpenters, masons, etc., voluntarily observed the day as Labor day. They held mass meetings, paraded through the streets and petitioned the acting governor, Mr. Hunt, to continue all the public works possible in order to relieve the destitution and misery existing in some parts of the island.

English Miners Favor Strike.

LONDON, May 2.—Reports from the coal mining districts indicate that a majority of the miners are in favor of the strike. They have had two years of prosperity, and the funds of their unions are overflowing. Therefore they are likely to welcome a holiday. It is admitted, however, by liberals and conservatives alike that their ill advised action will have no effect so far as a repeal of the coal tax is concerned. The whole country condemns the strike, which will tend to disorganize all the industries.

Money to Minister and Church.

NEW YORK, May 2.—By the will of Elizabeth W. G. Mead of Brooklyn the Rev. William W. Kelly, a former pastor of St. John's M. E. church of Brooklyn and now editor of The Methodist Review, will receive $30,000. In addition to this the will gives to the trustees of St. John's church the sum of $5,000 for church uses. Mrs. Mead was a member of St. John's.

Big Sale of Florida Timber Land.

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 2.—Abram West of Madison, Fla., has closed a trade with a large Michigan company headed by a Mr. Squires for 45,000 acres of timber land in Taylor county, Fla., at $4 an acre. It is understood the Michigan company expects to develop the lands with mills and naval stores factories.

Insane Woman Drowns Herself.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 2.—While insane Miss Harriet Benedict of Stone Bridge escaped from the house and threw herself into Wawayanda creek. She was dead when found.

THE LAST LONG TOM.

Boers Lose Their Big Gun and Flee.

TEN BURGHERS TAKEN PRISONERS.

Attack Made by Grenfell at Bergplantz—General Kitchener Reports Other Gains by British Columns.

LONDON, May 2.—A dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, May 1, says:

"Grenfell attacked the Boers at Bergplantz, near Halverstsberg, where the last Long Tom opened fire at 10,000 yards. Kitchener's scouts advanced to within 3,000 yards, when the gun was blown up, and the Boers fled. Ten of them were made prisoners.

"Other columns report 10 Boers killed, 6 wounded, 6 made prisoners and 60 surrendered and 30,000 rounds of ammunition captured. The British had 4 killed and 7 wounded."

Germany Asks Damages.

BERLIN, May 2.—A representative of the government has informed the reichstag committee on petitions that Germany has demanded £5,000 from Great Britain on account of certain Transvaal expulsions and that Great Britain had refused the demand on the ground that she did not wish to establish a precedent, but was investigating the whole subject. "The number of expelled persons," said a foreign office representative when the matter came up, "is 180, of whom 60 have already been indemnified. A part of the remainder have no right to claim indemnity because they fought against England or because of other patent reasons. The sound claims, however, are being vigorously championed. Great Britain has appointed a commission to decide upon the claims, following Germany's suggestion."

Salisbury Unable to Attend.

LONDON, May 2.—A meeting of the cabinet has been summoned, but Lord Salisbury, who will return in a few days, will not be able to attend. His health is not so good as the official announcements have led the public to believe. A recent dental operation caused him much trouble, and it is understood that he is perturbed over the revelations which Sir David Barbour, the financial adviser of Lord Kitchener, has unearthed in South Africa.

A Squeeze In Corn and Oats.

CHICAGO, May 2.—It developed on 'change yesterday that there is a corner in May corn and May oats, and before the end of the month the shorts will experience a squeeze such as has not been recorded in many years. It was delivery day, and George H. Phillips took large quantities of both wheat and corn and paid cash for it. Ordinarily with deliveries of 2,500,000 bushels of corn and 1,600,000 bushels of oats there would be a tendency for prices to decline. Instead Phillips was on the ground to prevent any such thing happening and as a result caused corn to sell at 50 cents, an advance of 1 cent over the best previous price of the season, and oats at 28⅝ cents, which is 1⅝ cents higher than they have previously sold.

Monument to South Carolina Poet.

CHARLESTON, May 2.—The monument to Henry Timrod was unveiled in Washington square yesterday afternoon before a large assemblage. It consists of a bronze bust in heroic size and panels by Valentine of Virginia on a granite pedestal and base and is a notable triumph of the sculptor's art. The fund was raised by the sale of an edition of 4,000 copies of Timrod's poems prepared and sold by the Timrod Memorial association, of which the Hon. W. A. Courtenay, an old friend of the poet, was the organizer and leading spirit.

Paris Express Robber Arrested.

PARIS, May 2.—The principal author of the robbery of the American Express company's office in Paris on the night of April 26, when three masked burglars escaped with 30,000 francs, has been arrested. His name is George Miller, and he was born in Chicago. For some time he has lived in Paris under the name of James Samuel, being employed in a barber shop. When arrested, he was found in possession of a part of the stolen funds, a number of dynamite cartridges and a set of burglar's tools.

Quarantine Date Extended.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Acting upon the recommendation of the surgeon general of the marine hospital service the secretary of the treasury has again extended the time in which free intercourse between the United States and Cuba will be permitted without quarantine restrictions. The time for the quarantine to take effect is now fixed at May 15, but the extension is made with the understanding that the order will be immediately repealed if yellow fever makes its appearance.

Machinists Strike In Buffalo.

BUFFALO, May 2.—At a meeting of machinists in International hall in this city at 2 o'clock yesterday morning it was decided to go on strike. Twelve hundred men in the city and about 300 in the county are affected by the decision. The demand is for a nine hour day. Many of the local shops have acceded to the demand and will not be affected by the strike.

Fresh Fighting In Manchuria.

PEKING, May 2.—It is persistently reported here that there has been fresh fighting between the Russians and the Chinese in Manchuria. No great credence is placed in such rumors, however, as it is believed they are circulated to show the necessity for an increase in the military strength of Russia.

Relieved of His Money.

SYRACUSE, May 2.—John Arnold of Fulton, Mo., on his way to Kings Point, N. Y., stopped off his train here last night and, meeting a stranger, entered a saloon to get a drink. Before he left he had been relieved of his bank roll containing about $300. He reported his loss to the police.

To Buy Patti's Residence.

LONDON, May 2.—It is asserted that King Edward contemplates the purchase of Craig-y-Nos castle, the residence of Mme. Adelina Patti (Baroness Rolf Cederstrom) in south Wales.

Quiet May Day In Italy.

ROME, May 2.—Both in this city and in the provinces May day was passed quietly, and orderly meetings were held.

Mr. Murphy's Position.

It is seldom thought desirable by the leaders of any political party to allow a candidate of any prominence to manage his own campaign. The atmosphere, which will inevitably surround a candidate, no matter how clear-headed, is not conducive to a careful and impartial survey of the political battle ground. It is therefore usually thought better to place the conduct of the campaign in the hands of a man who can avoid the glamour of the candidacy and view the situation as it is.

Despite this fact, there is now considerable talk going the rounds of the State to the effect that Franklin Murphy will not resign his place as chairman of the Republican State committee even though he should be nominated for governor. Such a thing is possible, of course, but it is hardly probable. Each place has sufficient duties attached to it to satisfy the most enthusiastic worker, and a combination of the two would be a burden which, it is hardly likely, Mr. Murphy would care to assume.

During the campaign which preceeded his election, Governor Odell, of New York, directed the Republican State campaign in New York besides being a candidate. Mr. Murphy is a very able man and no doubt has the capacity for the double duties. It is hardly likely, however. From the appearance of things at the present date, there seems no doubt but that he will be the gubernatorial candidate of the New Jersey Republicans this fall.

The Evening Times, the new Democratic daily newspaper of Elizabeth, made its initial bow to the world yesterday afternoon. Its editor and manager is William W. St. John, who was for five years city editor of The Daily Press. The paper has a neat typographical appearance and contains considerable news of Elizabeth and vicinity. While it announces its allegiance to the cause of Democracy, The Times declares that it will give the news fairly and impartially. The career of this newcomer in the journalistic circles of New Jersey will be watched with interest. Mr. St. John has the best wishes of all his friends in this new venture.

The regular May meeting of the Common Council will be held Monday evening. Among the topics which will come up at the meeting will be the report of the committee on streets and sewers on the subject of municipal ownership. The members of that committee recently held a conference with the officials of the Plainfield Water Supply Company and the results of that conference will then be made public. The report will be awaited with great interest. The report of the Board of School Estimate on the asked for appropriations of the Board of Education will also be considered.

It is probable that a decision is soon to be reached regarding the site for the new buildings of Muhlenberg Hospital. Most prominent, from the public point of view, is the site offered by James E. Martine. There are other sites, however, which are favorably looked on by members of the Board of Governors of the hospital. There is not yet a complete unanimity of opinion concerning the location and it is now a question as to how long it will be before the members of the board will arrive at the same conclusion.

Whenever any of the public men of this land happen to fall victim to a slight illness, the reports concerning their condi ion is promptly exaggerated far beyo d the bounds of reason. Stories have been sent forth from Elizabeth concerning the illness of Governor Voorhees. Some of these despatches have made him out a very sick man. While the Governor was undoubtedly ill, he was not in the condition which those despatches would lead the public to believe.

It is a subject for great regret that the managements of the baseball teams of the Plainfield High School and Leal's School could not finally discover a common basis on which to work. The series of games between the two teams will not be played this spring. It is the first time that any trouble of that nature has seriously interfered with the progress of inter-scholastic athletics in Plainfield

Nobody questions the integrity of the members of the Plainfield Board of Education. The only point which has been raised is that the members, in overzealousness perhaps to give the city the best possible schools, have been inclined to keep the full details of the situation in the public schools from the public. It is a well known fact that executive sessions of the board have been very numerous.

Now that the new eastbound station with the dividing fence and subway are in use, the railroad officials are doing everything possible to have the new station used as it should be. It is dangerous work to wander across the tracks and the more strictly the company's rules regarding that point are enforced, the better it will be.

The letter-carriers in Plainfield did not appear without a coat yesteday as many people supposed they would. The first day of May was the time set for the wearing of the spring uniforms of the carriers but the spring uniform is of the regulation grey, planned after the usual style, including a coat.

If there is any one who has not a high opinion of Plainfield, it is time that he took a stroll about the streets of this city and viewed the many well-kept and charming homes. There is not a city in New Jersey that is the equal of Plainfield.

Many expressions of regret have been heard that Plainfield is to lose such an able instructor as Albert B. Meredith, who has resigned his position in the Plainfield High School to accept the superintendency of schools at Nutley.

Three years have made a wonderful difference in the Philippines.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

Early Tuesday evening, passersby on the Watchung avenue bridge were astonished to see a crowd of young men and boys disporting themselves in a deep pool, just west of the structure. None of them wore the least vestige of clothing. The majority of those in the crowd were old enough to know better. Unless a more secluded spot is selected for their bathing operations in the future, some of the more daring ones will eventually find themselves in the city jail.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Will Try New Oven.

George Voehl, of West Front street, will give an initial trial tomorrow to the new Durhkop patent oven which has recenty been installed in his bakery. The oven is similar to those now in use in all large bakeries throughout the country.

To Try Case at Hoboken.

Lawyer Wm. Newcorn went to Hoboken this morning where he has a case to try in the district court. This afternoon he will appear in the Court of Chancery at Jersey City, where he will represent a party in an action.

Break in Roadway Repaired.

A bad break in the roadway in West Front street near Plainfield avenue occurred yesterday. Street Commissioner Gavett placed a red light at that point last night. The damage was repaired today.

Sunday-School Social.

A Sunday-school social will soon be arranged by the entertainment committee at the Park Avenue Baptist church which had charge of the entertainment given at the church Tuesday evening.

IMPORTANT

WHITE GOODS SALE.

We have consummated the largest purchase of White Goods in the history of our business. The lot represents the entire line of several of the largest cotton mills. There are about 300 styles, a variety which no N. Y. city house would be able to display. These goods are the pieces opened at the mills and from which their agents' samples are cut. They are all new, fresh and perfect. The variety is simply bewildering and the patterns bewitching. The inducement to buy so enormous a quantity was the ridiculously low prices quoted. We depend upon the good people of Plainfield to help us out with them.

More styles	at 15c "	" "	20c, 25c and 30c yd

A few rare values as high as 50c per yd.

If you want white goods for waists, skirts, dressing sacks, dresses, children's dresses or for any other purpose you should see these goods for they are beautiful and cheap beyond the telling. Don't write for samples, come and see the goods.

IN THE CARPET STORE.

We are showing a large line of the new American grass twine carpets. They are deservedly popular for they are very pretty and wear excellently. They are 36 inches wide, reversible and rapid sellers. We have rugs of the same in the following sizes—

18x36 at 75c 26x54 at 98c 30x60 at 1.25
36x72 at 1.50 9x12 at 9.50

Should be glad to show them to you.

Our Carpet store is an extremely busy place at present, but not so busy but that the wants of all may be properly attended to. If interested in new floor coverings by all means visit us, for our stock of Biglows, Wiltons, Moquettes, Axminsters, Savonneries, Body Brussels, etc., is replete with choice patterns. An unusually strong line of all wool, extra super Ingrains for bedrooms is also shown. Oilcloths and Linoleum in a great many designs. Shades made to order. Cocoa Mats, Rubber Mats, Trunks, Curtain Poles, Brass Rods and a thousand and one carpet store accessories.

Dunellen, May 2—At a business meeting of the young men's class of the Presbyterian church, held Tuesday evening, steps were taken toward the formation of a baseball team to represent the borough during the coming season. Several additions were made to the committee having in charge the securing of grounds for a tennis court and they will make their report at the next meeting. If permission is procured from the Borough Council, the tennis court will be located in the park.

The returned spinsters from Oklahoma will positively make their appearance at the Presbyterian church this evening and relate their many experiences in that territory. The various narratives will no doubt be very interesting. In addition to the spinsters, the ladies' orchestra will be present and entertain the assemblage with musical selections.

The Dunellen Brick Works are now in full operation and bricks are being turned out at the rate of 25,000 a day. There are twenty men now at work and this number will be increased in a short time. It is expected before the season is well advanced the output will be doubled.

In Justice Warden's court yesterday, judgment for the full amount and costs was rendered for the plaintiff in the contract case of Harris against Frank. The former was represented by W. K. McClure, of Plainfield.

A meeting of the local Board of Trade will be held this evening in the borough building. All members and interested citizens are requested to be present as it is expected the project of advertising the town will be considered.

Mrs. P. W. Brakeley, and Miss Nettie Brakeley, of Easton, Pa., who is visiting her, left yesterday for Jersey City for a few days' visit with relatives.

A large attendance listened to the missionary address given by Miss Mair, of Plainfield, in the Methodist church last evening.

Miss Helen Terry, of Westfield, is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Terry.

Miss Emma Baldwin is greatly improved from her recent severe illness.

Miss May Apgar was the guest of Newark friends Tuesday.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence.)

New Market, May 2—The social given at the home of Mrs. Stanley Day, last evening, was very well attended. Music and games made the hours pass pleasantly after which refreshments were served. The affair was under the auspices of the Willing Workers of the Church of the Holy Innocents.

J. H. Adelmann, of the Hotel Nelson, is already settled in his new quarters and is making prepartions for a successful summer. It is his intention to give a reception to his Plainfield friends in a short time.

Surrogate Furman, of Middlesex county, has granted letters of administration for the estate of the late Simeon R Dayton to Elsie R. Dayton, Charles F. Dayton and Furman Walker.

The new tonsorial artist, who is located next the Hotel Nelson, is making improvements about his shop. He has already had electric lights installed.

Miss Nellie Brown is entertaining her cousin, Miss Grace Hurtt, of Manasquan.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence.)

Scotch Plains, May 2—There are strong probabilities that in the near future the authorities will discuss the question of sewerage disposal for this vicinity. Owing to the rapidly increasing population and the desirability of the place for residence purposes, the present manner of sewerage disposal is too primitive and not altogether conducive to good health From a sanitary standpoint there is plenty of room for complaint. The question of a change has been brought about by the recent outbreak of fever, many persons believing that the sanitary conditions have had something to do with it. Dr. Hunt, of the State Board of Health, recently visited this place, and, while he did not find any immediate cause for action, it is understood that he suggested some plan whereby the cesspool system can be done away with.

Charles Wade, the grocer, is now moving from his present location in the postoffice building to the Marsh building corner of Park and Bartle avenues. The place he vacates has not as yet been leased.

Elaborate preparations are being made by the teachers of the public school for the Arbor Day exercises, which will be observed at the school Monday, May 6.

"Deerhurst," the beautiful home of Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, is beginning to assume its summer attire and is the admiration of all who pass by the place.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold its regular meeting this evening, when business of importance will be considered.

Pastor Shott of the Baptist church will teach the Sunday school lesson tomorrow evening at the service to be held in the church.

There will be a game of baseball between the local team and the Westfield team Saturday afternoon if the weather permits.

Miss Ethel Marsh, of Front street, has recovered from a recent severe illness.

Mr. Hollingsworth, of Brooklyn, has been spending a short time at home.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

AT THE THEATRES.

Something About the Attractions Which Plainfield Theatre-Goers May Care to Witness.

The closing version of "QuoVadis," which is to be the closing performance at Music Hall tonight, should excite a good deal of interest. There is always a sense of pleasurable excitement in the coming of a new play, and when it is developed from a widely read and popular novel, the interest naturally ranges very close to fever heat. Scarcely any book of comparatively recent publication has been more widely read than "Quo Vadis." It was first produced last season at McVickar's Theatre in Chicago under the able management of F. C. Whitney and Edwin Knowles, and New York was electrified by the magnificent spectacle, and its memorable run at the big New York Theatre extended far beyond the coming of the warm period, and outlived every other production in town. There can be no doubt that an honest effort has been made to develop the dramatic value of "Quo Vadis" in an entirely adequate and dignified manner. Stanislaus Stange, who is widely experienced as an opera librettist and dramatic writer, prepared the play from the original Polish manuscript of Sienkiewicz, and Messrs. Whitney and Knowles, experienced and liberal producers, are the responsible managers of the production, and their faith in the work is evidenced by the fact that they gave carte blanche to scenic artists and costumers, with a view of obtaining the most desired results. More than a carload of scenery is required to set the play, and the numerous costumes prepared in Europe from authentic models, add an element of essential interest to the production. Music is also made a feature and a chorus of twenty voices, trained by Julian Edwards, who has composed a special score for this play, add significance to several of the scenes. Dancers are also employed to represent the corybantes, and, as if to make the success doubly sure, the speaking parts, thirty-two in number, are assigned to talented persons, many of whom have won distinction in the dramatic field. "Quo Vadis" as a play and production is worthy of the most thoughtful and liberal attention, and it is assured that Mr. Stange has followed the Sienkiewicz story with the utmost fidelity.

CHAPTER X.

The eighth day was characterized by events which discouraged the passengers, who were anxious to end their long confinement to the ship. A heavy fog had fallen during the night and the vessel, with deafening shrieks of the foghorn, was groping her way as slowly as a great raft. A delay of not less than 12 hours might be counted on, declared expert judges of nautical matters.

Mrs. Goddard and Mrs. Nolan were as usual on deck sitting side by side when the second officer passed. He was hailed by an anxious voyager.

"How long is this going to last, really?" asked the passenger.

"Oh, it's lifting rapidly," was the answer. "You won't hear the foghorn much longer. In fact, we are running into quite a gale. It will strike us about dark."

Mrs. Goddard nudged her companion, and when the speakers had walked on, she said in a whisper:

"Things are working beautifully."

"Beautifully," echoed Mrs. Nolan, whose heavy conscience had intensified her natural dread of dangers at sea.

"Yes, bad weather is exactly what I want." And the plotting woman at once set herself to the study of storm indications.

By eight o'clock that night the sea was rocking, frothing, tossing in fury. The two women shut themselves in their room and held a whispered conference over their final movements. During his rounds over the slippery, spray-washed deck the captain rapped at their door. Mrs. Nolan went to it.

"Passengers are forbidden to go on deck," he said. "Everybody below will stay downstairs. The wind is strong and the sea high. Keep your door locked. How is Mrs. Goddard?"

"Thank you, sir, she seems a little excited, but I think she will soon be asleep," and she closed the door as he walked away.

"That was a splendid reply," said Mrs. Goddard, approvingly. "Everything is working well; the deck will be entirely deserted. To be on the safe side, wait till ten o'clock. Remember, you are to do it all now. It depends on you. If they press you too hard for explanations, go into hysterics. You surely can do that."

"I presume I can; but oh, my Lord!"

"Don't begin that; we are here for battle. Do you remember every detail now?"

"As if they made up my whole life and my life depended on my knowing them."

"Well, I think you'll do. Don't forget to yell at the top of your lungs, and if they should want to open the closet don't let them do it, if you have to knock somebody down."

"I'll prevent it if I can. It would be awful for us to be caught in this. We must carry it through."

"Be sure there is no one looking when—when I am supposed to make the plunge." Mrs. Goddard made a peep-hole at the side of the window curtain, which was always drawn down, and peered out on deck. "It's as dark as Erebus out there," she said.

Then they sat down and remained silent till the bells struck the hour of ten.

"Now, lock me in. Remember, when the coast is clear for me to come out, you are to signal three times softly—so!" And Mrs. Goddard rapped on the door of the closet with her knuckles.

"I understand," said Mrs. Nolan, firmly. "Now get in and let's have it over with."

"You needn't look so excited," smiled Mrs. Goddard, as she sat down on the stool in the closet and drew her skirts round her ankles.

"I am not any more so than you are," retorted Mrs. Nolan. "I've seen you in a good many tight places, and I have never seen just such a funny look about your mouth."

Mrs. Goddard made a failure of her next smile.

"I actually feel as if I were being buried alive; ugh! Shut me in and act your part as if your salvation depended on it."

Mrs. Nolan made no response as she shut the door; she seemed to have lost her voice. She turned the key, drew it from the lock, and put it into her pocket. As she did so her fingers touched its duplicate. This gave her an idea, and she rapped on the closet door and then opened it.

"Well?" inquired the prisoner, with a white, startled stare.

"I have both the keys," explained Mrs. Nolan. "Perhaps you ought to keep one. If anything should happen—any accident—to me you would be in a fix. This morning I found that the door could be opened from the inside."

"Lucy, you are sharper than I am; I never would have thought of that."

The ship rose on a great swell and rolled far over on its side, throwing Mrs. Nolan into the closet. She braced herself against the wall and held on to the swinging door till the ship had righted itself.

"Don't lose any more time," said Mrs. Goddard. "Wait until we go over on one of those swells and then give the alarm."

Mrs. Nolan locked the closet again and then went to the outer door and opened it. A fierce wind blew upon her and a blinding cloud of spray drenched her to the skin. But when it had lifted a little she looked out and along the deck. No one was in sight. The Cleopatra rose on a giant wave and slowly rolled over on her side. It was the moment Mrs. Nolan was expecting. She ran to the railing of the deck, leaned towards the water and then began to scream at the top of her lungs. So well was the moment chosen that not only was she not seen before she desired, but it was not till she had uttered half a dozen piercing screams that her voice was heard by the captain on the bridge.

A deck-hand was the first to reach her, and so well was she skilled in the part she was playing that she only pointed to the water and continued to utter yell after yell.

"What is the matter?" he shouted.

She continued to scream, and point to the water.

"What in the devil is wrong here?" yelled the captain, the next on the spot.

"Overboard!" cried Mrs. Nolan. A sudden dash of spray filled her mouth and she coughed. The ship gave a great lurch and she would have fallen had the two men not supported her between them.

"Overboard? Who's overboard?" thundered the captain.

"Mrs. Goddard!" gasped Mrs. Nolan. "She sprang up! I was in my room! She opened the door! I was just in time to see her break from the room! She said something was after her—trying to kill her! She sprang over there—there! I had caught hold of her dress, but she tore loose!"

Here Mrs. Nolan began to show signs of hysteria. The captain swore roundly. He dragged the woman to the door of her stateroom, gave one hurried look round the room and then saying to the sailor: "Take care of her," he was off to stop the ship. A moment later the bell rang sharply. The engines were reversed and the ship floundered helplessly, dangerously, in the trough of the sea. The boat-gang clattered up from below and there was a faint, storm-muffled shouting of commands as a boat was being lowered.

"Too late!" yelled the captain. "This sea would send us to the bottom! Nothing can be done now!"

There was a moment's pause in the noisy manipulation of ropes and tackle, then the sailors drew the boat back to its place and fastened it there. The ship's engines throbbed sluggishly and there was an attempt, perhaps only for the sake of appearances, to send the ship back in the vicinity of the spot where it was when the alarm was given; but dangerous head-winds rendered this impracticable. In a few minutes the Cleopatra was forging ahead as if nothing unusual had happened. Mrs. Nolan refused to remain in her stateroom. She escaped the sailor when his back was turned and ran along the deck wringing her hands and wailing. A group of passengers had ventured to the head of the stairs and stood shivering in the wind and spray. A woman in this group caught Mrs. Nolan in her arms and tried to console her.

"Don't take on," she said. "You are not to blame. She was crazy as a loon. She told me to-day that the captain had been hired by some enemy to put her in irons. What did her folks mean by sending her over with just you—such a frail woman?"

"Oh, I don't know, don't ask me!" cried Mrs. Nolan. "She's dead, oh, she's dead!"

The captain was approaching and Mrs. Nolan showed signs of hysterics again.

"I'll take her to her state-room," said the woman.

"I wish you would," said the captain, with an oath. "She's as crazy as her mistress!"

The woman who had proffered her kind offices accompanied Mrs. Nolan to the state-room.

"Now, try not to think of it," she said. "I know it is awful, but the poor thing is better off as she is than to go on having such strange notions. Of course, I mean if there was no cure for her, and there seldom is, you know."

Mrs. Nolan, now that she had such easy credulity to play upon, saw the expediency of getting rid of her visitor so she calmed down wonderfully.

"When I once get to sleep I'll be all right," she declared. "I shall want the door locked. I can't stand the idea of her, poor woman—"

"I'll ask the captain to let me stay with you if you like," and the speaker looked round at the elegant appointments of the comfortable room with a covetous look in her eyes.

"No, thank you. I'd rather be by myself. I was accustomed to being alone till she and I left New York."

"Oh, just as you feel about it!" said the woman, slightly disappointed. "Well, I think I'd better be going. If they know I'm here all the passengers will want to flock round you."

She had hardly left when the captain looked in. His face was deeply troubled.

"I shall want all the details about Mrs. Goddard, so as to make out a report to the ship's company and the authorities when we land—but tomorrow will do."

"I shall have a better head then," said Mrs. Nolan. "I am awfully upset."

"You seem to be blaming yourself," he said, in a kind tone. "I don't think you need do this. I was very much worried the day she spoke so peculiarly to me, but I supposed she had recovered."

"She has been as rational as anybody till to-day," said Mrs. Nolan, wiping her eyes, which somehow—thanks to the spray and constant rubbing—were wet and red. "I was in my room there just thinking of going to bed when she sprang up, and before I knew it she was out on deck, and—oh, it was awful!"

"Try to think of something else," said the captain; "it seems to agitate you. Good night."

She stopped him with a gesture.

"I wish you would not let the passengers disturb me," she whimpered. "She and I were dear friends, and you see—"

"You shall have all the privacy you wish," he promised her. "I shall see to that."

When he had gone, Mrs. Nolan locked the door behind him. She looked to see if the window-curtains were well down and then she turned out the electric light. The ship, giving a big roll, almost threw her off her feet, but she held on to the bed and crept to the closet. She gave three soft raps, then inserted the key and opened the door. She groped about till she caught hold of the prisoner's warm hands and drew her out.

"Well?" whispered Mrs. Goddard.

"I did my best."

"How did it work?" was the next whisper, after a pause.

"I think you will not complain. They have swallowed it whole."

"If you did half as well on deck as you did here with the woman and the captain we have nothing to fear. I laughed several times. Lucy, you are a gem!"

"It's getting into port that I dread," said Mrs. Nolan.

"Leave that to me. I have two plans," replied Mrs. Goddard. "Now, I'm going to bed," she laughed. "This sitting up late is not good for us. Are the window-curtains secure and the door locked?"

"Yes."

"Well, be sure you wake me in the morning at least half an hour before you ring for the stewardess. If anybody should come to the door while I am asleep go to it and say that you are not dressed and cannot admit anyone. Have the stewardess bring your breakfast and a big pot of coffee."

IGNORING AN IMPORTANT QUESTION.

The lasting quality of coal is of as much importance as its price per ton. Give that due consideration. Our are apt to cause indigestion or any one of numerous other stomach ills. Nevertheless they are a convenience and perhaps a necessity. It is foolish, however, to endure needless pain and discomfort arising from them. Every man and woman engaged in office work and accustomed to eat quick lunches, should carry a 5-cent carton of Ripans Tabules and take one after eating to counteract the bad effect of the doughnuts, pie, sandwiches, coffee or other indigestible food. It will afford instant and lasting relief and help the stomach to get out of the food whatever good there may be in it.

R·I·P·A·N·S

OPEN AIR CURES.

Women Who Live Indoors Breathe In Disease and Old Age.

A handsome girl was married to the man she liked best. She was tall and noble looking, with strong physique and firm, plump flesh, one of those whom the Almighty built to live a century and never know a day of ill health. She had a happy home, with no secret sorrow preying on her vitals.

Yet in two or three years this strong and handsome young woman became distressed and harrowed up and unhealthy, nervous almost to the point of hysterics, looking far older than her real age. What was the matter? Her husband said:

"Oh, if I could only get her outdoors!"

He hit the point exactly.

Let no woman say she has not time for walks or bicycle rides year in and year out, winter and summer. She has plenty of time. If our system of living were not so villainous, if women did not shut themselves in embroidering and making alleged ornamentation for their houses and their persons, they would have time to adorn their bodies with real and lasting beauty by steeping them in the elastic, crystal pure light and ether. To stay indoors, as nine-tenths of the sex do, is like living in a dark stable. It is worse, for if they could only see the air in which they live they would find it unclean beyond description with great-grandfather's rheumatism, mother-in-law's bad stomach, Uncle Jonas' bad temper and Susan Jane's deceitfulness. All this we breathe into our very souls, besides the emphasized infirmities of our own, which are the worst of all, when we stay indoors and starve ourselves of light and air. It is like—faith, your pardon—but it is like taking a drink of dirty water, not once a day, but all the time.

Get outdoors!

FLOWERING TREES.

Lack of Them In the Surroundings of Our Rural Homes.

Laburnums dropping wells of fire.

One of the joys of a cycling trip through England and northern France in May and June is the constant sight of splendid flowering trees and shrubs. The leading varieties of these are little known in America—more's the pity. Two of the most beautiful of the trees are the laburnum and hawthorn. Both will thrive in many parts of the United States, and they ought this day to be making our country landscape glad with their beauty and fragrance.

The laburnum—how shall one describe its beauty? Its flowers appear before the leaves. What they are like may be known from the name given to the tree by the common people of England. They call it "golden chain." The flowers are in shape like a sweet pea and trail in great pendulous bunches of the purest yellow known to man. They cluster so thickly that not a trace of tree or branch can be seen among them, and the mass is so vivid that it can be seen more than a mile away. The tree grows to a height of 12 to 20 feet. Let us have laburnums in our country.

The hawthorn is so rarely lovely that it is used by the French, the world's champion gardeners, for street and park decoration.

UNDER THE HAWTHORN.

Early in spring, while it is yet cold weather, you will see in the park gardens of Paris great trees, sometimes 40 feet high, bursting into a richness of blossom that holds you still with admiration and makes you think of paradise. These are the hawthorns, pink, white and purple. In England they are sometimes called May trees because they blossom the latter part of that month. You hear people frequently speak of the pink May and the white May.

Why do we not plant the laburnum and the hawthorn in the United States? George Washington, the Father of His Country, was wise in other lore than that of war and statecraft, for he grew a hawthorn hedge at Mount Vernon, importing the plants from England.

HAS LOTS OF NERVE.

Daring Illinois Girl to Build a Home on Pike's Peak.

Miss Lizzie Wallace, of Adair, Ill., is Chock Full of Romantic Notions and Fully Determined to Become a Mountain Recluse.

Miss Lizzie G. Wallace, a pretty young woman of Adair, Ill., is going to make herself a home on Pike's peak, and brave all the terrors and horrors of life so far above the ordinary mortal. She seems to be possessed of lots of nerve as well as a goodly amount of muscle, gained especially for this unusual undertaking by a year's rigid training in an eastern gymnasium. Just now that is her particular stock in trade, coupled with a short bicycle suit, a wheel and a small amount of money left her by an old aunt who raised this aspiring young woman to the height she deemed necessary both in stature and social standing, but the desire to live a whole summer on the top of the peak in a house built by her own hands shows that the ward wants to be raised still further.

She proposes to have a sort of roughly constructed dwelling of huge, irregular stones, piled together heterogeneously, and, of course, made with an eye for sufficient comfort and protection from the fierce storms which sweep the sides of the peak. The experience is not without an element of danger, for the records of the United States signal service tell of a horrible week spent by Sergt. O'Keefe while holding the station in the capacity of observer. Mountain rats, great, huge, bristly things, the size of porcupines are said to haunt these rocks, and, if the veracious chronicler is to be believed, these mountain denizens carried off the body of his dead child. This monster rodent only issues forth at night time, and Sergt. O'Keefe's life was only saved by turning day into night, sleeping while his persecutors slept and getting up with the dark and fighting them for 12 hours, succeeding in keeping them at bay for a week, until the storm abated and his heliograph signals of distress brought him relief from Colorado Springs. The gallant sergeant estimates that he killed at least 200 of these ferocious mountain rats, and that alone saved him. For, like a pack of wolves, the sharp-toothed assailants fell upon the dead bodies and satisfied their cravings for blood.

MISS LIZZIE G. WALLACE.
(Illinois Girl Who Proposes to Live on Pike's Peak.)

If the ordinary woman trembles at the sight of a mouse, she may well draw her skirts closer and shiver in horror as she thinks of the courageous attempts of Miss Wallace to hold the fort against the rats.

Speaking of her plans, Miss Wallace told the Chicago Times-Herald her reason for leaving Chicago. "I am just 23 and I am my own boss since Aunt Lizzie Prescott died. I lived on a farm with her seven miles out from Adair. The dear old soul left me everything she had. I was an orphan and I was everything to her that she was to me. The estate is all settled up now, and I have got enough to bring me in a nice little income and make me feel independent. I always was independent, and that is why I left Chicago against the wishes of Uncle Ed. I went to live with him when Aunt Lizzie died. I left against his wishes, and here I am going down to Colorado Springs. As soon as the snow gets off I am going up the peak to stay all summer.

"I am going to build my own house," Miss Wallace continued, as she stretched forth an arm for the writer to feel. "You see I have a little muscle, and what's the reason I can't pile one rock on another and build myself just the sort of romantic grotto I have dreamed about for years? Then I can get a carpet and a cot and a little camp stool, and provisions and a cat, and, with my trusty rifle and revolver, I will defy the world."

Big Order of Sauerkraut.

An order was lately placed with a Philadelphia firm by the German government for 2,400 tons of sauerkraut, to be sent to the army in China. For many years the kraut made in Germany has been considered the best, and large quantities were imported into the United States. Manufacturers say that recently there has been a change, consumers having apparently come to the conclusion that the American article is as good, if not better, than the imported stuff.

Date Culture in California.

At Muleje and Santa Rosalie in Lower California there are some 60,000 bearing date trees, the fruit from which is exported in rawhide packages containing about 50 pounds each.

CUBANS DEPART.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The Cuban delegates sailed yesterday afternoon on the Ward line steamship Havana, delighted at their reception in this country and satisfied that Cuban affairs will be speedily arranged in a manner acceptable both to the United States government and the Cuban convention. General Rafael Portuondo, who, on account of his superior knowledge, has acted as spokesman for the delegates, said as he was leaving the Fifth avenue hotel:

"We all wish to express our deep thanks for the hospitality we have received in this country. We have been treated while here not as friends merely, but as brothers both by the public men whom we met politically and by the business men. We are sure that there will be a speedy settlement of Cuban affairs. Everything points to a satisfactory conclusion. The radicals will not prevail in the convention, which will take a middle course. The result will, I am sure, satisfy both parties.

"I will not say that this committee will urge the convention to an immediate acceptance of the Platt amendment, but the committee will urge that immediate action be taken.

"We were all much impressed by what we saw in the Produce Exchange and Stock Exchange and other places in this city. In the midst of all the hubbub in the exchanges the brokers paused when they learned that we were in the gallery and cheered Cuba libre. Such tributes have delighted us. I wish to say that we think the United States is the greatest nation of the world and must ever be so. It is teaching Europe what a free country can do."

KIDNAPER CAUGHT.

Telescope Testers Make a Timely Observation.

ROCHESTER, May 2.—While testing a powerful telescope from the roof of the Bausch & Lomb optical factory Professor Andrew Lynn and Albert Kirscheff detected a kidnaper making off with his intended victim and by the prompt use of the telephone effected his capture.

As is usually the case in testing the big telescopes, the focus is adjusted on the lake, seven miles distant, and gradually diminished as it is sighted up the river until the bridge below the factory is reached. Professor Lynn was at the eyepiece and had reached a point two miles below the optical works, when he detected a man half dragging, half carrying, a little child through the bushes that line the river banks on the flat below.

As a carriage was sighted on the bridge below apparently awaiting the man and his victim and the men guessed the situation, they hurried below and telephoned the police station what they had observed. Two officers mounted on bicycles were hurried to the scene and captured the kidnaper. His victim proved to be the 5-year-old daughter of an employee of the gas company.

Quiet May Day In Berlin.

BERLIN, May 2.—May day passed off quietly. Three hundred and eighty-five thousand persons attended the various socialist and trades union meetings, and at all of these resolutions were adopted in favor of the eight hour day and the right of union. In consequence of the threats of the master builders to lock out all those workmen who celebrated May day, work in the building trades went on, although many men were absent. Seventy-four meetings all told were held in this city, the speakers all dwelling upon "The Day We Celebrate." No processions were allowed. Hamburg, Leipsic, Halle and other large towns celebrated. Nowhere were there any disorders or arrests.

A Three Million Contract.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The Manhattan Railway company has closed a contract with the General Electric company for an electric equipment for all its trains. The contract calls for the "General Electric multiple unit train control," with motors for 800 motor cars and 400 trailers. Each of the motor cars will have two motors. The price paid by the railway company is said to be $3,000,000. Last year the Manhattan company gave a $2,000,000 contract to the Westinghouse company for power station and generating machinery.

A Large Percentage Foreign Born.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The total population within a radius of 50 miles of New York city is approximately 5,192,297. The census office has not yet completed the count by country of nativity, but it is estimated, by making allowance for the increase in immigration since 1890, that the foreign born population within 50 miles of New York amounts to about 36 per cent of the total. The percentage of foreign born population for the entire country is about 15 per cent.

Heavy Damages For Miss Smith.

NEWARK, N. J., May 2.—The jury in the case of Ida M. Smith against Charles W. Compton, a suit for $50,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage, returned a verdict of $7,500 for the plaintiff. The trial, which was held in the circuit court before Judge Swaysee, lasted four days and attracted considerable attention because of the standing of the principals and the disparity in their ages.

Added to Gould System.

CLEVELAND, May 2.—As the result of action taken at the annual meeting of the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad company held here the property practically becomes a part of the Gould system.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Park Baseball Club team will meet the Nischwitz team this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the cricket grounds.

The North Plainfield Juniors and the Whittier baseball nines will play a game on Martine's Common tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

L. W. Bridgeman has been elected assistant manager of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association baseball team to succeed Stanley Mosher.

The members of the Hope baseball team will have a batting practice on their grounds tomorrow evening. All members are requested to be on hand at 6:30.

The Westfield Baseball Association will open the season Saturday afternoon. The opponents will be the West End Athletic Association of New York, a strong amateur team. The game will be played on the Westfield grounds.

The Whittier and Netherwood baseball nines crossed bats on the South avenue grounds yesterday afternoon with the result that the doughty Whittier boys won by a score of 29 to 11. McVoy and Hellyer was the battery for the Whittier's, while Cashin and Ulrich constituted the Netherwood's battery.

The baseball game between the St. Mary's and Clinton Avenue teams, which is to be played on the former's grounds, Saturday afternoon, promises to be an exciting contest. Both nines are well matched and each will have its coterie of rooters, who sometimes make or unmake a game. It is expected Fred Winn will pitch for the St. Mary's team and if he is in anything like his old form, a pitchers' battle will be the result. It will be the first game of the season for the Clinton Avenue boys.

GOLF.

If the weather is favorable the golf season will be opened Saturday on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course. There will be several interesting events.

A few golf enthusiasts visited the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course yesterday afternoon and played for the first this season. The weather was not pleasant enough to attract many golfers, but those who were out expressed themselves well pleased with the condition of the course.

FUNERAL OF MR. GIBBONS.

Services Were Held From the Grace P. E. Church Yesterday Afternoon

The funeral services of Sydney F. Gibbons, the New York broker, who died at his home in the Jackson building, were held from Grace P. E. church yesterday afternoon. Rev. E. M. Rodman officiated. Those in attendance were mostly New York business men, former friends of the deceased.

The floral display was exceptionally large, numerous set pieces having been sent by members of the Stock Exchange to which Mr. Gibbons once belonged. The interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

New Company May be Formed.

The Plainfield Mercantile Trust Company will probably be organized soon with a capital of $500,000. It is claimed that a paid in capital of $100,000 has already been pledged. A meeting of the interested ones will be held in a few days.

MUCH ACCOMPLISHED DURING THE YEAR.

foreign and home mission boards and $25 to the city nurse. The Westfield Fresh Air Camp received $5 and $5 was sent to Japan. The Circle also assisted in other benovolent work.

Miss Lillian A. Force, president of the Young Women's Mission Band, presented her report. The Band has an active membership of sixty-five and nine honorary. The total receipts were $175.07 and disbursements $158-20. The domestic and foreign mission boards each received $50, and $10 was given to the Student Volunteer Movement, while $10 was given to the Ladies' Christian Work Society. Barrels of clothing and literature have been sent to various ministers and workers engaged in mission work.

Alfred E. Willett presented the report for the deacon's fund for Treasurer C. M. Thorp, who is away. This showed receipts to be $154.09 and disbursements $65.81, leaving a balance of $88.28.

In conclusion Pastor Schenck gave a summary of the finances for the year. There was raised for foreign missions $485.27 and for home missions $477.49. The building fund received $41.97, the Board of Education, $24.85 and $33.96 was given to the fund for disabled ministers and widows. The benevolences from all sources amounted to $1,692.99 and the congregational receipts were $5 211.68. There was raised from every source in the church $8,190.07.

DON'T WANT WIRES.

Trying to Devise Some Plan to Do Away With Electric Light Wires on Somerset Street.

Superintendent McClurg, of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, accompanied by Mayor Newton B. Smalley, this morning went over the course of improvements now being made on Somerset street. The idea of the inspection of the street was to form some possible means of ridding the thoroughfare of the electric light wire poles.

Underground conduits are not receiving much consideration, but a feasible plan that has been advanced is that the wires be strung along the trolley poles. Another method suggested is that the wires be run through at various points where necessary from Duer street or Watchung avenue.

This matter is likely to be discussed at the borough Councilmanic meeting tomorrow evening.

Pennsylvania Railroad Summer Excursion Tickets to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and Other Summer Resorts.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has placed on sale Summer excursion tickets to Buffalo on account of the Pan-American Exposition, and to Niagara Falls.

Yesterday, the regular Summer excursion tickets to all the principal Summer resorts east of Pittsburg and Buffalo were placed on sale at ticket offices of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

These tickets will bear the usual Summer excursion limit of October 31, 1901, except that the Niagara Falls tickets will be good to return until November 30, 1901.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Summer Excursion Route Book for 1901 will be issued, as heretofore, on June 1.

Monthly Detail of Police.

The monthly changes were made in the police department yesterday. Patrolman Overbaugh, who has been doing duty in the business section, has been transferred to night duty in another part of the city. His place has been taken by Patrolman Charles Flynn, who will look after the business part of the city day times. Patrolmen Myers and Vanderweg have been brought in from the suburbs and are now looking after the business section at night.

New Wagon For Bill Posters.

A handsome new wagon was put into service yesterday by the Plainfield Billposting Company. It is thoroughly up-to-date and makes a fine showing. On the sides of the wagon there appears the familiar picture of P. T. Barnum and one of his trite sayings. John Richardson is the representative of the company in this city and looks after the work in a very efficient manner.

Initiation of Odd Fellows.

There will be initiation at the meeting of Noah Dove Encampment, No. 28, I. O. O. F., this evening.

RUMMAGE SALE HAS BEGUN.

BEING HELD IN ROOMS OF PLAINFIELD RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

Sale Opened Yesterday And Was Largely Attended—Sales For Day Amounted to Over $175.

The Plainfield Relief Association is holding a rummage sale in its rooms at 544 West Front street which would be hard to surpass both as concerns the quality as well as the quantity of the unusual variety of goods on sale.

It is a veritable department store in every respect except that those in charge are prominent charitably inclined women in this vicinity. The several departments are in separate rooms, in each of which are arranged neatly a mass of goods.

The management of the affair intends to continue the sale every afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock for one week, provided, however, that the goods are not all disposed before that time. In the four short hours of the sale yesterday the receipts were over $175, and from present appearances the sale promises to be an unprecedented success in every way. Monday evening from 7 until 9 the doors will be open for the convenience of those who cannot attend during the afternoon.

In charge of the affair is Mrs. Henry Lapsley and assisting her a number of committees superintending the various stores, constituted as follows: Household furnishings: Mrs. Emil Woltmann, chairman, Mrs. S. S. Guion, Miss M. E. Tweedy, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, Mrs. VanHerwerden and Miss Elizabeth Phillips; women's clothing: Mrs. H. C. Munger, chairman, Mrs. J. M. Whiton, Miss Julia Scribner, Mrs. Frank C. Harder, Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, Mrs. A. C. Slauson, Mrs. S. St. J. McCutchen, Mrs James R. Joy, Mrs. Katrina Haff and Miss Emilie Haff. Men's clothing: Mrs. M. L. Lovell, chairman; Mrs. R. Leonard, Miss Katherine Ryder, Miss Laura Lovell and Mrs. Horace Kimball. Shoes: Mrs. W. L. C. Glenny, chairman; Mrs. Stover, Mrs. E. M. Laing, Miss Emily Tracy and Miss Z. M. VanBoskerck. Millinery: Miss Mary E. Tracy, chairman; the Misses Edith Tracy, vanHerwerden, Mary Whiton and Ellis. Books: Mrs. H. P. Reynolds. Bric-a-brac: Mrs. C. I. Ames, chairman; Mrs. C. E. Brooks, Mrs. DuFlon, Mrs. E. L. Finch and Mrs. J. K. Myers.

The cashier is Miss Florence Tweedy and her assistants are Miss Margaret Tracy, Mrs. Howard Tracy and Mrs. Wm. M. Myers.

—"I have been suffering from Dyspepsia for the past twenty years and have been unable after trying all preparations and physicians to get any relief. After taking one bottle of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure I found relief and am now in better health than I have been for twenty years. I cannot praise Kodol Dyspepsia Cure too highly," thus writes Mrs. C. W. Roberts, North Creek, Ark. L. W. Randolph.

Were to Ask for Nine-Hour Law.

According to a supposed arrangement the International Association of Machnists was to have demanded a nine hour a day rule yesterday with the present rate of wages. Inquiry among the several shops in the city failed to reveal the fact that any demand had been made. The bosses disclaim any knowledge of a demand, although one may be made at any time.

Funeral of Mrs. Cox.

The funeral services of Mrs. Silas Cox, of East Fourth street, were held from St. Mary's church this morning. They were conducted by Rev. J. A. McGeary before a large gathering of relatives and friends. The pallbearers were four friends of the family. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

POLING FINED.

Pleaded Guilty to Charge of Selling Liquor Without a License at South Plainfield.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, May 2—Frank Poling, who formerly kept a saloon at South Plainfield, was arranged in the Middlesex county court yesterday and pleaded guilty to selling liquor without a license. He claimed that action on his application for a license was pending at the time he committed the offense. He has since given up the saloon business and is now a clerk in a dry goods store at Keyport. He was fined $15, to be paid by July 1. Poling pleaded for leniency on account of his hard struggle to make a living.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

System of Self-Government to Be Introduced Into City High School.

OUTLINED BY MR. TRAVELL.

WILL HAVE A SENATE ELECTED BY THE PUPILS.

The Senate Will Provide Rules Subject to Approval of the Principal—Mr. Travell Gave Outline of Plan at Meeting at Newark.

In his paper on "Student Co-operation in High School Government," read before the session of the New Jersey High School Teachers' Association at Newark last week, Principal I. W. Travell, of the city High School, outlined a plan of pupil self-government which will be inaugurated in the High School of this city shortly. The system proposed will be offered first to the pupils for their decision and, if accepted by them, it will then go into effect.

In the general scope of the plan considered provision is made for a school senate whose duty it will be to enact all needful regulations for proper discipline. The members of the senate are to be elected by the pupils themselves, but a condition coupled to the election is that should any senator fall below a certain high standard of scholarship, which may be determined upon, he shall be dismissed or dropped from office. Besides making the rules of discipline the senate has power to remove any pupil, who seriously disobeys the rules of government.

Tribunes, whose duty it will be to enforce the mandates of the senate, are also to be selected. This office is likewise an elective one and the executive officers of the body are to be chosen from the teaching corps. The tribunes will be elected in every room and will be called upon to receive all complaints, report misconduct which occurs after service of a warning in a particular case, and they will have general charge of deportment in the rooms.

At the head of this system of student self government there will be an absolute executive, who will be vested with power to veto any regulation made by the senate. This absolute executive will also be empowered to direct the enforcement enacted, without the formality of calling together the senate. All amendments may be amended by him. The office of executive will be filled by the principal of the High School.

The system itself is practically a diminutive city government and is in use in some similar form in many schools throughout the country. The plan selected for the High School of this city is but a modification of that now in force in the Orange High School. The principal idea of the system is to better train the pupils in the responsibilities of citizenship by participation in school administration.

On a small scale the intent of the plan proposed is expressed in the system now in vogue at the High School. Originally a student committee of sixteen was elected to bear responsibility for the deportment of the school. It began in a single room with the election of a committee of four and was extended to the whole school. The pupils signed an agreement to attempt to keep order and to respect the authority of the student committee.

Mr. Travell declares that the results obtained from this system have been excellent and he is very sanguine of the outcome of the plan he proposes to adopt.

Returning From Cruise in the Pacific.

Frank Fulton, of West Seventh street, who enlisted several years ago as apothecary on board the cruiser Philadelphia, is expected home shortly. The Philadelphia has been cruising in the Pacific. Mr. Fulton formerly resided on West Seventh street and was employed in Leggett's pharmacy.

Report on Martin Act Delinquents.

Collector F. H. Smith has completed his report on delinquents under the provisions of the Martin Act, and it is now in the hands of Corporation Counsel Marsh. The matter will be acted upon at the May meeting of the Council, after which properties will be sold for taxes according to law.

Freak Still Lives.

The freak chicken with three feet that was hatched recently at the home of Louis Bennett, of Watchung avenue, still continues to thrive and grow, with excellent chances of becoming a full-grown her.

PICTURED TRIP TO VENICE.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE GIVEN BY WALTER M. M'GEE.

At Monroe Avenue M. E. Church Last Evening—Large Audience Was Present.

A large and appreciative audience was entertained for nearly two hours in the Monroe Avenue church last evening by an instructive lecture on "Venice," given by Walter M. McGee. It was in the nature of a personal narrative, Mr. McGee having visited the quaint old city, and was therefore very interesting.

In order that his hearers might be more familiar with his subject, the speaker at the outset gave a few facts concerning Venice, he stated that it was the most unique city in the world, that it contained 15,000 houses, no two alike; 1,200 streets connected by 450 small bridges; was built on seventy-one islands and had 471 lateral canals.

At the conclusion of these remarks, Mr. McGee took his audience, by means of excellent illustrations through the city, showing them all the principal buildings and points of interest and explaining each in a thorough manner. Some of those shown of St. Mark's cathedral, St. Mark's library, the Grand Canal and other waterways were very good, giving a modest way an insight of their grandeur.

At the close of the lecture, the audience showed its appreciation by contributing a generous collection for the Epworth League, under whose auspices it was given

Y. M. C. A. CAMPS.

Plans Being Made For the Annual Outing of the Boys of the Association.

The annual boys' camps of the Y. M. C. A., of this State, will be held this summer as usual.

The first camp will open July 2 and will continue four weeks. The banks of Lake Wawawaunda, Sussex county, have been been selected as the site. When this camp breaks up another will start on the banks of Lake Champlain in Vermont. It will begin August 1 and extend until September

The schedule of expenses as prepared for the first jaunt is $12 which includes car fare to and from New York city and board for two weeks For the Lake Champlain camp the charge is $5.50 per week board and $8 car fare to and from New York. State Secretary Charles L. Scott, of Newark, will have charge of both camps.

On account of the large number who will undoubtedly go on these excursions, only the boys who went last year can obtain admittance to the camps this year. From Plainfield alone last summer fourteen boys went on the outing to Lake Champlain

BEHIND IN STUDIES.

Borough High School Nine May Lose Some of Its Players.

Some of the boys in the North Plainfield High School who play on the baseball team are working harder than usual at their school studies through fear that they may be ordered to discontinue playing on the team on account of deficiency in class standing.

One member of the second team has already had to stop his athletic pursuits on this account and it is rumored that others may have to do likewise.

Making Big Lathe

The Pond Machine Tool Company is constructing a sixty inch lathe which will be placed on exhibition at the Pan-American Exhibition at Buffalo. The machine is a very fine specimen of workmanship and will reflect credit on the city where it was made.

Musical Organization Formed

The Elite Glee Club, of North Plainfield, is a recently organized musical association. The members are Edward W. Slade, Edward Smalley, G. W. Pope and Clifford Schorb.

New Chairman Selected.

At a recent meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Managers of the hospital, Mrs. Monroe B. Long was made chairman of the purchasing committee for the hospital.

Strawberry Festival Announced.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church will hold a strawberry festival on the evenings of May 30 and 31. The affair will be held in the church.

Will Receive New Members.

It is expected that a number of persons will be received into membership of the Crescent Avenue church Sunday morning at the communion service.

Will Open Boynton Beach May 30.

Manager W. W. Stratton is preparing to open Boynton Beach on Decoration Day. An unusually good time is being planned.

TO MAKE SILVERWARE.

A Plainfield Corporation, With That Object in View, Has Just Been Incorporated.

The William H. Rogers Corporation, the object of which is to manufacture, sell and deal in silverware and silver-plated ware, has filed a certificate of incorporation in the county clerk's office, Elizabeth. The capital is $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares. Craig A. Marsh drafted the papers of incorporation and $10,000 cash capital has been paid in.

The corporation will have its plant in this city and the offices will be located at 132 North avenue. Yesterday afternoon the incorporators met and elected the following officers: President, William H. Rogers; vice-president, J. A. Hubbard; secretary and treasurer, J. P. Mosher; directors, Eugene L. Babcock, Howard P. Reynolds and the officers, all of this city. The location of the plant has not yet been decided upon.

NEW GENERAL MANAGER.

Changes Made Among the Officials of Somerset and Middlesex Traction Company.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, May 3—During the past few weeks several changes have been made by the officials of the Somerset and Middlesex Traction Company, and it is said that more will be made soon. The latest change is that concerning the management of the various lines. T. F. Welsh, of Akron, O., has just been put in charge as general manager and he will have complete supervision and authority over all lines. Mr. Welsh is a thorough railroad man and has had a wide experience in trolley matters The company refuses to discuss at any length the recent change in management, but it is believed that other changes in the staff will follow.

BOROUGH SCHOOLS.

Their History is Being Prepared By Superintendent Wightman.

Superintendent Wightman, of the North Plainfield schools, has prepared a detailed history of public education in the borough.

On his investigations in the matter he has searched all the old records of the Board of Education for years past. The facts he has gathered from this source, together with a mass of interesting data collected elsewhere, has been compiled in a particularly interesting narrative on the subject.

It is Mr. Wightman's intention to contribute this historical sketch towards the work on the history of Plainfield and vicinity which is now being prepared.

Meeting for Boys.

A fine programme has been arranged for the boys' meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Staff Captain Nice, who is a graduate of the University of Berlin and a former surgeon in the German Army, will make an address. The Captain will also render some selections on the violin. Another feature will be the singing by Miss Grace Hildebrand, the "gospel nightingale." All boys are welcome.

Annual Spring Examinations.

The first of the annual spring examinations in the North Plainfield schools was held Tuesday morning. Under the system in vogue in the borough schools only such pupils are examined as fall below a given efficiency in school work. All others are promoted on the recommendation of the respective teachers. The examinations are well scattered as to the time of holding them and occur generally at a convenient period.

Recommended Plan of Student Rule.

Principal I. W. Travell, after the regular morning exercises at the Plainfield High School, explained to the pupils his proposed system of student self-government which he wishes to introduce in the High School. The details of the new method of preserving good order in the schools were given to the pupils and Mr. Travell recommended the system for the consideration of the High School classes.

Chief Kiely Caught Runaway.

A horse drawing a delivery wagon got beyond the control of a small boy who was driving the animal on North avenue yesterday afternoon and dashed towards Park avenue, where it was caught by Chief Kiely of the police department.

Juniors in Charge.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society will have charge of the meeting at the First Baptist church this evening and will select the topic. The members of the senior society are urged to attend

Entertainment at Bethel Chapel.

A musical and literary entertainment will be held this evening at Bethel chapel under the auspices of the Endeavor Society.

REPORTS OF YEAR AT CHILDREN'S HOME.

Annual Meeting of Board of Managers Was Held Yesterday Afternoon.

OFFICERS WERE ELECTED.

TREASURER'S REPORT SHOWED A BALANCE ON HAND.

No Cases of Illness Now at the Home—Mrs. Horace Kimball Re-elected President of Board—Splendid Condition of Home.

The annual meeting of the Board of Managers of the Children's Home Association was held in the Y. M. C. A. parlors yesterday afternoon. The reports submitted showed an extremely encouraging condition of affairs at this worthy institution. On account of other events happening concurrently, the attendance of those interested in the work was not as large as could be desired.

The report of the recording secretary, Mrs. C. Leonard, was of interest especially because it told in detail of the hearty support given the home during the fiscal year just closed and the splendid condition of the institution at present. Just now there is not a single case of sickness at the home.

The reorganization of the various standing committees was postponed until the June meeting. The several committees, which are to be named hereafter, are the standing, executive and advisory.

Miss Ellen Serrell, the treasurer, submitted her report which showed that the balance on hand May 1 was $746 07. In detail the report is as follows:

The officers of the association, all of whom were re-elected, are: President, Mrs. Horace Kimball; vice-presidents, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. Laura S. Gilbert and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen; recording secretary, Mrs. C. Leonard; corresponding secretary, Miss Lucy H. Everett; treasurer, Miss Ella Serrell.

MAY QUEEN PARTY.

Given Under Auspices of the Mount Olive Church Mission Band Last Night.

A May Queen party was given under the auspices of the Mt. Olive church Mission Band last evening and the programme was an interesting one.

An unique feature was a tableau composed of ten young women garbed in costumes which typified ten of the original States in the Union. The representation of "Old Virginny" brought great applause from the audience.

The object of the affair was to raise funds for foreign missionary work, and in this respect the management was quite successful. Mrs. Lulu Reed and Miss C. Thornton had the entertainment under their supervision.

MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT.

Was Given in Calvary Baptist Church Last Evening.

A pleasing musical entertainment was given in Calvary Baptist church last evening. Refreshments, for which there was a great demand, served to make the occasion an enjoyable one.

The executive committee of arrangements consisted of: President, Mrs. James Soott; vice president, Mrs. F. S. Scott; secretary, Mrs. Carrie Brown; treasurer, Miss Anna Howard; general committee, the Misses Rebecca Hamilton, Lillie Leroy, Elizabeth Randolph and Mollie Henry; managers, James Scott and Deacon Robinson.

United States District Court Grand Jurors.

Among the United States District Court grand jurors recently selected are George Squires, of Elizabeth, and John H. Schomp, of Harlingen. The Grand Jury has considerable work before them, more than fifty witnesses being summoned before it yesterday.

BIRTHDAY SOCIAL.

Given by Endeavor Society of First Baptist Church Parlors Last Evening.

A very successful birthday social was held at the First Baptist church last evening under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. Despite the heavy rain there were nearly fifty people present to enjoy the festivities. During the evening Miss Edith Cairns rendered piano selections and Wilson Darby gave mandolin selections. Clifford S. Braider was the accompanist.

Most of the evening was occupied with the playing of games of all sorts and these furnished much amusement. There was a generous response from the birthday offerings and $15 will be realized therefrom. The proceeds will be given to the Westfield Fresh Air Camp. The affair was in charge of the social committee of which Miss Ella H. Serrell is the chairman.

APPEAL FOR AID.

King's Daughters Want Help in Caring For a Destitute Family.

Whenever a worthy object of charity is brought to the attention of the good people of Plainfield there is always a ready and willing response to render assistance. A worthy case has just been brought to the attention of the City Union of King's Daughters, and that excellent organization appeals to the public for assistance. For obvious reasons the names of those needing relief are withheld

The family consists of a father, mother and daughter and they are truthfully in destitute circumstances. The mother is afflicted with a cancer, and while she is practically helpless, she endeavors to help sustain the family by doing needle work. The father is also very sick and the daughter is a physical wreck. Not one of them is able to work. The members of Grace M. E. church have occasionally rendered assistance by paying the rent, which is $9 a month, and the King's Daughters are now rendering such assistance as they can.

The case is one which needs immediate help and the charitable people of this city and borough are appealed to in the hope that the family may be given such assistance as will give them at least the necessities of life The members of the family believe that if their rent could be paid for them for a time, it would thus give them a chance to get a start. Any information concerning this family will be cheerfully given by the City Union of King's Daughters.

Any contributions, however small, will be gratefully received at The Daily Press office and promptly forwarded to the proper destination.

Funeral of Mrs. Seaman.

Mrs. Augusta Seaman was laid to rest in St. Mary's cemetery yesterday morning, after an impressive funeral service at St. Mary's church. It was in charge of Rev. Father Smyth, who chanted a solemn requiem mass. There were many pretty floral tributes from sorrowing friends. The pall bearers were Thomas Buckley, Edward Staats, John J. Kenney, James Totten, Daniel Shea and John Carmen.

Y. M. C. A. Men's Meeting.

At the men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Hall Sunday afternoon Staff Captain Nice will speak and Miss Grace D. Hildebrandt, the "gospel nightingale," will sing some solos. Captain Nice will also render a number of selections on the violin. The meeting will commence at 4:15. All men are welcome.

Will Build a Church.

The members of the Swedish Lutheran congregation of this city, have purchased a plot of ground from the Cortright estate situated at the corner of Fifth street and Plainfield avenue. It is 39 by 75 feet and it is said, a church will shortly be erected on it. The structure will face on Fifth street.

Engineers' Meeting Place.

Another organization has now been added to the number already meeting in the Trades Union hall. The Amalgamated Society of Engineers at their last meeting decided not to renew the lease on their rooms in Washington hall and will now use the new hall. They meet every second Friday.

Miss Mair Will Speak.

Miss Rachel Mair, recently returned missionary from Africa, will address the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church tonight at 8 o'clock. Everybody welcome.

Ready For Formal Opening.

Steward Ivamy is now located at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club house, and he will be in readiness for the formal opening, which takes place tomorrow.

SANG FOLK-SONGS IN COSTUME

MISS BOKKEN-LASSON ENTERTAINED AT A RECEPTION.

Affair Was Given By Mrs. Wm. L. Saunders and Mrs. F. W. Iredell at Former's Home.

A charming reception was given yesterday afternoon from 4 until 7 o'clock by Mrs William L. Saunders and Mrs. Frank W. Iredell at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Saunders on Rockview avenue.

Tasteful but unostentatious decorations, consisting mainly of full blooming magnolias and rose buds, adorned the large hallway and the several rooms on the first floor. Despite the threatening weather at least one hundred and twenty-five bidden friends attended the function.

A most delightful feature of the affair was the musical entertainment provided by Miss Bokken Lasson, a notable Norwegian singer, who is endowed with much beauty as well as an extraordinarily rich and full contralto voice. Miss Bokken-Lasson has achieved considerable fame as a singer of folk-songs of all nations, and she sang many of these yesterday afternoon in a manner that completely enraptured the guests. This was her first appearance in this vicinity, and, dressed as she was in her native costume, she afforded unbounded pleasure to her hearers. Last winter Miss Bokken-Lasson sang at receptions given by Cornelius Biles and others in New York's smart set.

Interspersing the numbers sung by Miss Bokken-Lasson were a few pleasingly rendered piano solos from Chopin by Miss Ida Viederman, of this city.

Assisting in receiving were Mrs. Hugh Hastings, Mrs. Frank Curtis, Mrs Henry D. Hibbard, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. Philip V. R. VanWyck, Mrs. B. A Hegeman, Jr., and Mrs. T. Logan Murphy, of this city, and Miss Hopkins, of New York

WHAT HE THINKS.

Mayor of Deckertown Will Talk On Municipal Ownership This Evening.

The Mayor of Deckertown is expected to make an address at the regular monthly meeting of the Borough Council this evening. His subject will be "municipal ownership." As the Mayor has acquired a wide range of knowledge on this matter, his talk promises to be of unusual interest. This will be the sole feature of the meeting.

The Councilmanic committee on municipal ownership is not ready as yet to report the result of its labors and the report of the street committee will be of a routine nature.

DIME SOCIAL.

Cakewalk by Two Children Was the Chief Feature of the Affair.

A dime social was held under the auspices of the Mizpah Lodge sewing circle last evening at the home of Mrs. H. Angleman, on East Fourth street.

The company was entertained by J. Manley, who rendered some solos, and two little girls, who danced the cake walk to the great amusement of the spectators. During the evening refreshments were served.

New Work at Hillside Cemetery.

J. E. Townsend, of East Front street and Watchung avenue, has just completed for A. L. and G. B Titsworth, a very suitable marker for the double grave of Mrs. A. L and Mrs. G. B. Titsworth. The stone was designed espressly for the purpose and shows the excellent workmanship for which Mr. Townsend is noted.

Fair For Benefit of Baseball Team.

The Park Baseball Club will hold a fair tomorrow afternoon on the lawn at 27 Willow avenue. Cake, candy and ice cream will be on sale at the affair which begins at 2:30 o'clock. The officers of the organization are: Manager, Tracy Howard, and captain, Douglass Waring.

Coming Council Meeting.

The May meeting of the Common Council will be held Monday evening. It is expected that considerable important business will be considered, including action on the report of the Board of School Estimate which was received last Monday evening.

Could Not Attend Inspection.

Sergeant Dickson, of Company I, Second Regiment, is seriously ill at his home in this city. In consequence he was unable to take part in the regular inspection of the Company at Elizabeth Wednesday night.

Preparing For Happy Event.

RECREATION PARK WILL OPEN LAST OF MAY.

Maze Edwards Will Manage That Day Resort Located on Through Trolley.

IS IN FANWOOD TOWNSHIP.

CONCERT AND DANCING WILL BE NIGHTLY FEATURES.

No Intoxicating Liquors Will be Sold—Will Open Week of May 27—Will Build An Auditorium and Other Attractions.

Now that Maze Edwards has relinquished the management of Music Hall, which closed last night, he makes announcement of his plans for the summer which will be of interest to people in this city and vicinity. Mr. Edwards has made arrangements to open Recreation Park on the line of the trolley. This park is located on a portion of the Osborn farm in Fanwood township, adjoining the Westfield Golf Club grounds. At this park there will be erected a large and substantial building for amusements and dancing, and it will be arranged as a place for family gatherings during the summer months. There will be a merry-go round, swings, shooting gallery, and other attractions.

A feature of the place will be the concerts every afternoon and evening in the auditorium. A good orchestra of ten pieces under the direction of George E. Rogers will give a concert every afternoon and evening. The concerts will continue to 10 o'clock in the evening and from that hour till midnight there will be dancing. Every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock there will be a sacred concert. Admission to the park will be free, but those desiring to visit the auditorium will be charged a nominal fee.

The park will be efficiently policed and at night it will be well lighted. No intoxicating liquors of any kind will be sold in the park. Maze Edwards will have charge of the place, although C. W. Riker and Adrain Riker, of the trolley company, are interested in the general management.

The place will be opened during the week of May 27. It is quite possible that a display of fireworks will be given on Fourth of July.

LUSARDI CASE ENDED.

Prosecutor Would Not Have The Case Tried And so Prisoners were Discharged.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, May 3.—The indictment against Julius and James Lusardi, for larceny, came to an abrupt termination yesterday. The Prosecutor stated that upon an examination of his witnesses he felt that he would not be able to maintain the indictment, the witnesses having changed their minds, or seemed unwilling to testify. He therefore did not feel warranted in putting the county to the expense of a trial, and asked for a nolle pros., which was granted by Judge Schenck

How A. A. Clark, counsel for the Lusardis, asked the privilege of making a statement for his clients. He said that he had investigated the character of the defendants, and found that they had always borne good characters; that he had brought residents of Plainfield to testify to their honesty, and he felt gratified that the court had seen fit to take this course, and relieve them of the unjust charges.

The jurors were then discharged until May 14.

Wanted More Counsel Fees.

Codington & Swackhamer, counsel for the defendant in the divorce proceedings of Cory against Cory, made application yesterday in the Court of Chancery, Jersey City, for an increase of $100 for fees. The Court was inclined to grant the request, but Lawyer Wm. Newcorn, who represents the plaintiff, appeared and opposed the application so strongly that decision was reserved.

Twenty Days For Peddling.

Joseph Levitsche, an itenerant sales man, was fined $5 by City Judge Runyon at the police court hearings this morning for violating the city license ordinance. The arrest was made yesterday afternoon on North avenue by Patrolman McCarthy. In default of payment of the fine Levitsch will serve twenty days' imprisonment.

BRYAN ATTACKS M'LAURIN.

Declares the Senator From South Carolina Has Flopped.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 3.—In a statement made yesterday W. J. Bryan takes Senator McLaurin of South Carolina to task for what he declares is his political flop. At the same time Mr. Bryan admits that Senator McLaurin's action marks the beginning of a movement in the south which will have an influence upon the politics of the nation. He says:

"It is not likely that Mr. McLaurin will be the leader of the movement because he is handicapped by the fact that he is using his official position to misrepresent the views and interests of his constituents, but some leader will arise to give direction and force to the aristocracy and plutocratic element for which Mr. McLaurin speaks. There is such an element in every community, and now that the race question no longer unifies the white people of the southern states it will doubtless manifest itself.

"Senator Tillman has already taken up the gauge of battle thrown down by Senator McLaurin and will doubtless be able to marshal a considerable majority in that state, but the same influences are at work in other states, where there is greater danger of their success.

"The Democratic sentiment is strong enough to resist and overcome the McLaurin movement, but those who believe that the man is more important than the dollar will have to bestir themselves."

CABINET CRISIS IN JAPAN.

Marquis Ito and His Colleagues Resign Their Portfolios.

YOKOHAMA, May 3.—In consequence of the continued postponement by the Japanese minister of finance, Viscount Watanabe, of the carrying out of the expected public works the cabinet crisis reached a climax Wednesday, and Marquis Ito, the premier, after the cabinet meeting proceeded to the palace and tendered his resignation to the mikado.

All the other members of the cabinet did likewise with the exception of the minister of war, Baron Kodama.

It is asserted that Marquis Ito advised Emperor Mutsuhito to intrust the task of forming a new cabinet to Marquis Yamagata, whose government resigned last October, but it is doubtful whether Marquis Yamagata will accept responsibility. The probability is that Marquis Ito will reconstruct the cabinet, excluding Viscount Watanabe.

Governor Dietrich of Nebraska resigned, and his commission as senator was signed by his successor.

A Banquet to Colonel McClure.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—The Clover club gave a banquet in commemoration of the retirement of Colonel Alexander K. McClure from active journalism after a busy career of 55 years. Covers were laid for over 300, and the participants included soldiers and statesmen, writers and publishers and others prominent in national, state and city life. There was much interest taken in the address made by General Miles. Among other things he said: "No service is so great and good as that performed by the journalists. There is a far greater necessity today for a fine editorial writer than ever before. Whoever wields such a pen is mightier than he who wields the sword. Journalism is and will continue to be the greatest educator of which the 80,000,000 people of this great land can boast." The address of Colonel McClure elaborated the same thought. There were numerous other speeches made, including one by Murat Halstead.

Two Russian Loans.

BERLIN, May 3.—The Vossische Zeitung prints a special dispatch from St. Petersburg announcing that Russia has virtually arranged with France for loans amounting to 500,000,000 francs and that another Russian loan is being negotiated with English and American bankers in London. The dispatch further says that the czar is planning for a trip abroad during next August and that he will visit Copenhagen, Darmstadt and Vienna.

Notorious Burglar Released.

ROCHESTER, May 3.—Byron Day, the notorious all round burglar, who has spent fully 56 years of his life in different prisons in the United States, has been released on his own recognizance by Judge Sutherland in the county court.

Typhoid Fever Epidemic.

BERLIN, May 3.—An epidemic of typhoid fever has broken out in several of the forts and villages in the neighborhood of Metz. The Eighth Bavarian regiment has alone lost 16 men from the disease and has 281 men sick.

A Speedy Torpedo Boat.

BATH, Me., May 3.—The torpedo boat Barney, built at the Bath Iron works, on her preliminary trial trip yesterday made 29.3 knots, which is a remarkable speed, the contract requirements being but 28 knots per hour.

BETWEEN TWO FIRES

Pan-American Directors Bothered by Sunday Question.

THEIR DECISION CREATES A STORM.

Ministers and Others Bitterly Oppose Opening at All on the Sabbath, While Concessionaires Demand Whole Day.

BUFFALO, May 3.—When the board of directors of the Pan-American exposition after weeks of discussion finally decided to throw the exposition gates open on Sunday between the hours of 1 p. m. and 11 p. m., closing all the Midway attractions for 24 hours, it was thought that this question had been disposed of. The committee of ministers and others who so bitterly opposed Sunday opening of the fair are not disposed to let the matter drop, however, as indicated by the appointment of a subcommittee to investigate what legal steps, if any, could be taken to close the gates on the Sabbath.

Yesterday another factor in the situation developed. It is said that the Midway concessionaires will make a formal request during the next few days that they be allowed to keep open their shows on Sunday. They have thus far taken no action relative to the decision of the board of directors. They claim that, according to a clause in their contracts with the exposition company, the company must allow them to run every day that the exposition gates are open. Some concerted action, it is said, will be taken to compel the board of directors to fulfill what the concessionaires allege is a provision in the contracts.

The common council some time ago decided that no more concert hall licenses should be issued at the expiration of those then in force. Many of the licenses expired on May 1, and the proprietors of these places threaten to take legal action against certain Midway concessionaires who sell drinks in the same buildings where musical entertainments are given. Attorneys representing the saloon men called on Mayor Diehl and stated their cases. The mayor informed them that the matter was entirely out of his hands now and that he could do nothing to relieve them. Some of the concert halls have already closed their doors.

A number of western commissioners arrived at the grounds yesterday to push along the construction of state buildings, many of which are still unfinished and some of them just started. Karl Bitter, director of sculpture, yesterday morning imported 20 men from New York to put the finishing touches on the remaining sculpture work. It is expected that the work will be completed by the first day of next week. The electric fountain will be started Monday.

Director General Buchanan has authorized the construction of a two story building on the grounds for the exclusive use of newspaper men assigned to cover the exposition.

The Eastman Trial.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 3.—Although the larger portion of the proceedings at the Eastman murder trial yesterday was taken up in unimportant expert testimony on powder stains on clothing and alloys of lead in bullets, there were one or two witnesses who proved to be the most important in the trial. By far the most important witness of the day was the aged and decrepit mother of the dead man, who tottered feebly into the court and gave an instance where Eastman looked toward her son and said, "His days are short." This was a little over a week before the tragedy. Two witnesses recalled identified the little bullet as the one taken from the body by reason of its peculiar formation. This last testimony will have a great bearing on the case if the defense should claim that the bullet, which has been frequently shown to the jury and which is admitted by the defense to have been a center fire bullet, was changed some time after the autopsy by some government official.

Hop Beer Makers Liable.

BOSTON, May 3.—Revenue Agent Sewell has received an important decision from Washington which concerns the sellers of so called "hop beer" in every no license city and state in New England. It is to the effect that "when one-half pound of malt, 14 pounds of sugar and 24 yeast cakes are brewed and allowed to ferment for a couple of days the mixture would contain 2.82 per cent of alcohol by weight and over 3 per cent by volume." And the decision adds: "It therefore comes within the notice of the internal revenue law as a fermented liquor made from a substitute for malt, and those who make it involve themselves in a special tax liability as brewers and malt liquor dealers.

Railroad Strike at Dover, N. J.

DOVER, N. J., May 3.—Three hundred men employed by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad in the cripple shops at Dover, N. J., left their work yesterday afternoon. Superintendent McKenna had suspended one of the men for six days as a punishment for staying away from work without permission. The other men sent a committee to ask for his reinstatement. The superintendent told the committee that the request could only be granted by Superintendent Canfield at Scranton, and the strike followed.

Three Negroes Killed.

SELMA, Ala., May 3.—Three negroes were found dead yesterday morning near the cabin in which Deputy Sheriff Edwards was killed Sunday night, ten miles south of Selma. Ed Dawson, a nephew of Henry Dawson, in whose house Edwards was killed, was found dead in the public road. The other two were shot in the cabin. They are supposed to have been implicated in the murder of Edwards. The negroes are terrorized and are fleeing to the city.

Celebration at Hoboken.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The official celebration of the reopening of the North German Lloyd line piers at Hoboken, N. J., was carried out in that city last night. The singing societies of the place gave a concert on the piers, 3,000 men marched in a torchlight parade, and there were fireworks and a banquet.

Suffering in Bessarabia.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 3.—Starvation and typhus are increasing among the village population of Bessarabia. Seventy per cent of the farmers of that district have lost all their horses and have no seed for the spring sowing.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; brisk southwesterly winds, shifting to northwesterly.

BROKERS NEED REST

Money Makers In Wall Street Grow Weary.

GREAT BOOM IN STOCKS CONTINUES

New York Tradesmen and Dressmakers Already Feel the Effects of the Enormous Gains From Recent Speculation.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The speculation in stock continued yesterday with unabated excitement. The total dealings in the Stock Exchange were 2,912,400 shares, which makes it one of the busiest days on record. The features were the Atchison and Union Pacific issues. Atchison common gained 10⅞ points. The dealings amounted to 556,900 shares. There was a renewal of the rumors of buying by the Pennsylvania railroad, but no definite news. Union Pacific common touched its record point, 133, but it closed at 128½, a loss for the day of 1⅛ points. It fluctuated wildly all day between 127 and 133.

For the first time since the muse of Wall street history began to keep books the lady was obliged to record yesterday that brokers on the Stock Exchange had grown weary of making money. The keeper of the record didn't quite understand what it meant; but, being an accurate muse, she just put it down and let it go at that. As a matter of fact, the brokers have had so much to do the past week that they are literally beaten out. More than all that, their books are far behind, their accountants have grown ugly on an average of 15 or 20 minutes' sleep every 24 hours, and they have decided that they want a day off. Accordingly some of the brokers circulated a petition yesterday morning requesting that Saturday be declared a full holiday instead of a half holiday. The petition was accompanied by a resolution to the effect that owing to the rush of business and so on and so forth the Stock Exchange resolve to quit on Friday night and not start work again until Monday morning.

Whether the circulators of the petition and those favoring the resolution constitute a majority of the members of the Stock Exchange or not cannot be stated with absolute accuracy.

While it is all speculation down town the tradesmen up town are doing a rushing business in the less exciting transactions of the sale of merchandise. It is probably true that no business is receiving a greater direct benefit from the money that is being made these days in Wall street than the dressmaker and the milliner. It was said yesterday that this spring has been a record breaker in the volume of business done by all of the fashionable dressmakers and milliners in New York. One of the leading dressmakers of the town said yesterday:

"We have never had such a season. All of the leading gownmaking establishments of New York have been rushed as they haven't been before for years. When I speak of gownmakers, I include also the tailors to women. All of us have shared in the good business. I often think that there is no one to whom a fashionable woman grows more confidential at times than to her dressmaker, with the possible exception of her doctor or her father confessor. We have simply marveled at the stories we have heard of the money that some of the male attaches of our customers have been making. It's one long marvelous tale of gold. 'My husband made $10,000 in Wall street yesterday' or 'My husband made $25,000 in stocks last week' is a story that we hear nearly every day, and it has become so common that now we wouldn't be at all surprised to hear of a $10,000,000 fortune being made in half an hour. We dressmakers don't know much about Wall street, and until the last few months we haven't cared much about it. Now it interests us greatly. We are only hoping that the speculators will never get tired of speculating and that the time is not far distant when they'll be making $1,000,000 a minute."

Chile's President to Retire.

VALPARAISO, May 3.—President Errazuriz has issued a decree in which he declares that "important personal motives" prevent him from fulfilling his constitutional functions until after next June. He explains in a letter directed to the governors of the provinces that in view of the fact that Senor Jerman Riesco, a relative of his, is a candidate for the presidency and of the disability imposed upon the president by republican principles when a relative is a candidate he would send a message to congress soliciting leave of absence until June 25. It had been previously announced that owing to ill health President Errazuriz would turn over the presidency of Chile to Prime Minister Zanartu.

Will Tour the United States.

LONDON, May 3.—A special dispatch to The Daily Express from Vienna says that Pietro Mascagni, the Italian composer, has signed a contract for a tour of the United States. He will start Oct. 15 and take with him an orchestra of 80 members. His personal stipend will be £2,000 a week for eight weeks.

Glasgow Exposition Opened.

GLASGOW, May 3.—The city was en fete yesterday on the opening of the exposition, which already has been voted a great success. The weather was beautiful, and the day was observed as a general holiday. The city, which was crowded with visitors, was generally decorated with flags and bunting.

A Small Strike.

BUFFALO, May 3.—The rivet heaters and helpers employed in the boiler shops of the Lackawanna and Lehigh roads struck yesterday morning. Some time ago the companies were notified that unless an increase in wages was granted by May 1 the men would strike. About 60 men went out.

Victoria Day.

OTTAWA, May 3.—The bill making the 24th of May, the late Queen Victoria's birthday, a permanent holiday was passed in the house of commons. It will be called Victoria day.

A Long Voyage Ended.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The British four masted ship Juteopolis has just arrived from Hiogo, Japan, after an unusually long voyage of 220 days.

Comet Seen In Chile.

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 3.—A brilliant comet was seen after sunset last evening in the western sky.

THE SOUTHERN EXPOSITION.

Colored People to Take a Prominent Part.

CHARLESTON, May 3. — Booker Washington has been placed at the head of the negro department of the South Carolina interstate and West Indian exposition and has issued the following address:

"To the Colored People of the United States:

"The South Carolina interstate and West Indian exposition promises to be a most important event in the history of the south and especially beneficial to the interests of the negro. The exposition is to open in the historic city of Charleston Dec. 1, 1901.

"From the first the promoters of this enterprise have taken the deepest interest in providing an opportunity for the colored people of the United States to exhibit the progress they have made since their freedom.

"A special building on one of the most attractive and prominent parts of the grounds has been set aside for the use of the colored people for their exhibit. It is earnestly desired that it be filled with the products of the negroes representing every section of the country.

"The exposition will be in no sense a local or state exposition, but national in its character and scope. It is the desire of those in charge of the negro department to make the negro exhibit the most complete and satisfactory of any exhibit the race has made since its freedom.

"The aim is to secure not a great quantity, but a select quality.

"By far the greater proportion of the common as well as the highest class of skilled labor in connection with the erection of the various buildings is being done by negroes."

HARRIMAN FORCES AHEAD.

Clark's Men Withdraw From the Right of Way Struggle.

UVADA, Nev., May 3.—The railroad construction forces working for United States Senator W. A. Clark have surrendered their fortress on the contested railroad grade and will receive their pay and disband, ending the long struggle with the Oregon Short Line and the Harriman forces.

United States Marshal Emmett came here to serve an injunction against the Clark people granted by the federal court. As soon as the writ was served, Captain Virgil Kelly of the Clark forces ordered the barricade abandoned. A squad of Harriman bridge builders was on hand and immediately began tearing out the barricade.

The Oregon Short Line forces are now in complete possession of the disputed grade and will be until the court can pass on the case after its final hearing, set for June 7.

One-third of Canada Unexplored.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The director of the geological survey of Canada in his last report makes the amazing statement that practically nothing is known of one-third of the Dominion. So states United States Consul Seyfert at Stratford in a report to the state department. It is shown that more than 1,125,000 square miles of Canadian territory is yet unexplored. This includes the inhospitable detached arctic portions, but aside from these fully 954,000 square miles are for all practical purposes entirely unknown. The easterly area contains the greatest extent of unexplored territory. It comprises almost the entire interior of the Labrador peninsula, or Northwest Territories, in all 289,000 square miles, or more than twice the size of Great Britain and Ireland.

Plot to Break Jail.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Warden Sullivan of the Hudson county jail at Jersey City intercepted a letter written by Joseph Tellerwyne, a prisoner, to his wife, in which the warden got on the track of an attempt which was to be made by himself and four other prisoners to break jail. Warden Sullivan showed the letter to Sheriff Ruempler and Judge Blair. The three visited Tellerwyne, who confessed to the plot and said that the plan was to saw through the bars in the bathroom of the jail, drug or kill the night keeper and escape through the bathroom. While the plans for breaking jail were arranged by prisoners within it, they were to be carried out to a large extent by confederates on the outside.

Roosevelt Leaves Boston.

BOSTON, May 3.—Vice President Roosevelt has returned to Boston from his visit to his son at Groton school. He lunched at the Union club by invitation with Speaker Mayer of the state house of representatives, Governor Crane, Lieutenant Governor Bates, President Soule of the senate and others also being present. Later the vice president visited both branches of the legislature, where he made brief informal addresses and was given a reception by the members. Leaving the statehouse late in the afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt proceeded unattended to the South station, where he entered a private car for New York.

Steel Workers Discharged.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 3.—One hundred and fifty men have been discharged at the steel rail department of the National Steel company's plant. It is stated that the steel rail mill in this city will be discontinued and removed to Chicago to be added to the steel rail department of the Illinois Steel company. The plant is now under the control of the United States Steel corporation.

BOXERS CAUSE ALARM.

After Departure of Allies They Menace Pao-ting-fu.

PEKING, May 3.—After the troops of the German and French expedition left Pao-ting-fu for the Kukwang pass, on the borders of Shansi province, and the southwest mountains a force of 800 Boxers approached from the west and sent spies into the city, causing great alarm to the authorities of the city, who patrolled the streets all night. Another Boxer force surrounded a village south of Pao-ting-fu and held it all morning.

General von Ketteler will leave Pao-ting-fu on May 5 for Japan. He says the Germans may evacuate the place within three weeks. He expresses the belief that the Chinese have already returned to the mountains from which they were just driven by the Germans. It is understood that the French troops will shortly retire from Pao-ting-fu, leaving only three or four companies to guard the railway.

The return of the German troops from the mountains is slow on account of the insufficient transport equipment. The mountain roads are strewn with abandoned carts. The killing of German soldiers along the lines of communication may result in the punishment of the people and the burning of a village near Lingsho.

A trainload of French cavalrymen have arrived at Peking from the south.

Revolutionary Rumors.

LONDON, May 3.—"The reports of the secret combination of disaffected elements in the Yang-tse provinces for the purpose of organizing general risings are receiving some confirmation," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Morning Post. "The British consul at Nankin telegraphs Mr. Brennan, the British consul in Shanghai, that the Nankin viceroy is very anxious about the Yang-tse movement, and he asks Mr. Brennan to assist the taotai to preserve order by holding troops in readiness. It is announced from a German source that the French have withdrawn their troops from Hwai-lu to Pao-ting-fu, thus leaving the Germans in sole possession of all the passes into Shansi."

Dr. Morrison, wiring to The Times from Peking Wednesday, says:

"The indemnity committee favors a loan raised on the guarantee of all the powers. Its proposal to increase the maritime customs to 5 per cent ad valorem applies to import duties only, and not export. All the ministers of the powers except the British, American and Japanese favor an immediate increase to 10 per cent. The report, which is based on somewhat imperfectly understood data, has been referred to the home governments."

BOER TACTICS COPIED.

British Outposts Try Sniping—Many Deaths From Plague.

LONDON, May 3.—A dispatch from Pretoria says:

"Having come to understand the sniping tactics of the Boers at isolated points, the British outposts four miles from Johannesburg recently hid in the long grass near where cattle were grazing and waited four days. When the burghers appeared, they were put to flight, leaving two wounded."

Sir Walter F. Hely-Hutchison, the governor of Cape Colony, has wired the colonial secretary, Mr. Chamberlain, that the total of deaths due to the bubonic plague up to April 27 is 217. This number includes 41 Europeans. If the reported cases at Mafeking that have the symptoms of the plague are embodied in the report, the total number of cases would be 519, these including 135 Europeans.

Statue to an Insurance Man.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The bronze statue of the late Henry Baldwin Hyde, founder of the Equitable Life Assurance society and for 28 years its president, was unveiled at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the rotunda of the Equitable building. The statue was modeled by J. Q. A. Ward, the well known sculptor. The statue is life size. The cord which held a large American flag was pulled by W. H. McIntyre, fourth vice president of the society. Mr. McIntyre was formerly Mr. Hyde's private secretary, and it was because of his close relations to the late president that he was selected to unveil the statue.

Martinelli Takes Oath.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Cardinal Martinelli took the oath of his new office and subscribed to the profession of faith at the papal legation. The oath was administered by Mgr. Conaty of the Catholic university and witnessed by Mgr. Marchetti, the papal ablegate. The ceremony was private and was extremely simple. Among the provisions of the oath are pledges on the part of the cardinal that he will not resign his office, that he will not canvass for any one in the election of a new pope and that he will maintain the right of the sovereign pontiff to exercise temporal power.

A New Italian Order.

ROME, May 3.—The Capitan Fracassa of this city announces that King Victor Emmanuel will sign a decree next Sunday creating a new order to be known as the Order of the Knights of Labor, which will be conferred upon citizens, including workmen, distinguished in the study of labor questions or the amelioration of the condition of the laboring classes.

Leopold Plans Railways.

BRUSSELS, May 3.—Le Petit Bleu announces that King Leopold intends to create a network of electric railways, requiring a capital of 1,000,000,000 francs, to be constructed in the following order: Brussels to Antwerp, Brussels to Ostend and Brussels to Paris. According to the same authority the consent of the French government has been secured.

War Loan Allotment.

LONDON, May 3.—In the house of commons Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, chancellor of the exchequer, announced that £30,000,000 of the new £60,000,000 war loan had been allotted. Of this amount £11,000,000 would go to the Rothschild syndicate, £10,000,000 to J. S. Morgan & Co. and £5,000,000 to the Bank of England.

The Commissary Frauds.

MANILA, May 3.—The evidence for the defense in the trial of Captain James C. Reed, ex-depot commissary at Manila, charged with soliciting and receiving bribes and other official misconduct, has been submitted. It is generally believed the court will find Reed guilty.

Killed In a Runaway.

NEWBURG, N. Y., May 3.—Mrs. Harrison Paul of Woodbury was thrown from a wagon in a runaway and killed. Her head struck a tree, and her skull was fractured.

IN CRESCENT CITY.

President and Party Spend a Day In New Orleans.

MANY HISTORIC PLACES VISITED.

McKinley Addresses a Thousand Students at Southern University. Visits the Cabildo and Sails on the River.

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—The day spent in New Orleans will live long in the memory of the president and of the members of his party. In no other city in the United States is the old and romantic preserved and placed in such sharp contrast with the modern as in the Crescent City, and yesterday as the presidential party drove through the flower embowered city from the new into the old French and Spanish quarter it was like passing mysteriously from America into a foreign land, from this century into another that has gone. And the illusion of the transition was heightened by the interesting ceremonies which occurred in the old Cabildo, the seat of the government of the former Spanish and French rulers, which is yet preserved in its original integrity by the Louisiana Historical society.

The weather could not have been fairer. A strong sun blazed from a cloudless sky, but the heat was tempered by a light breeze from the river. The foliage was all a tender green, and along St. Charles avenue, out which the party drove behind a clattering squadron of cavalry, flowers, flags and pretty women in gay raiment formed a mist of color. Roses were everywhere, climbing up the pillared porticos and creeping over trellises and mingling their perfume with that of the magnolias, while the public squares thrilled with songs of semitropical birds. The entire population apparently was out to see the chief magistrate.

After a short visit to the Southern university, where a thousand colored students greeted the president with waving bits of colored bunting so arranged as to make the whole American flag and where the president made a brief speech, the party passed across Canal and Rampart streets, the boundaries of the new city, into the old town, with its narrow streets, its quaint galleried residences, its cathedrals, old Spanish buildings and French market, all with the flavor of another generation and all now unfortunately going into picturesque decay.

There was a striking picture when the party drew up before the moldering Cabildo, over 150 years old, which is situated opposite what is now called Jackson square, but which in the old days was the Place d'Armes. Around the entire streets the balconies were thronged, and down in the square was a crush of people. Many races were represented, but the foreigners were mostly French and Italians. Those on the outer edges of the crowd stood with their faces pressed against the high iron railing which incloses the park. Many people were perched in the trees.

Drawn in line before the historic old building were the young cadets from the Jesuit college, and up the winding stairways at the entrance of the building was ranged a file of the Continental guards, a local organization, in the buff and blue of the Revolutionary era, wearing cockades and white crossed belts with figures "76" on their shining brass plates. The president alighted, a squad of the cadets blew a fanfare on their French trumpets, the Louisiana field artillery fired a salute of 21 guns, and the bells of the cathedral and all the churches in the quarter peeled out their welcoming greeting. It was an inspiring moment. Up the stairway, past the Continental guard, the president and his party mounted into the crimson draped audience chamber, where the exercises took place. As in a dream the visitors were carried back to the days long ago when the Spanish kings ruled here and to that memorable day, almost a century ago, when the keys of the city of New Orleans were delivered up in this very room to Wilkinson and Clairborne, the American commissioners, and French dominion over the great Louisiana territory passed to the sovereignty of the United States.

Alcee Fortier, a distinguished creole, president of the Louisiana Historical society, recalled these great events in his address to the president, and the president in his response dwelt upon their momentous bearing upon the world's history. It was a notable speech and was received with enthusiasm by the distinguished gathering present.

The party then returned to the hotel for luncheon and in the afternoon embarked on a Mississippi river steamboat for a trip along the river front from Audubon park to the historic battlefield of Chalmette, where the monument erected in memory of the defeat of Packingham by General Jackson commands a view of the river. A little farther up and on the Algiers side of the stream the presidential party had a good view of the preparations now being made for the reception of the new floating drydock in course of construction for the government at Sparrows Point, Md.

The ladies of the party had remained quietly at the hotel during the ceremonies of the morning, only a few of them taking a quiet ride around the city, but they participated in the river trip and enjoyed it.

At 6 o'clock the presidential special resumed its long journey to the Pacific coast.

Coler to Leave Politics.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The Herald says this morning: "It was announced in Wall street that Comptroller Bird S. Coler would retire from politics at the end of his present term of office to become the head of an important trust company at a salary said to be $40,000 a year. When seen at his home last night, Mr. Coler declined to either confirm or deny the report of his retirement from the political field."

The Chinese Indemnity.

BERLIN, May 3.—The statement that the total indemnity to be demanded of China amounts to £65,000,000 has been officially confirmed here. This amount includes all private claims. It is believed here that if China will now undertake to pay this sum in indemnities the evacuation of Pe-chi-li province can begin immediately.

Australian Census Figures.

MELBOURNE, May 3.—The population of the district of Victoria, according to the last census report, is 1,195,874. This is an increase of 55,469 in the last ten years.

Music Hall Closed.

Plainfield is now without a place of amusement. The closing performance in the Stillman Music Hall was given last evening when the Whitney & Knowles' version of "Quo Vadis" was presented. The closing of the hall is looked upon with regret by many in this city who believe that the lack of a theatre will be felt by the local merchants. The theatre itself still remains but the entrance is to be converted at once into a store.

Since October 30, 1897, Music Hall has been conducted under the management of Maze Edwards. Mr. Edwards has made many friends since his arrival in this city and he has worked hard to make the hall a success. Mr. Edwards' every endeavor has been to please the theatre going public of Plainfield. He has labored night and day toward that end and such constant effort was deserving of better support than he received. The need of repairs and improvements to the hall has been felt but the owners were disinclined to invest any more money in the place without surer promise of return and so Mr. Edwards was compelled to get along under the existing conditions. Much credit is due him for what he has accomplished despite the difficulties which confronted him.

The owners of the building have decided, however, that financial returns from the theatrical business in Plainfield are not sufficient at present to make it advisable to continue along those lines and so they have determined to devote the room to other ventures.

The borough officials are trying to find a way to rid Somerset street of the unsightly poles which now bear the power and light wires of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company. The telephone poles no longer trouble as the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is ready to put its wires underground. For some reason, a similar treatment of the electric light and power wires does not seem to find favor although those wires are placed in conduits in the business section of this city. There is not any doubt but that these poles are not additions to the beauty of the street. The wires should certainly either go underground or be so arranged that the tall unsightly poles will not mar the view down the principal thoroughfare of the borough. The trolley poles will have to remain there until some new and successful means of transportation, which will excell the overhead trolley, comes into general use. The other poles are not necessary and should be gotten rid of as soon as possible.

The Democrats of Monmouth county have already begun to prepare for the coming State campaign. They are rallying their forces and will make a strong bid to carry their county if possible. It is announced that the delegation from that county will go to the Democratic State convention united in their advocacy of David S. Crater as the gubernatorial nominee. In case he fails to land the prize, as is probable, they will cast their votes in the second ballot, for Former Judge Francis Child, of Essex.

Special attention has been drawn to the work of the Plainfield Board of Education through the remarks made by Councilman J. B. Dumont at the last meeting of the Common Council. There is no doubt about the right of the public to know of what is done by the board. So it is to be hoped that the men, who serve the city in the capacity of members of the Board of Education, will see to it that the public is given every facility to learn of their acts.

Another rummage sale is in progress in this city. The success of the first tempted the repetition of the affair and the first two days of the latter give promise that it will be as great a success as the first. The rummage sale this time is held under the direction of the Relief Association only. On the other occasion, it was given jointly by that association and the Ladies' Auxiliary of Muhlenberg Hospital.

The Pan-American Exposition is a subject in which many Plainfielders are interested as there will be many residents of this city in attendance there during the summer. The Daily Press frequently publishes interesting descriptions of the various buildings and attractions which go to make up that great exhibition.

Only a united demand from the patrons of the Plainfield Water Supply Company can secure the general introduction of water meters and the more equitable adjustment of the relations between the company and the consumers.

Tomorrow will see a number of interesting baseball games on local diamonds. Not for several years have the local enthusiasts in the national game had so many good games in prospect as are now being played in Plainfield.

Passaic is now undergoing an experience with striking girls who have been employed at the cigar factories there. Paterson had a similar experience several years ago.

The building trades of Elizabeth are tied up completely as the result of a general strike. The demand of the unions is for higher wages.

The clerks in the local retail establishments are preparing to join the national organization for the clerks all over the country.

It is announced that Governor Voorhees is much improved in health and will soon be able to go out again.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

After so much has been said in regard to the alleged exorbitant rates charged by the Plainfield Water Supply Company, it is refreshing to hear of a consumer insisting on paying more than was charged for the use of water. This incident occurred a few days ago in Chicago. A resident of the Windy City sent $2 to the water department with the brief explanation that he got too much value for his regular rate. The dispatch failed to say what caused the hallucination of the Chicagoan.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Visited Somerville Castle.

The members of Freedom Castle, K. G. E., of this city, made the trip of visitation to the Somerville Castle last evening by stage. Hand & Son, the local express company, had charge of the conveyance.

Improving Property.

The handsome residence of George D. Hallock, on Willow avenue, is being renovated this week. Facing Sycamore avenue, a large addition is being added to the already commodious house.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence.)

Dunellen, May 3—A large and evidently well pleased audience heard the lately returned "Spinsters from Oklahoma" relate their experiences in the Presbyterian church last evening. Many novel features were introduced and the entertainment in all was one of the best seen in the borough in some time. The music furnished by the ladies' orchestra was very satisfactory. The affair was under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society and as a result a neat sum will be added to their treasury.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fletcher returned home yesterday from Wellesley, Mass., where they attended the wedding of their son, Loren Fletcher. It was a brilliant society event and was witnessed by a large number of invited guests. It required one large room to contain the handsome presents extended by admiring friends. Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher will take up their residence at Elliott, Mass., a suburb of Boston.

The next meeting of the Board of Education will be held Tuesday evening, May 7, when several important matters are to be considered. Among them will be the appointment of teachers, and if any vacancies are to be made at the close of the present term the board will be notified by the teachers' committee.

The Ladies Aid Society, of the Presbyterian church, met at the home of Mrs. Frank Wynkoop, Wednesday afternoon, and in addition to other business transacted, completed arrangements for a strawberry and ice cream festival. It will be held in the chapel Tuesday evening, May 21.

All members of Defender Fire Company are requested to be present at the wash to be held this evening. The chief and foreman will be at the house at 7:30. A number of hydrants located near the Whittier school and possibly one or two on the north side of the railroad will be opened.

Charles Hack, one of the drill crew on engine No. 67, who was injured about the head by coming in contact with an automatic signal, is rapidly getting better. His principal injury was a deep gash in the forehead. He expects to resume work in a few days.

R. F. Smith, of Binghamton, N. Y., has rented one of the stores in the Goth building, next to Taylor's Hotel, for the purpose of conducting an upholstering and general renovating business. He will open for business the first of the week.

Mrs. F. A. Reid, of Philadelphia, has returned home after a two weeks' visit with her mother, Mrs L. S. Palmer. Mrs. Palmer accompanied her and will remain at Philadelphia for a few days.

The grounds about Taylor's Hotel have been greatly improved during the past few days. Several noticeable improvements have been made under the direction of Edward Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S Shotwell, who were married a few weeks ago, have removed to Plainfield, where they will reside on Sandford avenue.

John Runyon, who has beeen in the employ of W. G. Runyon for the past year, has tendered his resignation to take effect tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weidenhaupt and daughter, have gone to Elizabeth for a few days visit with relatives.

Mrs. George Feiring, of Plainfield, spent yesterday with her mother, Mrs. Marienschenck.

Milton Smith, of New York, is the guest of his aunt, Mrs. O. A. Douglas.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence.)

New Market, May 3—A short time ago Mrs. Amanda Dunham decided to establish a hennery in the rear of her premises and for that purpose purchased six fowls. They were of good stock, in fact too good for some one admired them to such an extent they entered the coop Tuesday night and removed the heads from all six. Mrs. Dunham heard no one about the house and has not the slightest idea who the miscreant could have been.

The newly organized choir of the Seventh Day Baptist church held a rehearal yesterday under the leadership of Miss Emma Nelson. The pupils of the choir are making rapid advancement.

Letters remain uncalled for at the postoffice addressed to the following persons: Miss Alice M. Curtis, Nide Philomene Houde, Robert Mundy, Esq. and Mr. Samuel T. Tilman.

The schools of the township will observe Arbor Day, this afternoon, with appropriate exercises. The pupils of the New Market school will spend part of the afternoon at Vail's grove.

Mrs. Claton Coon, of North Plainfield, was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Dunn, yesterday.

Alfred Penrose, of Philadelphia, is visiting his brothers, Frank and Joseph Penrose.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence.)

Scotch Plains, May 3—The Board of Health has removed the guards from the Ellis home, there being no further need for them there. The children, Dorothy and James, who had diphtheria, are practically well now, and it is believed that the quarantine will be removed some time next week after a thorough fumigation.

The Arbor Day exercises at the public school will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the school house. An interesting programme has been prepared and the parents and friends of the scholars are invited to be present.

The quarantine is still maintained at the home of W. E. Gibbs, where his wife and daughter, Margaret, are ill with slight cases of scarlet fever. They are improving every day and it is thought they will soon recover.

There is no change in the condition of Albert Gibbs, who was injured in the Jersey Central yards at Jersey City a few days ago. The physicians are doing their best to save his arm.

There will be a baseball game on the local grounds tomorrow between the Westfield team and the Scotch Plains team. An interesting contest is looked forward to.

The regular prayer-meeting will be held this evening at the Baptist church. Rev. G. M. Shott will be in charge and teach the Sunday-school lesson.

Dr. Parks has completed a number of improvements about his property which add to the general attractiveness of the place.

The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Walper is recovering from a recent severe illness.

Mrs. F. C. Gibbs has returned from Bayonne, where she has been stopping with her son.

Mrs. H. Meyer has returned from New York, where she has been visiting friends.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

(Special Correspondence.)

South Plainfield, May 3—James Marooney, foreman of the local section gang on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, was injured yesterday by a pick which struck him on the ankle. He is now confined to his home on Lehigh avenue.

Arbor Day exercises were held at the school this morning at 11 o'clock. The pupils enjoyed a vacation this afternoon.

George Smith has built a new hennery and is making several other improvements about his premises.

No meeting of the Patriotic Sons of America was held last night, as a quorum was not present.

Firman Arrowsmith has secured a position as toolmaker at the Columbia Tool Works, Plainfield.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

Dr. Knott's New Home.

Dr. Middleton O'Malley Knott, of Crescent avenue, has rented the house, 1211 Putnam avenue, formerly occupied by Assemblyman Charles S. Foote. The place is now being thoroughly renovated throughout and he will make it his home after his marriage in the latter part of the present month.

State Y. M. C. A. Secretary Here

Charles B. Scott, of Newark, was the guest of Secretary J. H. Manning, of the local Y. M. C. A., Wednesday. Mr. Scott is the State secretary of the Boys' Work Department of the Y. M. C. A.

AT THE THEATRES.

Something About the Attractions Which Plainfield Theatre-Goers May Care to Witness.

The inauguration of the F. F. Proctor Big Stock Co. at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, New York city, will take place Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock sharp when the musical contingent of the Proctor Stock Co. will present the musical comedy, "Cinderella at School," by Woolson Morse. This musical comedy was first presented at Daly's Theatre, New York city, and enjoyed a run of about 150 nights. It is is in two acts and seven scenes and will be mounted in a manner quite equal to a Broadway production. The prices will remain as usual; 15c, 25c and 50c, and variety specialties will be offered before and between the acts of the comedy. They include Max Cincinnati, the graceful juggler; Lillie Western, musical artiste; Doherty Sisters, singing comediennes; Tegge and Daniels, Dutch comedy; the Kalatechnoscope motion pictures, etc.

CHAPTER XI.

Mrs. Nolan crept into her own room and went to bed. She had her quota of inborn superstition, and the idea of associating such an inevitable thing as death with her misdeeds went against her inclination.

"I feel as if she really did drown herself," she said to her disturbed inner-self, "and that her dripping corpse is in there now unknown to anyone but myself."

She was unable to sleep at all. The ship continued to roll badly and now and then waves which raced one another across the deep struck the vessel broadside with sufficient force to break in the portholes. Indeed, Mrs. Nolan's mind was too active with the part she had played, and with conjuring up possible consequences, to give itself up to unconsciousness. At three o'clock she rose and crept into the adjoining room and bent over her accomplice. To her astonishment this beautiful creature was sleeping as soundly and peacefully as an infant.

"The idea of her taking it so easily and me nearly out of my head is ridiculous," Mrs. Nolan resentfully argued. "I'll go back and sleep. What's the use to worry? She's running the risk."

But she lay with her eyes open till the day broke, then as the sun rose in a cloudless sky she looked from the window. The gale was over, but the waves were still high and looked like hills capped with snow. It was the grandest sight Mrs. Nolan had ever beheld, but she could have desired it less so. Its majesty reminded her of the omnipotence of God against whose laws she had set herself. Her watch told her it was yet half an hour before the time her companion usually awoke, yet Mrs. Nolan had already borne the mental weight of what had taken place as long as she intended. She wanted company, so she shook Mrs. Goddard gently. This much-indulged woman was in the habit of entering the waking state by a series of audible yawns and little cries and these unconscious outbursts Mrs. Nolan had to stifle by holding her hand over their source. Finally Mrs. Goddard opened her eyes and ceased to squirm about.

"It's too early," she asserted, drowsily. "It is still dark."

"Don't talk above a whisper," cautioned Mrs. Nolan. "It's dark because the curtains are down. It's really a bright day."

"What time is it?"

"Eight o'clock."

When Mrs. Goddard had risen and dressed, and they had smoothed out her bed till it had the appearance of not having been used, she took her place in the closet.

"Now," she said, "fix me, and then ring for your breakfast. I hate to sit so long cramped up here. To gain time, perhaps it would be a good idea to order your breakfast and have the stewardess arrange the room at once. Give her a tip—ten dollars will not be too little, or too large; she may be thinking, now that I am overboard, that she won't get her fee. The money will put her in a good humor; it will make her respect you, and then you must request her to see that you are left alone."

The stewardess brought up Mrs. Nolan's breakfast on a tray. Her face really did wear a certain look of discontent as she put the things on the table.

"Here is some money for you," said Mrs. Nolan. "While it is true that Mrs. Goddard employed me as a companion, we are more like friends, and if she were alive she would have given that much to you, I am sure."

The woman's face lighted up as she unfolded the banknote.

"Thank you, madam," she said. "It was awful, wasn't it?"

"I was unable to sleep last night on account of it," said Mrs. Nolan, pouring her coffee. "The rooms need very little attention. Please leave the tray and see that I am not disturbed any more than possible."

"I will, madam, thank you very much." And in a few minutes her work was finished and she withdrew.

Then the closet was opened and Mrs. Goddard came out.

"I only want a roll and a cup of coffee," she said, in a whisper.

When they had both finished breakfast, Mrs. Goddard coiled herself up in bed and began to read a novel. About 11 o'clock there was a rap at the door. Mrs. Nolan opened it about an inch. It was the stewardess to say that the captain would like to see her when it was convenient.

"Tell him I'll come at once," said Mrs. Nolan, and she turned back into the room, closing the door.

"You had better go right on," said Mrs. Goddard, with a white set face. "He only wants the particulars about me. Tell him a straight tale. I shall not stay in the closet."

"But the risk!" protested the more cautious woman.

"Oh, hang the risk!" said Mrs. Goddard, coarsely.

"I won't go a step unless you stay in the closet."

"Very well, I am glad you are so careful, after all. My Lord, it makes me shiver to think of our being caught."

"I think, just to disarm suspicion, I'd better leave the stateroom door wide open. As we have both the closet keys it would be safe."

"I told you you had a better head than I have," said Mrs. Goddard from her seat in the closet; "that's a splendid idea."

Fifteen minutes later Mrs. Nolan passed along the crowded deck under the gaze of a hundred pairs of curious eyes and returned to her stateroom.

"What did you tell him?" questioned Mrs. Goddard as she came out blinking in the light.

"I answered every question he put to me," said Mrs. Nolan. "He seemed thoroughly satisfied. There was one point that was hard to get around. He had found out from the purser that you had not put any money in the safe and asked what had become of your funds."

"Great God! I never thought of that. What did you say?"

"I told him your purse with a few dollars only was here in my possession, but that you were owing me a large amount and that I thought I ought to be allowed to have it."

"Ah, first rate!"

"Then he looked at the second officer and said: 'How much is in the purse?'

"I told him that I thought there was about $50. Then he and the officer exchanged looks again and the captain said: 'Is it likely, do you think, that a lady of Mrs. Goddard's position would make a voyage to Europe on so small an amount?'"

"Ah!" Our female Quixote was all of a quiver. "What did you say to that, Lucy?"

"I told him that you had told me you had a sight draft on a London bank which you intended to get cashed as soon as we landed."

"What on earth did you say that for?" gasped Mrs. Goddard.

Mrs. Nolan smiled significantly.

"I told him you always wore it and your jewels in a strong belt round your waist."

Mrs. Goddard held her breath for a moment, then:

"Did it go down?" She used slang only when great excitement drew about her the habits of her early life.

"Yes, down with you—to the bottom of the sea," said Mrs. Nolan, smiling grimly.

The next day passed agreeably enough but for the fact that on a diet of cold canned meats, biscuits and wine Mrs. Goddard chafed under the monotonous restraint of the darkened room, and Mrs. Nolan's absence, for this woman, as a part of her role, now took walks by herself on those parts of the deck not frequented by the other passengers, and went down for her meals. The swell of the sea had degenerated into mere ripples, and not a white cap was visible. The weather was ideal. The woman who had proffered her services to Mrs. Nolan on the night of the supposed accident approached during one of these walks and gave her a piece of information which she immediately bore to the impatient recluse.

"We are going to arrive at Liverpool to-night," she explained when she reached Mrs. Goddard's side. "We will get in about midnight and lay at anchor till next morning. All the salon passengers will go ashore on the tender at eight o'clock in the morning. A tender for the second-cabin passengers will leave just before day. Jeanne, how on earth do you intend to get ashore unnoticed?"

The woman to whom this question was addressed seemed to be lost in crafty meditation. Suddenly it seemed to occur to her that she had not answered and she said:

"My first intention was to stay in my hiding-place until the ship was in the dock, and it was the most risky part of the entire undertaking, but, Lucy, I am going to go ashore with the second cabin passengers. It will still be dark, and if I am well veiled, they will not know me in the rush that always takes place at such a time. Yes, I shall at all events try that."

"But where shall I meet you?" asked Mrs. Nolan, frightened by the precariousness of the undertaking.

"I shall go to the Hamilton hotel, and wait for you there. You'd better go to another, and when you feel that you are not observed go out for a walk and join me. I shall register as Mrs. Charles Gray, of Toronto, Canada. When we meet then we shall go on to London together. You know you will have to look after the passing of my luggage through the custom house officers. Tell them you are going straight back to America and will deliver the things to Mr. Goddard. That explanation ought to be sufficient."

The next morning at the hour mentioned Mrs. Goddard was ready for her bold dash for what she called "liberty." She wore a simple black dress and a rather long black veil. Mrs. Nolan had bravely reconnoitered for her; she had gone down at the first bump of the tender against the side of the ship and found the upper decks clear and the lower one a chaos of struggling second-class passengers anxious to get ashore. Mrs. Nolan returned with an air of great relief.

"You'll have no trouble I honestly believe," she declared. "The place is badly lighted and they will drive the people on the tender like sheep. Go right on, take the first flight of stairs to the right and you will be swallowed up in the gang in a minute."

This opinion was well grounded. Mrs. Goddard crossed the deck, descended the steps in question and found herself in a throng of passengers with eyes only for the little boat ahead of them. Our adventuress was soon on the tender, and took the most remote seat she could find in the stern of the boat. It soon began to move.

Gastric Troubles
Mrs. Robert Moore, aged thirty-six years, living at 36 Horatio Street, New York City, writes: "I have suffered three years at least from gastric troubles. I could not sleep at night. My head ached and my feet would be cold as ice. My bowels were not regular and I would have such cramps from gases forming on my stomach that I would faint away. They relieved me of all the foul gases that formed in my stomach and they move my bowels regularly, for which I had been taking physics all the time. I have no more headaches and can sleep well; in fact, I feel as light as the air which I breathe and that is saying a good deal for a woman who weighs one hundred and ninety pounds."

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

The Long and Short Coats—Novelties In Thin Materials.

The list of dainty summer materials is so large that one might think that cotton was really king, but, as such things have a habit of doing, silk has suddenly jumped to an importance quite unexpected, above all the navy blues in pongee and surah. These blues are demanded by everybody, and it is said that dealers are finding it difficult to supply the demand. Silks are being used to make summer jackets, and one finds all the chameleon silks and many of the thread and khaki shades made into jackets and outside coats more or less long. There are several coats made in Louis XIV shape, which, however, are becoming to but few. These are of black taffeta and rich colored silks, mostly in plum, dark green and blue, with velvet cuffs, pocket lids, revers and collars. Some of them are richly embroidered with gold, silver and also heavy lace applique.

White silk in all the soft qualities is to be very fashionable, both all white and with black dots or other figures. Where it is all white the trimming will be black lace and black velvet. It is well understood that black velvet trimming, whether in ribbon or piece, is not for mourning.

The new white cotton and linen materials for fine summer dresses surpass everything ever before offered. Swisses are too stiff and mulls too soft, and there seemed to be no happy medium until now, and this season is the first where absolutely sheer goods have been produced with any body to them. They are now soft and flexible, while at the same time they have all the bright crispness of swiss. The list of different designs is a great one and could not be given in a day. But white is the one universal vogue, and all the colored things are but incidentals and for a change.

The girl graduates have many lovely things especially devised for them for this season, among them being white silk warp mohair and the beautiful silk warp lansdowne, which is silkier than all silk and lighter than all wool or cotton and yet strong as linen. This makes up so daintily that it would be worth a mother's while to see it before making her choice for her daughter's graduation gown. It takes any kind of trimming and looks girlish and graceful without any.

I may speak a word for the new mohairs. Heretofore they have had a harsh feel very disagreeable to some, but in some way known but to the maker they are now as soft and silky in feel as any wool and silk stuff. Indeed, it seems that it is only in very recent times that the possibilities of silk and wool and other textiles in combination have been understood.

We may congratulate ourselves that we are not bound down to a fixed national costume and that we can wear what we like, for what would the woman do whose heart is set on a long coat and the other who likes the short and jaunty jacket? All fashions are our own, and the long coat shown in the illustration is just as fashionable as can be. This is called an automobile coat, and it has a straight back from the shoulders to the bottom. The fronts are arranged so the three stitched laps form a trimming. Across the bust the same arrangement is carried out, and the edges have a narrow cord set all along. This cord is of silk to match the beaver color of the coat, and it is mingled with gold threads. The revers are of silk in the same shade and closely stitched, as well as the collar, which turns down closely. The sleeves have the three separate folds all stitched and edged with the cord. This is one of the handsomest of all the season's long garments.

Things are going to change so suddenly that we may let those who like them take all the comfort they can find in the long and flaring gowns. Certain authorities whose word is law, and gospel, too, say that we are to see a most radical change. Then the dressmaker who can devise a way to make the present styles over into the new will reap a harvest.

The majority of the summer dresses have no collars at all, and the pretty and dressy V front will be most popular. Some small pompadours and many surplice forms will be among them, but all seem to tend one way—to the old Empress Eugenie styles, modified somewhat to suit the intelligent woman of today, but those styles without doubt. HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 5—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Decision of character.—Rev. iii, 14-16; Prov. iv, 23-27.

Decision is one of the most admirable and necessary traits of human character. It is defined as "the quality of being decided, prompt and fixed determination, unwavering firmness." This trait of character is essential to success and happiness in any sphere of life, but it is peculiarly so in the religious realm. Decision of character is absolutely essential to religion. One cannot believe and act in accordance with his beliefs who is not steadfast in his faith and unwaveringly firm in his life. Wavering is inconsistent with religion. It demands steadfastness, firmness and stability. Decision of character requires a fixed purpose and object in life. "Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee." That decision and firmness may be exercised in life we must have a definite point in life ahead of us toward which we are steering. A vessel upon the sea could not practice steadfastness unless it had a definite, fixed destination in view. No more can we upon the sea of life display this virtue unless we have a fixed point before us toward which our lives are moving. When it comes to life, this fixed point should be the will of God as revealed in Jesus Christ. The chief end of our lives should be to glorify God, and steadfastly and without wavering we should bend our lives toward that end. This has been the objective goal of the lives of the world's greatest men, and they have been most successful who have been most unfaltering in their pursuit of this end. "Ponder the path of thy feet and let all thy ways be established."

Decision of character demands the power to resist temptation. "Turn not to the right hand nor to the left; remove thy foot from evil." No man ever led a decided, determined life without opposition and without temptation. The strongest temptation is to turn aside, but decision of character is against turning aside as well as against turning back. However steadfast our characters, we will be tempted to waver, to turn aside and to turn back. Success therefore depends upon the power to resist temptation, and this power should be prayed for and cultivated. God can and will give us the power to stand firm and decided amid the fiercest temptation if we will depend upon Him and not trust in our own strength.

Indecision of character is injurious and punishable. It harms us among men, and God Himself will punish it. This is illustrated in the church at Laodicea. It was neither cold nor hot, neither decided for God nor decided against God, and therefore the Lord said, "I will spew thee out of My mouth." Let us believe in God, make the will of God the end of our existence and even amid the temptations of life be firm in faith and steadfast in action.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

Have a biographical meeting, with papers or addresses on the lives of men who have been conspicuous for decision of character.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xxxii, 25, 26; Num. xiii, 25-33; Joshua xxiv, 15; Ruth i, 16-18; I Kings xviii, 21; Math. vi, 24; Luke xv, 17-20; Acts xxi, 8-14; I Cor. xv, 58; Jas. i, 5-8.

God's Kindness.

When we recall what God has given us in excess of all necessity for the purpose of pleasing us, let us remember that we have taken but the first and lowest step leading up to a vast and glorious subject. If God has done so much for us here on earth, what will He not do for us hereafter in heaven? If God is so generous now, what will He be in the world to come? The eye looks forth upon the streams and meadows and trees, and up to the skies, all so full of beauty, and reports that these material images are employed to describe that better country which is reserved as our eternal home. That heavenly world is not described in the dull lines of didactic prose. All the pleasant things in the universe are made to complete the promise of that ultimate enjoyment. Now it is a landscape—green pastures, still waters, the tree of life with leaf and fruit—every image of contentment and delight. Now rises an imperial city—its gates of pearl, its foundations of precious stones, its streets of gold, and all the nations pouring their glory into it. Now it is our Father's house with many mansions; a festive board, with unmeasured plenty; with songs of joy and garlands of gladness upon the head.—Rev. William Adams in Universalist.

Trust In God.

Trust your Heavenly Father at any cost, and when heart and flesh fail still bid your soul to hope in God and buoy it up with the assurance that it shall yet praise Him "for the help of His countenance." God is good when He gives, but better when He keeps in order to give an accumulated blessing—heaped up, pressed down and running over—into the bosom of His child in whom patience has had her perfect work.—F. B. Meyer.

The Beauty of Holiness.

Many who see a glory in flower and leaf, sunset and mountain height, overlook the glory inwrought in man, who is created in the likeness and image of God, a glory potentially present in the most degraded, needing always and only the divine touch to cause it to bloom into the "beauty of holiness."—American Friend.

Walking Toward Heaven.

There is nothing which can so assist you to walk toward heaven with good speed as wearing the image of Jesus on your heart to rule all its motion.—Episcopal Recorder.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 5, "Decision of Character"—Text, Rev. iii, 14-16; Prov. iv, 23-27.

Indecision is a fatal defect when it becomes characteristic. It hinders flight while flight is the wise course and then flees when fighting is the only way of escape.

Vacillation is more than open opposition. Saul, the king of Israel, loses honor, crown and life from lack of firmness, while Saul of Tarsus gains imperishable renown, crown of martyrdom and eternal life, though he had been a most violent opponent of Christ. When halted in the wrong course, he had stamina of character which could make a radical change and when the right was found could hold it unswervingly to the end.

Moral integrity must sometimes wear the appearance of sternness. Nay, it must at times be severe in very fact. Suavity and courtesy and polite conventionalities of social intercourse have their proper place, but whoever surrenders conviction on a moral issue for the sake of ease or favor or yields his sense of duty at dictation or persuasion of another is perilously near to moral suicide. Rosewater and lavender are good in their place, but there are times and places when blood and iron are the indispensable requisites of healthy manhood.

Decision of character has many specious counterfeits, which must be rejected. Quickness in settling a question is often only nimbleness of wit and frequently indicates shallowness of judgment, yet it is quite occasionally mistaken by those who have it for the real coin. Stolidity, stubbornness and even sheer stupidity have passed current as indicating decision of judgment when they are furthest removed from it. The more we see of the spurious the more admirable and valuable the genuine becomes.

The sense of security which comes to one who is able to definitely settle his purposes and adhere to them is of such high worth that it pays to use a great deal of effort to secure self control in this direction. The confidence which others can have in one who exhibits such qualities of mind insures friendship and abiding regard of those whose good opinion is worth having.

But if a person is not born that way how can he help himself? That is the very point in issue. How can we cultivate decision of character?

First of all, get some proper appreciation of its value until a wholesome desire to have the quality takes strong hold of you and you think of it often and long. Then study the way it appears in others until you can tell the true from the false and learn to admire the essential and disregard the incidental features of the power. After that it will not be difficult to discover your own failings and see in what particulars and under what circumstances the weaknesses of your own nature appear. In fact, these will thrust themselves into notice continually if one will only be as frank in criticising self as in remarking on flaws in other people. The real hard work then begins of training the powers out of weakness into firmness. Raw recruits do not become veterans in a day. Time, patience and persistent practice are necessary to bring the soul to the condition where it can efficiently and promptly respond to the demands of duty with decisive action.

The end is worth all the exertion needful. This process of development makes the soul trustworthy. To be where reliance can be placed on one is to be noble, whatever the lineage or past record. It is warrant of future achievements and satisfaction. It assures control of destiny and approbation of the Lord. It does much to secure perseverance to the end of the race.

By all means cultivate decision of character.

The Supremacy of Christ.

A young person is occasionally met with who in acquiring some culture has also received the idea that Christianity is narrowing and belittling and cannot in intellectual realms pass with the world's best. Such need to study a little more deeply and broadly. The fact is that Jesus Christ is not only the world's incomparable moral teacher, but He holds the supremacy in the realm of intellect. We have His thought at two removes from the original in our English Bible. His speech is reported to us by men not specially skilled in literature and writing with no purpose of making fine reading. Even their statements come to us in a translation not always most expressive of their meaning. Yet the Bible holds its place easily at the head of all literature the world has ever produced. Would you have the most touching of stories? Ask Dickens, the master of pathos, and he will tell you to turn to the story of the prodigal son. Edmund Kean, the great actor, would tell you there is one passage so tender and pathetic, so full of tears, that no man could properly render it—"Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Burke held that the greatest document on human rights was the sermon on the mount.

Pardon Full and Free.

A sinful child, I strayed away from right;
My soul, once pure and clean, was black as night.
I thought to hide my sin in doubt and pride;
Darkness became more dense; the gulf grew wide.

In vain I sought for rest outside the fold;
My feet so weary grew, my heart so cold.
Helpless at last and worn with bitter grief,
I cried for human aid. None brought relief.

At length One heard my cry and to me said,
"What means this wild despair, this awful dread?"
And then in loving tones, "Lift up your head,
For the Lord still liveth and for thee bled."

Dear Lord, I will submit my all to Thee.
His pardon then I found so full and free.
My soul is all aglow with love divine,
For I am now the Lord's, and He is mine.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Excelsiors defeated the North Plainfield Juniors in a loose game of baseball yesterday afternoon by a score of 33 to 21.

The Plainfield High School and the Alis A. A. baseball teams will play a game on Martine Common tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Manager Tracy Howard, of the Park Baseball Club, has announced the following schedule of games: Monday afternoon, Parks against Whittiers, at the cricket grounds. Tuesday afternoon, Parks against Underwoods, at the cricket grounds.

A team from the North Plainfield Grammar School and St. Mary's team crossed bats on the Westervelt avenue grounds yesterday afternoon and the borough boys won by the score of 14 to 12. G. Conover and F. Emmons formed the battery for the borough team and O'Loughlin and Taylor for St. Mary's team.

The Hope baseball team will have for its opponents tomorrow the North Plainfield High School nine. The latter team is in much better condition than it was at the commencement of the season and will no doubt put up a very good game. It will be played on the Hope grounds at the corner of Grant and Sherman avenues.

While the members of the Hope ball team are very proficient in their respective positions, their work at the bat has been anything but good. In order to overcome this difficulty in time for tomorrow's game, all members are requested to meet on the grounds this evening at 6:30 when they will be given batting practice. The result wil probably prove of great benefit to the team.

A very exciting base ball game took place on the cricket grounds yesterday between the Y. M. C. A. Juniors and the Victoria Athletic Club. The contest was close throughout and resulted finally in a score of 11 to 12 in favor of the Juniors. Good pitching by Sherwin and a remarkable catch by Sheppard, both of the winning team, were the features of the game. The battery for the Juniors was Sherwin and Leland and for the Victoria's, McVoy and Mosher, and Bach and Martin.

The St. Mary's ball team will play their second game of the season tomorrow on their own grounds. Last Saturday's game with the Kensington A. C. was almost a walkover for them but there will have to be some bracing up for tomorrow when they meet the Clinton Avenue nine. It will be the first game for the latter, but that counts for nothing as the Evona boys have spent a good many hours in severe practice. Both sides are confident of success but neither can afford to feel safe. The St. Mary's expect to have Winn in the box.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

A contest in the series of the women's bowling tournament of the Gesang and Turn Verein was held yesterday afternoon in Saengerbund hall. The games were quite spirited.

BRIDGE OVER CEDAR BROOK.

WILL BE BUILT BY COUNTY BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

Attempt to Allow None But Union Labor to Work on The New Court House.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, May 3—At a regular meeting of the Board of Freeholders, held yesterday, it was decided to consider the erection of a suitable bridge over Cedar brook, near the plant of the Hygeia Ice Company, at Plainfield.

Mr. Westphal, of Plainfield, made the motion directing such action, and he was made chairman of a committee whose duty it shall be to investigate the matter and report back the situation and probable cost. It appears that the water at the point mentioned often causes much trouble and a suitable bridge is believed to be the best way out of the difficulty.

In the matter of constructing the new court house, Mr. Westphal submitted a clause to be inserted in the contract, that nothing but union labor be employed on the building. The resolution inserting this clause was laid on the table by a vote of 12 to 5 It looks as though there will be some difficulty in adopting such a clause, as it is known that many of the members are opposed to such restriction.

RUMMAGE SALE.

Successful Sale of Relief Association Will Close Tomorrow Evening.

The rummage sale, which was opened Wednesday by the Plainfield Relief Association at its rooms on West Front street, will close tomorrow evening.

The goods have been rapidly disposed of and the success of the affair is unprecedented. Yesterday afternoon alone the receipts were over $146.

In order to accommodate those who have been unable to attend, Mrs. Henry Lapsley, the chairman of the committee in charge, announces that the doors will be kept open until 9 o'clock tomorrow evening.

As heretofore the regular weekly sales, which take place twice a week, will be held. The dates arranged are Thursday afternoon and Saturday morning.

Famous Fighting Dog.

A full blooded bull terrier, belonging to Joseph M. Sweet, of Trenton, is attracting considerable attention as he is given a constitutional on the local streets each day. The canine answers to the name of "Rowdie," and is related to "Nelson," "Waterford Jack," "Wang" and others of the most famous fighters of his race. His owner, Mr. Sweet, who is at present stopping at the Hotel Kensington, has refused an offer of $300 for him.

Successful Dime Social.

A successful dime social was given at the residence of Mrs. John Rittenhouse, of New street, last evening, under the auspices of Friendship Lodge, D. of R. Music, games and other amusements were the features of the evening. Refreshments were served at the close. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Peter VanFleet, chairman; Mrs. J. Ketering, Mrs. J. B. Higgins and Mrs. John Rittenhouse.

Two Cases of Diphtheria.

Willie Peterson and Lillie Peterson, who live near the Brunson farm, opposite Clinton avenue, are ill with diphtheria and the Borough Board of Health has established a quarantine there. A thorough investigation will be made at once to inquire into the cause of the outbreak.

D. C. Smalley Sprained Ankle.

David C. Smalley sprained his right ankle yesterday afternoon by losing his foothold while walking on the loose boards covering the first floor beams of Smalley Brothers' building on North avenue. Mr. Smalley made a misstep and fell between the beams.

The Misses Ella and Lou Lunger, of Watchung avenue, will spend Sunday with friends at Greenwich, Conn.

MUSIC HALL CLOSE ITS DOORS

GRAND PRODUCTION OF "QUO VIDAS" WAS LAST ATTACTION.

Well Acted And Magnificently Staged —Manager Edwards' Future Plans.

After being Plainfield's only playhouse for over seventeen years, the Stillman Music Hall closed its doors last evening The last play was the Whitney & Knowles' production of "Quo Vadis," which was presented to a crowded house last night. "Quo Vadis" came fully up to its reputation made on the New York stage and was one of the best and most elaborate productions ever seen at the local theatre.

All the scenery for the six acts and eight scenes was made especially for the company and was of unusual excellence. The acting of the large caste was very good. Particularly fine was that of Joseph Callahan as "Nero" and Miss Calina F. Rohr as "Poppoea." The costumes and stage settings were the same as seen at the New York production. The thrilling story was effectively presented.

Last night's performance completed the fourth season of Manager Maze Edwards. Many of his friends slipped out between the acts to congratulate him on the success of the last night and to wish him good luck in the future. Beginning May 11, Mr. Edwards will begin service as manager of J. H. Haverly's Eden Musee in Brooklyn. He will continue to make his residence in this city. During the summer Mr. Edwaeds will take charge of Recreation Park which lies between Scotch Plains and Westfield.

NINE MONTHS FOR "JUMBO."

Douglass, assault and battery, $25 fine; Lawrence McClellan, Thomas Brown and James Bartek, larceny, twenty days each in the county jail; Thomas Kelly, David Gorman and Henry Joling, receiving stolen goods, sentence suspended; Jane Waldron, larceny, three months in the county jail; R. P. Ridley, assault, $40 fine; "Jumbo" Lewis, larceny, nine months in State Prison; Andrew Larsen, Jr., assault and battery, nine months in State Prison; Antonio Chevari, malicious conduct, two months in the county jail.

COMPANY K INSPECTED.

Major Kline Highly Complimented the Local Militia Company.

The boys of Company K were highly complimented by Major Kline last evening for the rapid progress made by the local organization in acquiring a knowledge of military tactics.

It was the appointed evening for an inspection by Major Kline, the commanding officer of the third battallion of the Second regiment to which Company K belongs. Arrangements had been made to conduct the drill on Martine Common, but owing to the stormy weather it was held in Washington Hall. The officers of Company K are highly elated over the showing made by the men.

Tuesday and Wednesday evenings drills will be held and on the latter evening an election to fill the position of captain has been ordered.

MR. LOUNSBURY'S REPLY TO COUNCILMAN DUMONT

Says That There is Nothing New in Action of Board of Education.

WAS PASSED LAST YEAR.

BOARD HAS DONE ITS BEST, HE SAYS, TO KEEP PUBLIC INFORMED.

Has Published and Sent Out Its Reports, But Connot Compel People to Read Them—A Word Regarding the Executive Sessions.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—As a member of the Board of Education, I feel indebted to Mr. Dumont for having called public attention to the condition of the finances of the board, though I am quite at a loss to understand why Mr. Dumont should be "appalled" in April, 1901, at a situation of which he was fully aware in June, 1900, or in fact that one so well acquainted with the question of tax collections in this city, should be appalled at all at the discovery that the board had not collected all the back taxes to which it was entitled.

It is proper that the people should understand that the board has not been in the habit of levying any larger tax than was necessary for the year's expenses, and should also understand that when a portion of that tax is not paid the board must necessarily be just that much in arrears, and had no other recourse than to borrow on their note the necessary funds in anticipation of the payment of such taxes, and these unpaid taxes stand as good and valid assets of the Board against the notes issued; the taxes bear 10 per cent. interest until paid and the notes 5 per cent.; surely this can hardly be considered "a deplorable condition of finances" These unpaid taxes for the years 1893 to 1899, inclusive, amount to over $12,000, about one-half of which is for the years 1898 and 1899.

It is also proper that the people should understand that one year ago, when the new school law became operative, the Board of School Estimate, of which Mr. Dumont was a member, passed upon the budget for the current year, and the Council included same in the tax levy, the amount being $53,000; under this same law this amount should have been paid by the City Treasurer to the Custodian of school moneys on or before Jan. 5, 1901; this has not been done, the Custodian having received up to May 1, the sum of $45,966, leaving a balance of $7,034 still unpaid, and as the Board of Education cannot now borrow, they must soon be without funds, unless the city pays the amount now in arrears on the appropriation for the current year. By all means let the people know the facts; it is their business and they should understand it fully; but let them know all the facts, all the figures, all the conditions and not pass judgment on the mere statement of one man who considers things in a deplorable condition, and stands "appalled" at discovering that which has been public property and in public print for months.

The Board of Education can and does publish its report annually, but it cannot compel men to read them. Last year it printed and distributed over 2,000 copies of said report and also published it in both the newspapers of our city, in which report was set forth in detail the exact condition of affairs, which has now been brought to the public notice in such a dramatic manner by Mr. Dumont. The board has nothing in its financial matters to be ashamed of and has never tried to hide them from the public, and any unbiased and sober-minded person must admit that it should not be criticised because others are not sufficiently interested to read the reports which it publishes.

Now just a word regarding executive sessions; the Plainfield Board is composed of only five members and meets but once a month; special meetings are rare, and committee meetings are seldom ever held except on the regular meeting night; under these circumstances it is quite natural that the board should spend a portion of their time on regular meeting night in considering as a committee of the whole, such matters as in larger bodies, would be acted upon by separate committees to which the public would neither receive or expect to receive admission; and I respectfully submit that the Common Council of our city and other executive bodies in every direction are in this way constantly considering apart from their general meetings, the same class of questions as are brought before the Board of Education in executive sessions, and no one who objects to it would pursue a different course if placed in the same position. Fred C. Lounsbury.

TOLD OF HER MISSION HOME.

INTERESTING TALK ON AFRICAN MISSION FIELD BY MISS MAIR.

Given at Meeting of Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed Church Last Night.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church met last evening in the lecture room of the church. It was reported that three new members have been added to the roll. Miss Grace Emmons and Miss Abbie VanCleef were announced as the delegates to the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at the Fifth Avenue Collegiate church, New York, May 14. The band pledged $35 toward the new piano which will be raised in various ways. Mrs. Albert Baker and Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh were appointed members of the entertainment committee.

Miss Lillian A. Force, president of the Band, introduced Miss Rachel Mair, a returned missionary from Liberia, Africa, who gave a talk concerning the country where she has been laboring, and about her work.

In telling about the mission house in Liberia, Miss Mair described her home in an interesting manner. She told something concerning the converted natives and how faithful they are in their service to Christ. In conclusion Miss Mair exhibited several curios, including a rice plate and pot, a baby's rattle, a "devil" doctor's horn, a broom and fly switch, made of palm strips. After the talk Miss Force expressed, on behalf of the Band, the apprecintion of all to Miss Mair for her earnest words. Following the meeting nearly all remained and examined the curios and had a talk with Miss Mair about her work.

TWENTY NEW MEMBERS.

Will Be Received Into Congregational Church Tomorrow Morning.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered at the Congregational church tomorrow morning, and twenty new members will be received into membership. The service will be enriched by a contralto solo by Miss Mary Hubbell, who has until recently been singing in the Presbyterian church in Montclair, and by a 'cello solo by Dr. Leonard Waldo.

The pastor wishes to meet at the close of the morning all who have been reading the course of Bible study arranged by the American Institute of Sacred Literature.

T. W. Morrison at a Reception.

T. W. Morrison, of this city, who has been sojourning at Asbury Park for the past year, was one of the fifty invited guests at a dinner given Sunday evening at the Colonial Club at that place, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O'Day who were recently married. Mr. Morrison and the bride's father, S. P. Goodwin, of Savannah, Ga., were in the Civil war on opposite sides and met after a fight. During the dinner Mr. Morrison related the incident in a toast.

Miss Messler's Successor.

As yet no one has been selected to take the place of Miss Emma Messler, as superintendent at the hospital. Recently, two trained nurses from Philadelphia, visited this city, with a view to make application for the position, but nothing definite has been done in the matter. It is quite likely that an out-of-town person will be selected for the place.

Making Room for Widening Street.

Edward H. Sebring, the Somerset street monument dealer, has been engaged during the past few days in removing the forepart of his exhibition of tombstones and monuments which adorn the yard. The stones were placed some distance back in order to make room for the widening of Somerset street at this point.

Will Tell of Work in Klondyke.

Rev. S. Hall Young, for many years a missionary at Nome, Alaska, and in the Klondyke region, will tell of his work at the Crescent Avenue church, Sunday evening. Mr. Young is a very talented speaker and is in great demand in all parts of the country.

Cake Sale at Smith's Grocery.

A cake sale will be held in the grocery of J. A. Smith & Bro., this afternoon under the auspices of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church.

Second Anniversary.

The second anniversary reception of the Sewing Circle connected with the Mt. Olive Baptist church will be held Thursday evening, May 16.

Transferring Old Summer Cars.

During the past few days the trolley company have been transferring old summer cars from Elizabeth to the Plainfield car shops.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Florence Williams, of Grove street, to Irving L. Niles, of Madison avenue, has been announced.

MIGHT LEAVE TOWN.

Otherwise the Two Women Will Have to Stand Trial for Disorderly Conduct.

Mrs. Sarah Dunham, and her daughter, Mrs. Hattie Martin, of Rahway road, were arraigned in the city court this morning, charged with begging and disorderly conduct. They denied the charges In order to procure witnesses they were allowed to depart until next Saturday, with the warning that if they were found guilty, they would receive an extra heavy sentence. If in the meantime, however, they decided they had spoken falsely, no one would stop them from leaving town.

Ben Butts, of Rahway, who had been living with them while he looked for work, answered to the same charge. He agreed to leave town at once.

ANSWERS TO APPEAL.

Aid Already Received For Needy Family as Told in Yesterday's Daily Press.

The appeal made in The Daily Press yesterday for aid for a worthy family is meeting with a ready response. Already the people are sending their contributions to assist this family, and more is sure to follow soon. Thus the family will be greatly relieved from distressing circumstances and be able to have the necessaries of life. The following donations have been received and are hereby acknowledged:

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP IS A GREAT SUCCESS

Such Was the Testimony of the Mayor of Deckertown at the Borough Council Meeting.

GAVE FACTS AND FIGURES.

TOLD HOW THE WATER WORKS WERE BUILT.

What They Cost to Maintain and How the Money is Raised—The Size of the Plant—Deckertown is Satisfied With Them.

S S. Vandruff, the mayor of Deckertown, before the Borough Council, last evening, delivered an absorbing speech on the results of municipal ownership of water works as tried in his borough.

At the outset of his talk he impressed upon his hearers that he spoke as an impartial witness of the good accomplished by municipal control in Deckertown The great difficulty experienced, said he, was to convince the citizens that it was expedient to bond the borough and install a water plant. This was particularly hard to do because the town only numbered 1,500 inhabitants and the cost of erecting the works was estimated at $60,000.

The question then arose as to whether it should be owned by the borough or by a private company. Although the latter held out alluring offers, it was decided, said the Mayor, to construct a municipal plant. This was done four years ago. Bonds representing $60 000 were issued and they mostly sold at par value.

Concerning the plant and equipment, Mayor Vandruff said that the lake from which the water was drawn covers ninety acres and is situated at a distance of seven miles from the borough. The water pressure is caused by gravity. Over 30,000 feet of eight inch pipe is used together with 13,000 feet of six inch pipe and 4,800 feet of four inch pipe. The cost of distributing and laying the eight inch pipe was twenty cents in position while in the other two sizes it cost sixteen and fourteen cents respectively. The pipe cost per gross ton $16 90.

There are now 238 taps and fifteen meters now in operation as well as fifty hydrants for fire protection. The pressure, he said, is generally 190 pounds to the square inch.

The receipts of the plant were estimated this year at $2 600, but for a given reason they became reduced to $2,300. In operating the plant, the expense now is $400 but this, the Mayor claims, will be reduced $100. The interest on the bonds amounts to $2,400 per year. For water purposes at the election in Deckertown, $1 000 is appropriated. Of this amount $500 annually is placed in a sinking fund to retire the bonds as they become due.

All the factories are supplied with water at a reasonable rate. The churches and schools are not charged for water supply. An expert's analysis of the water shows it to be as pure as any found in the State.

In concluding his remarks the Mayor said that the citizens of Deckertown had been offered $100,000 for the works by a private corporation, but that under no consideration would they part with the plant. Municipal ownership in Deckertown, he claimed, proves to be a great success.

When Mayor Vandruff had concluded his speech Thomas Doud, who is connected with the Plainfield Water Supply Company, questioned him at some length as to the rates charged the citizens of Deckertown.

Must Lay Sidewalks.

Street Commissioner Gavett recently sent out a large batch of notices notifying property-owners to lay sidewalks. This has caused a rush of business at the various stone yards and it keeps the commissioner busy furnishing grades for the proper laying of walks.

Reception to Teacher.

The adult Bible classes of Hope chapel, will tender a reception to Mr. Symons, the newly appointed teacher to the women's class, Tuesday evening. Silas Yerkes, the former teacher, has resigned on account of a throat affection.

New Members to Be Received.

The Lord's Supper will be observed at the First Presbyterian and Crescent Avenue churches tomorrow morning. At both churches new members will be received.

Social Next Week.

The Sunday-School of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold a social in the church next week.

BIG CONTRACT.

Greater Portion of it Will Come to the Pond Machine Tool Works in This City.

The largest contract of its kind ever awarded for machine tool equipments, has just been placed by the British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, with the Niles-Bement-Pond Company, of which the Pond Tool Works, in this city, is one of the plants. The contract is valued at $400,000 and calls for machines from two-hundred pounds to one-hundred and fifty tons in weight.

A large portion of the labor saving devices will be turned out at the company's plant at Hamilton, O., while most of the heavier machines will be built at the local factory. The probabilities are that the machinists in this city will enjoy a prosperous season for some time to come.

PLAINFIELDERS TOOK PART.

Entertainment at Mt. Bethel Church For Benefit of Organ Fund.

An entertainment was given last evening in the Methodist church, Mt, Bethel, for the benefit of the organ fund. There was a large attendance and the programme included vocal solos by Mrs. Lovejoy, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz and Oscar Moore, of this city; recitations by F O Smith and Miss Try Mattox. Mr. Smith made a hit, being recalled six times.

There were also vocal duets by Miss Margaret Sheppard and Mrs. Stiglitz and Mrs. Stiglitz and Oscar Moore. Miss Swaney, of Brooklyn, gave a soprano solo, and the entertainment was concluded with an amusing dialogue. It is believed that a sufficient sum was raised to purchase a new organ.

Charmingly Entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Randall, of Franklin avenue, entertained a number of friends last evening, in honor of the former's sister, Miss Matilda Randall, of Easton, Pa. The evening was pleasantly passed in playing games after which refreshments were passed.

DEBATED NATIONAL QUESTION.

LITERARY ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN IN BETHEL CHAPEL.

After the Debate a Musical Programme Was Given and Refreshments Were Served.

The first of a series of debates on topics of National importance, was held before a large audience in Bethel chapel last evening. The subject was, "Resolved, That the Church is More Potent Factor of Civilization Than the School." Richard B. Norwood and Alexander Still defended their belief in the affirmative against the attacks of E. A. Lightfoot and E. R. Williams. A popular vote afterward decided the question in the negative.

Following the debate selections were given by a quartette composed of Arthur Smith, William Groves, Richard Norwood and Reyner Hopkins. Charles VanHorn executed a selection on the cornet accompanied by Miss Euola Lane. Refreshments brought the evening's enjoyment to a close. The subject for the next debate will be "Is the Holding of the Phillipines by the United States Constitutional?"

Sale Under Martin Act.

At the meeting of the Common Council Monday evening, action will be taken authorizing Collector F. H. Smith to sell property for taxes under the provisions of the Martin Act. FUNDS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

TO MACADAMIZE STONE STREET IF PROPERTY OWNERS WILL ASSIST.

Warren Engine Company Allowed to to Take Steamer to Bayonne—Mayor and Council Accepted Invitation to Go Too.

Another step towards the general improvement of the borough was taken last evening at the Borough Council meeting by the passage of a resolution which, in its essence, calls for the construction of a storm sewer on Somerset street from Jackson avenue to Green brook. This was the most important work accomplished at the session of the borough fathers, but other business of an interesting nature was transacted.

Provision was made for the macadamizing of Stone street. Warren Engine Company received permission to take the steamer to Bayonne May 15. To Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., was appropriated $25 to cover expenses, probable to arise from the Memorial Day celebration. These matters all came before the meeting in the shape of petitions.

The property owners along Stone street had requested the Mayor and Council to put the street in order. This will be done as soon as the residents on the street subscribe and pay into the treasury $100 as a part of the expense which will be incurred by the borough.

A petition made by Mrs H. C Randolph, asking that a tax paid on some bank stock be refunded was referred to the borough counsel for action. Mrs. Rondolph stated in her petition that she was a resident of Fanwood, and that the identical stock had been taxed in that borough also. To the street committee was referred a petition calling for flagging of a crosswalk on the southeast side of Linden avenue, across Duer street. An invitation to parade with Warren Engine Company at Bayonne, May 15, sent by that organization, was readily accepted by the body.

The Borough Clerk was ordered to communicate with the Plainfield Street Railway Company to ascertain what contribution towards the sprinkling of Somerset street this summer, the corporation proposes to make. By the request of the Mayor, Thomas Doud, a representative of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, who attended the meeting, was called upon to explain why the Council had not received the company's bill for water supplies, which was due April 1. Mr. Doud advanced as a reason that the clerical force of the company had probably not had time to make the bill out.

There was no report from the committee on municipal ownership, but at the close of the meeting, however, the Councilmanic body was addressed by S. S. Vandruff, the mayor of Deckertown, who spoke on municipal control of the water works at his home.

A communication received from George F. Brown petitioned for the the amendment of the ordinance fixing the compensation of the borough collector and treasurer. He asked that the salary be made $1,400 and that the ordinance go into effect June 3. An amendment for this purpose was passed on its first reading.

An appropriation of $75 was made for the purchase of suitable summer uniforms for the regular marshals. In this connection Councilman Northrop advised that the officers be permitted to don the shirt waist uniform if desired.

During the meeting Mayor Smalley told of his trip to Perth Amboy with Borough Engineer VanEmburgh as members of a committee to ascertain the cost of a storm sewer for Somerset street. They were fortunate, he said, to find a suitable pipe made by a reliable firm. The cost of a twenty-four inch vitrified pipe, which is the size recommended by the Borough Engineer, is forty-eight and three quarter cents per running foot. The cost of branch pipes used to connect with the opposite side of the street, he quoted at $2.28 per foot. For these rates he explained the option was only good until Monday.

Inasmuch, said he, that the Borough Counsel declares that no ordinance is necessary to be made for the construction of a storm sewer, the urgent

How Lithuanians Play Dice.

A peculiar dice game is indulged in by the gambling element of Lithuanians in Baltimore. Gathering about the dice tables in the saloons kept by their fellow countrymen, they quickly lose all interest in everything outside of that which is transpiring upon the cloth before them. As they sit or stand about the tables the careworn features of old men contrast strongly with the ruddy faces of the youths. The eagerness with which the players seek the numbers upon the falling pieces is wolfish in all its intensity. Comparatively small sums are placed upon the game, and side bets run from five cents to a dollar. Although resembling in the manner in which it is operated the high dice game, as played by the Anglo-Saxon races, the dice of the Lithuanians, instead of numbering from one to six, run from one to ten, the numbering of the six sides being 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 10. The game is played with four pieces, and a possible 40 is the point striven for instead of 24, which is high mark in the similar American game.—Baltimore Sun.

APRIL AN ABNORMAL MONTH.

WEATHER BUREAU HAS NEVER KNOWN SO MANY CLOUDY DAYS.

Temperature Was Remarkably Even —Just Half the Month Was Rainy.

The record of the weather for the month just closed is abnormal in some respects and particularly so as regards the number of cloudy as well as rainy days.

In the entire history of the Weather Bureau, which covers a period of thirty years, there has never been any where near so many days of cloudiness Out of the first twenty-four days of the month, twenty-one were classed as cloudy by the Bureau. This is the more remarkable when it is considered that the statistics show that ten days cloudy weather has been the average heretofore

Exactly one-half the month was rainy. The fall of rain last April measured less than two inches, which is below the normal, while this April it was greatly in excess of the average.

An unusually even temperature has characterized the month Not once did the mercury go below 38 degrees, and with the exception of the past two days it has not risen above 64 degrees. The cause of this evenness of temperature is due largely to the generally continued cloudiness. According to the records the coldest and wettest April occurred in 1874 Then the mercury fell as low as 18 degrees and the average was only 41½ degrees. The rainfall then was twice as much as it has been this month.

While the major part of April has been very disagreeable, yet the last few days of the month were unusually bright.

Sadders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror, says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." Madagascar Hedgehogs.

At the Regent's Park menagerie in London several living specimens of "tenrec," the hedgehog of Madagascar, were recently received. It is said that stuffed specimens in museums give no adequate idea of the form of these strange animals. Their resemblance to hedgehogs rests only upon their possession of a spiny covering. The shape of their bodies resembles that of an inflated globefish. They are insectivorous, and are said to be restricted to the island of Madagascar. The specimens in London, at any rate, are remarkable for their habit of yawning.—Youth's Companion.

Facts About the Century.

An industrious calculator has been searching out some interesting facts concerning the new century. He points out that the twentieth century will contain 36,525 days, which lacks but one day of being exactly 5,218 weeks. The middle day of the century will be January 1, 1951. Fifteen out of the hundred years will begin on Wednesday and the same number on Friday. Fourteen will begin on each of the other days of the week.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Ordeal of Albert.

It was at Windsor castle that Queen Victoria, then only a girl of 20, did what she described as "the most nervous thing a woman was ever called on to do," when she summoned the young Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha to a private interview and "proposed" to him. She had first met him when, as a boy of 17, he came with his father to England, and when, three years later, he "made no secret" of his love for his fair cousin, "no one was surprised and everyone was delighted."—Tit-Bits.

COLICKY FRETTY TEETHING BABIES NEED LAXAKOLA

The Great Tonic Laxative

WATCH the children carefully. Their health, perhaps their lives, depend on keeping their bowels regular. Many parents make a mistake by giving their little children the old-fashioned, violent purgatives which are racking and griping, and are therefore not only unpleasant, but dangerous.

Laxakola does not gripe nor irritate. It is a pure, gentle and painless liquid laxative. It is not only a sure laxative, but it contains valuable tonic properties which not only act upon the bowels, but tone up the entire system and purify the blood. A few drops can be given with safety to very young babies, and will often relieve colic by expelling the wind and gas that cause it. Great relief is experienced when administered to young children suffering from diarrhœa, accompanied with white or green evacuations, as LAXAKOLA neutralizes the acidity of the bowels and carries out the cause of the fermentation. It will aid digestion, relieve restlessness, assist nature, and induce sleep. For constipation, simple fevers, coated tongue, or any infantile troubles arising from a foul condition of the stomach it is invaluable. At druggists, 25c. and 50c., or sent by express, sample to LAXAKOLA CO., 132 Nassau Street, New York, or 356 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

CUBAN REGISTRATION.

Thousands of Protests—Nationalists Charge Partiality.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, May 4.—Yesterday was the last day for registration for the municipal elections in June. Governor General Wood's order that an American officer should be present at each registration office throughout the entire day to receive protests caused much excitement, the politicians claiming that it was another case of American interference.

The order provided that the military commander should act as judge in case of protests and that such applications as he considered just should be allowed, the applicants to be enrolled upon the voting lists later.

As a result there were thousands of protests. The Nationalists assert that the registration boards have discriminated against them. The Republicans, who control the situation, reply that they have only followed the election order literally.

There seems to be no doubt of the success of the white Republican party, notwithstanding the overwhelming majority of the Nationalists.

Cyclist Taylor Again Wins.

BORDEAUX, May 4. The American cyclist, "Major" Taylor, continuing a series of victories in Belgium and France, has won the international cycling race over a course of 2,000 meters in 3 minutes and 41 seconds. The contest had been postponed from Thursday evening, when it was to have been brought off under electric light. At the last moment the light failed, and the enormous crowd, greatly disappointed, smashed the railings and seats, piled them in a heap and made a bonfire of them. The police finally quelled the disorder, and the gate money was returned. Yesterday's affair passed off in orderly fashion.

PRESIDENT IN TEXAS

Met In Houston by Governor Sayers.

ROUSING RECEPTION AT AUSTIN.

Cannon Fired Along the Night Route Until Stopped by Request—Touching Flag Presentation — Address to Colored People.

AUSTIN, May 4.—Out of Dixie the presidential party traveled into the heart of the great southwest. After leaving New Orleans beautiful Bayou Teche, the home of the Acadians and the waving ricefields of western Louisiana were passed during the night, and the new oilfields of Texas whirled by just at the peep of day, too early to be seen by the president.

When the party arose, the train was already flying over the plains of Texas, which stretched away to the horizon in every direction, level as a board.

Until Austin was reached the train passed in succession through the cotton belt of Texas, the rich agricultural region beyond the Brazos river known as the Black prairie, much wooded country and the grazing land. The president had his first glimpse of long horned Texas cattle and picturesque cowboys on western range horses. The president's reception in the Lone Star State was a continuation of the ovation he had received throughout the south. Every honor was shown him and his party, and there was much enthusiasm. Governor Sayers and other prominent state officials met the president at Houston, the first stopping place inside the state, and accompanied him as far as Austin, the capital.

Minute stops were made also at Hempstead, where the president shook hands with a number of people; at Brenham and at Elgin.

The feature of the day was the reception accorded the party at Austin, which, like New Orleans, had never before had the honor of entertaining a chief magistrate of the nation. The city was profusely decorated, and in the evening there was a brilliant illumination of Congress avenue. Austin never before held such a crowd of people. They came from every direction, some hundreds of miles, and literally swamped the hotel accommodations of the city. It was estimated that over 20,000 visitors were here. As the population of Austin is only 23,000 the tax upon its facilities can be imagined.

A procession headed by a fine military band and consisting of 15 companies of state militia and the Confederate veterans and Grand Army of the Republic organizations marching side by side escorted the party to the east portico of the magnificent capitol building, where the president addressed a sea of enthusiastic people.

HOUSTON'S WELCOME.

President's Guard of Honor Once Acted For Jefferson Davis.

HOUSTON, May 4.—The presidential train reached Houston at 8:15 o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. McKinley and all the members of the party felt refreshed from a full night's sleep. No stop had been made after leaving New Orleans except to change locomotives or to take water at the small stations along the way. Citizens were in waiting all night along the line to see the president's train pass, and their cheers could be heard faintly above the roar of the cars.

Cannon were fired at several stations close to the track, but before 11 o'clock the railway officers telegraphed ahead asking that the saluting be abandoned, since the president and Mrs. McKinley were fatigued from their visit in New Orleans and needed to sleep during the night undisturbed. The request was complied with.

The sun was shining brightly when the train rolled into Houston, but a cool breeze was blowing, and the coming carriage drive through the city and its environs was anticipated with keen pleasure by the distinguished visitors.

The arrival of the train was heralded by a volley from a battery on the bank of the Buffalo bayou. All business had been suspended in Houston, and the surrounding country seemed to have emptied itself into the city. An elaborate programme was crowded into less than two hours. The Houston Light guards, the crack military company of Texas, which acted as a guard of honor for Jefferson Davis on his visit here in 1875, and a company of cowboy rangers escorted the party in carriages through the decorated city. For several blocks the parade moved between lines of school children, who waved flags and strewed the president's path with flowers. At a handsome arch on Polk avenue the president was presented with a floral piece by colored residents. Before a big and enthusiastic audience at the Auditorium Mr. McKinley was formally welcomed by the governor and made a happy response.

At the conclusion of the speeches a touching incident occurred. A feeble old lady came forward and presented Mr. McKinley with a small silk flag of the Lone Star State. She was the widow of Anson Jones, the last president of the republic of Texas. The wood of the staff was from the old capitol building at Columbia. While at Houston the president shook hands with an old army comrade, J. U. Fellows, who was a sergeant in the Third Ohio when the president was a private in the same regiment. Mr. Fellows was exceedingly proud of the fact that he had at one time outranked the chief magistrate.

At Prairie View, some miles beyond Houston, where the State Normal and Colored Industrial school is located, a stop was made to permit the president to receive the greetings of the students and directors. The exercises took place at a crossroad on the open prairie. The school buildings were discernible on the horizon. Thousands of western range horses and every kind of nondescript vehicles which had been used to bring the people formed a novel picture. The president made an earnest speech, addressing himself entirely to the colored students.

Sharkey a Winner.

DENVER, May 4.—Sailor Tom Sharkey put out "Big Fred" Russell, the California heavyweight, in the fourth round of what was scheduled to be a ten round go before the Colorado Athletic association here last night.

Aged Hermit Dead.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 4.—Abraham F. Ogden, a hermit 88 years old, is dead near Wantage. It is said that he predicted the great blizzard of 1888.

CITY LIES IN ASHES.

Terrific Conflagration Raged In Jacksonville, Fla.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE HOMELESS.

Six Lives Reported Lost—Property Loss Roughly Estimated at $9,000,000—The Flames, Fanned by a Gale, Were Irresistible.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 4.—Jacksonville has experienced the most disastrous fire of her existence. The buildings on the entire length of Beaver street from Davis street to the creek on Liberty street have been totally destroyed. This is 14 solid blocks of residences. For the same distance Ashley and Church streets have both been completely blotted out. When the fire reached Bridge street in its eastward course, it enveloped in flames three blocks, Duval, Monroe and the north side of Adams, burning up that entire section of the city and running 14 blocks to the Duval street bridge.

How much farther in that direction the city is burned it is impossible to learn, the street being impassable.

When the fire reached Julia street, it was a roaring furnace without any prospect of being put under control.

The local military companies were called out to keep back the crowds, and the fire department began to use dynamite to blow up the houses a block from the fire and thus prevent the fire from spreading. So fierce was the blaze, however, and so strong had become the wind that millions of sparks and flying burning shingles spread over five or six blocks, setting the roofs of the houses on fire in advance of the fire department. Soon Senator Taliaferro's residence and then the adjoining houses on that block were ablaze. Desperate efforts were made to save the Windsor and the St. James hotels, but both houses were quickly enveloped in flames. For about an hour the guests in the Windsor had been busily packing their trunks and went away loaded with trunks and grips, some unfortunately to the United States hotel, but most of them to Riverside.

Leaping madly across the street from the Windsor, the flames set fire to the Seills House and then the Methodist parsonage. A few moments later the Trinity M. E. church was a mass of flames. The Opera House block followed, and then the Richards and Livingstone boarding houses. A desperate effort was made to save the Baldwin mansion, which was recently purchased by the Elks for $18,000. No earthly power could save this building, and that entire block and the one west of it were quickly a mass of flames. Once the fire got started on Main street the closely adjoining buildings went one after the other. Paint shops, with barrels of oil in stock, were plentiful in this district, and as they caught on fire one after the other the blaze rose hundreds of feet high and quickly set the other buildings across the street on fire.

Then the Hubbard hardware store caught, and the people scattered when they saw what had happened. Hundreds of pounds of powder and a great deal of dynamite were stored in this building. Ten minutes passed, when suddenly there was a roar, and the building collapsed like an eggshell. The dynamite and powder had exploded. The firemen at this time were working in great danger. Cartridges began to explode, and bullets began to fly around, so the effort to fight the fire at this point for a time had to be abandoned. This was only the start of the most intense part of the fire. The new Furchgott building was soon ablaze, and soon the Gardiner building was also a mass of flames. Down the street the fire spread with rapidity, and in a short time the entire section of Bay street from Market to Main street and extending for five blocks back was burning all at once.

The city building went, the fire department building, the armory, the county courthouse, the clerk's office with the county records, the criminal courthouse, the city jail and the graded schools and the Catholic church and orphanage, St. John's Episcopal church and the convent. Almost the entire city of magnificent buildings was burned up in less than four hours. The scene was one that beggars description.

At 8:30 p. m. the fire was checked at the intersection of Laurel and Bay streets, where the Commercial bank is located, which went up in flames, the Western Union building being just across the street and not being damaged.

Among the prominent hotels burned were the St. James, the United States, the Placide and the Windsor.

It is impossible at this hour to ascertain the loss, but it is said by insurance agents that it will be between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000.

Six lives are reported lost in the conflagration.

The mayor has called a meeting of the city council to consider ways and means for relieving the sufferers.

The plans of the city as prepared by the city surveyors show that 130 blocks were burned and a part of another block. The estimate of residences to the block in the residential district is ten, and in the business section the blocks were solid.

The chief of police has ordered all saloons closed until further notice.

Mayor Bowden says the property loss will exceed $15,000,000. Ten thousand to fifteen thousand people are homeless.

Fire In Gridley, Ills.

GRIDLEY, Ills., May 4.—A fire here destroyed 17 buildings before it was brought under control. The damage is about $50,000.

THE PAN-AMERICAN.

Brighter Weather at Buffalo—First Stadium Sports May 15.

BUFFALO, May 4.—Weather conditions were more favorable yesterday, and the attendance at the Pan-American exposition grounds was larger. The sun shone brightly all day, but a sharp cold breeze swept down Lake Erie, causing the denizens of the Midway, who hail from warmer climates, to seek sheltered nooks. The inhabitants of the Eskimo village were the only members in the motley crowd who looked comfortable. They had their troubles, however. A case of measles has developed in their camp, and the patient was removed to the temporary Pan-American hospital on the grounds. Effective precautions have been taken by the exposition health authorities to prevent a spread of the disease.

The date for the first sports in the stadium has been fixed for May 15. They will take the form of a celebration in honor of the completion of the great amphitheater, and the entries will be confined to employees of the grounds. It was first decided to hold this festival on April 27, but the liquid mud in the arena at that time prevented any extensive exhibition. The programme will be made up of athletic events and exhibitions by Midway concessionnaires.

The Pan-American mail car, which will be located in the railway transportation building, has arrived. The car will be in charge of six railway mail clerks, who will don duck uniforms and hats. All outgoing mail from the exposition grounds will be transferred to the depots by automobile service.

Strikers Cause a Shutdown.

DAYTON, O., May 4.—"Owing to difficulty with our molders the factory will be closed till further notice." This notice, signed by the board of directors, was read by the 2,300 employees at the National Cash Register factory yesterday afternoon, and the workmen went home speculating as to the possibilities of it when taken in connection with the known determination of President John H. Patterson. Mr. Patterson declined absolutely to discuss the situation. The facts are that a few days ago four molders were discharged, the officials say, for cause, and the foundry men struck for their reinstatement. Then the polishers joined the demand for the return of the men and threatened a sympathetic strike. The officers announced that if the polishers struck they would close the factory for an indefinite period. The polishers struck yesterday. The men define their position by declaring that the four molders were unjustly discharged.

Boston Linemen to Strike.

BOSTON, May 4.—After a session lasting until 2 o'clock this morning the linemen's union, representing some 400 electric linemen employed by the various electric companies of this city, ordered a strike to go into effect at 7 o'clock this morning. This does not include the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies or 28 emergency men of the Boston Elevated Railway company, the latter company being given until 10 o'clock in which to grant the demands of these men. The strike affects the linemen employed by the Boston elevated in this city and suburban cities, the New England Telephone and Telegraph company, the Boston Electric Light company, the Edison Electric Light company and several suburban electric light companies, and altogether some 400 men are affected. The men demand $3 for a nine hour workday, having been receiving $2.50 for ten hours.

Des Moines Honors Conger.

DES MOINES, May 4.—Edwin H. Conger, United States minister to China, was formally introduced to Des Moines at a public meeting held in the Auditorium yesterday afternoon. The reception was tendered by the two Grand Army posts, the city, citizens generally and the missionary societies represented in China. Three thousand persons attended it. Addresses of welcome were made, and Minister Conger responded briefly. Mr. Conger and the members of his family were the guests at a reception at the statehouse in the evening under the auspices of the City Federation of Women's Clubs. It was the second time in its history that the use of the statehouse had been granted for a private reception.

A New Leather Trust.

BOSTON, May 4.—The Boston Commercial Bulletin gives this morning the details of a new trust to operate in upper leather against the American Hide and Leather company. The promoter is C. O. Lappe of the J. C. Lappe & Sons company. The combination is to control the Pittsburg and Allegheny tanneries, and its capital stock will be $10,000,000.

The Dixie's Mission.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The auxiliary cruiser Dixie, which sails for New York on May 6 for a long trip to South America, will carry a large number of enlisted men for the south Atlantic station and will bring back those on the station whose time is about up. In all about 700 men will be taken south, and most of the number will be left on the southern station.

A Frightful Accident.

SAVANNAH, N. Y., May 4.—John M. Hill, aged 50 years, one of the best known roller mill men in the state, met death in a frightful manner. When found, Mr. Hill was suspended from a shaft on the third floor of his mill, and it is thought his clothing caught in a set screw on a pulley, throwing him into the air. His neck was broken.

New Colgate Scholarship.

HAMILTON, N. Y., May 4.—The Baptist Educational society has received from Hon. John S. Munro of Camillus, N. Y., $2,500 to establish a scholarship for a ministerial student in Colgate university to be known as the Hinton S. Loyd scholarship in honor of the venerable secretary of the society, H. S. Loyd, D. D.

Bakers to Strike.

NEW YORK, May 4.—Five hundred bakers went on strike to enforce a ten hour workday. Tonight 500 more bakers will quit work. This was resolved on at a meeting of the bakers in Liberty hall. The "boss" bakers were willing to consent to the demands, but declined to sign agreements.

Japan's New Premier.

YOKOHAMA, May 4.—Marquis Saiouji has been appointed acting premier. All the old ministers have resigned, with the exception of the Japanese minister of finance, Viscount Watanabe, who remains firm.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

April Defaults Smallest For Many Months—Iron and Steel Brisk.

NEW YORK, May 4.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Commercial failures in April were 763 in number and $5,571,222 in amount of defaulted liabilities. In the previous month insolvencies reached $9,195,464 and a year ago were $9,761,869. The marvelously healthy condition of business is best appreciated when it is discovered that the defaults last month were the smallest in 31 months, with the exception of May to August, 1899, inclusive. In manufacturing lines there were but 163 failures, with a total indebtedness of $1,997,694 against 178 last year for $4,514,003.

Stability of prices and vigorous prosecution of work at mills indicate the wholesome condition of the iron and steel market. Throughout the entire range of products of this industry the current demand for immediate delivery exceeds all previous records, yet makers maintain a conservative position, and prices are not pushed up to the danger point. It is at the finishing steel plants that there is the greatest urgency for shipments, and full capacity is assured for the next three months.

Dullness is still reported in the textiles.

There is no improvement in woolens, and Coates Bros.' average of 100 quotations of wool on May 1 was 17.71 cents against 17.99 on April 1 and 22.76 a year ago. The London sale opened with disappointing prices. Small concessions are reported in a few grades of shoes, and in other cases manufacturers are making slightly better goods at old figures.

Further advances were secured in the cereal market, Chicago speculators being forced to cover May corn contracts at 55 cents. Attractive prices brought more liberal receipts at interior cities and also stimulated operations on the farms.

Miners to Storm the Capitol.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., May 4.—Secretary Hartlein has sent notices to the local unions of District No. 9, United Mine Workers of America, to hold themselves in readiness for orders to be issued next week to march to Harrisburg to impress the legislature with the fact that the mine bills now being held up in the senate must become laws. President Fahy and other officials have arrived from the state capital to organize the march. It is proposed that the Shamokin-Ashland miners will march through the Herndon valley to Millersburg, to be there met by miners from the Schuylkill, Hazleton and Lykens valley sections. From Millersburg the miners will proceed in a body to the state capitol. It is thought that out of a membership of 50,000 in District No. 9 at least 20,000 will join in the movement. The miners generally are enthusiastic over the idea.

The Eastman Trial.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 4.—An adverse decision on the prosecution's attempt to introduce the defendant's testimony before the grand jury which indicted him brought the government's case against Eastman, the Harvard instructor charged with the murder of his brother-in-law, to a sudden close yesterday morning, but before the defense could outline the whole of its case the illness of one of the jury made postponement necessary. The decision of the court in excluding Eastman's grand jury testimony was not unexpected, for this was the second time that the government has sought to introduce it.

Ice Locked Craft Released.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 4.—The sealing steamer Virginia Lake, with 270 men on board, that had been frozen in the icefloes at White bay for the past six weeks, was freed yesterday by a furious hurricane, driving the ice pack into the north Atlantic, where the waves broke the floes into pieces. The Virginia Lake harbored at Bonavista for the night, being short of coal. She is expected to reach here today. A hurricane is now sweeping Newfoundland's coast line, and many of the fishing craft are seeking safety. It is feared that some casualties will result.

Jones Not Held For Murder.

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., May 4.—The examination of Nelson Jones, charged with the murder of Ada Fosburgh of Shoreham, who died on March 19 from strychnine which she received through the mails, came to an end yesterday afternoon by the state attorney agreeing to have the respondent discharged on the murder charge, but insisting on his being held on the second and lesser charge of attempting to commit an abortion. Bail of $7,000 was furnished by Miner Jones, the father, and the respondent was given his liberty until the grand jury meets in December.

Russia's Demands.

LONDON, May 4.—"It is reported that Russia has made the following demands," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Standard, "as compensation for China's refusal to sign the Manchurian convention: First, a rectification of the frontier between Kulja and Russian territory; second, the cession of a strip of territory in western Tibet, and, third, a concession for working the gold mines south of the Amur."

Death From Headache Powders.

ROCHESTER, May 4.—Thomas Donovan, aged 37, a canner, took a large dose of headache powders in the afternoon and shortly afterward sunk into a stupor, dying at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's hospital. The physicians found a slight swelling on the man's neck, but the case is puzzling them. The coroner is investigating.

ARMY TO BE REDUCED

Force In the Philippines to Be Withdrawn.

WAR DEPARTMENT MAKING PLANS.

Those Who Have Seen Most Service to Be Withdrawn — Enlistment Proceeding Satisfactorily, and Limit Soon Will Be Reached.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—It is expected that within a day or two a programme will be completed at the war department for a substantial reduction of the present strength of the United States army in the Philippines. The regular troops now there who have seen the most service are the Fourteenth, Eighteenth and Twenty-third infantry and one battalion of the Third artillery. They went out to Manila in 1898 in the first expedition under General Anderson, and if the announced policy of the department heretofore lived up to is continued these will be the first organizations to return to the United States. Some of these troops will be replaced with the new levies just raised in this country. It has not yet been determined how large a reduction will be made.

The department also is arranging to transfer a number of the enlisted men from one branch of the service to another with a view to securing the balance of proportions contemplated in the reorganization bill. Enlistments are being made in satisfactory numbers and soon will bring the army up to the maximum of 76,000 men. At present the infantry and cavalry, under the schedule recently approved by Secretary Root, are practically complete, or would be if the excess of men in different regiments were transferred to other regiments in process of formation.

Cradle of Napoleon IV.

PARIS, May 4.—Ex-Empress Eugenie has presented the municipality of Paris with the cradle of Napoleon IV. The cradle is a superb work of art. The body is made of rosewood and is decorated with enamels in antique silver and chiseled bronze. The frames are of silver, and a statue holds the imperial crown in gilt and bronze over the pillow, which is of white satin embroidered in gold with the letter "N." The cradle was originally a gift from the municipality of Paris to Empress Eugenie and is very costly. It has been preciously kept at Chiselhurst, where the ex-empress resided before she moved to Farnborough.

London's Population.

LONDON, May 4.—The population of London, including the city of London and 28 metropolitan boroughs, the whole forming what is termed the administrative county of London, is now 4,536,034. This is an increase of 308,717 since the last census in 1891. According to the first installment of census returns issued by the registrar general last night, 64 English and Welsh boroughs show increases. Bath, Chester and Ruddersfield show decreases. The borough of Westham, with an increase of 62,405, is the largest increase recorded.

Seizing Goods at Havana.

HAVANA, May 4.—The custom inspectors are seizing all uninvoiced goods found on board vessels entering this port. In this action they are strictly carrying out their orders to the effect that all vessels shall be thoroughly searched and that not even the quarters of the ship's officers be exempted. A number of packages have been seized on board the Alfonso XII, from Corunna April 20, said to contain Madrid lottery tickets.

Yellow Jack Appears.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Yellow fever has made its appearance in Havana, and the order of the secretary of the treasury suspending the quarantine regulations until the 15th inst. has been revoked. The news of the presence of the disease was forwarded to the surgeon general of the marine hospital service by Dr. Glennan, chief quarantine officer for Cuba. He says there are two cases of the fever in the city.

Large Fruit Supply In Jamaica.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, May 4.—The legislature has passed a resolution in consequence of the recent successful fruit shipments to England calling upon the imperial government to urge Elder, Dempster & Co. to establish a weekly service between Jamaica and Bristol, as it has been found that the supply of fruit now in Jamaica is greater than the combined English and American demand.

Mrs. Rathbun Found Guilty.

NEW HAVEN, May 4.—"Guilty of murder in the second degree" was the verdict which a jury at 7:24 last night rendered against Ann Maria Rathbun, charged with killing her husband by poison intended for another. A sentence of life imprisonment was immediately imposed by Judge Elmer in accordance with the statute.

Iowa Town Wiped Out.

MARSHALLTOWN, Ia., May 4.—Fire at Ewart has practically destroyed the entire town, including a large grain elevator, Iowa Central railway property, the postoffice, all business houses, the Presbyterian church and a number of residences. The fire originated in the elevator. The estimated loss is $100,000.

German Cavalrymen Condemned.

TIEN-TSIN, May 4.—Sergeant Bretschneider and Trooper Janisch of the German cavalry have been condemned to death for the murder of two innocent Chinese while doing patrol duty in December at Pao-ting-fu. They await execution pending Emperor William's sanction.

Stock Market's Wild Day.

NEW YORK, May 4.—The stock market yesterday was the most exciting of the week. The fluctuations were wide, and there were violent reactions. The dealings were on an enormous scale, nearly 3,000,000 shares being sold.

Count Von Bulow's Birthday.

BERLIN, May 4.—Yesterday Count von Bulow celebrated his fifty-second birthday quietly. No one seems to have heard that Emperor William sent the imperial chancellor a gift or a message of congratulations.

Reported Russian Loan Doubted.

BERLIN, May 4.—German financiers having close relations with the Russian government discredit the report of a Russian loan of 500,000,000 marks from France.

May 9—W. E. MacClymont's concert at Y. M. C. A. Hall.

The Only Thing to Do.

A taxpayer, residing on East Third street, writes to The Daily Press, concerning the articles about Plainfield's beautiful lawns which have recently appeared in these columns. He asks of what use is all the labor to keep the lawns and flower beds in good condition when his flowers are picked as fast as they bloom. That has been his experience, he declares, and further asks as to where the police are that such vandalism shall go on without interference.

There are some people in this world who have such little thought for the rights of others that they have no hesitation in appropriating all pretty blossoms which may come within their view, no matter where they happen to be. While the owner of a large place will not feel the loss, it falls particularly heavy on him who has only a small bed under cultivation. It is not pleasant to spend hour after hour in an attempt to beautify the premises only to find the results of one's labors destroyed.

Until mankind shall have passed through some radical change, there will always exist those people who are mentally deformed and who are responsible for acts of that nature. Plainfield has a police department which will compare favorably with the departments of other cities its size but its members cannot keep continual watch at every point. These depredations are not pleasant but, until the offender is caught, there seems nothing to do but to "grin and bear it."

The Common Council, Board of Trade and Hotel Keepers' Association, of Asbury Park, have united in an effort to advertise the advantages of that summer resort at the Pan-American Exposition. It is well known that many people will take advantage of their summer vacations to visit the exposition and that many summer resorts will suffer to a greater or less extent in consequence. The Asbury Park people are arranging for special excursion rates over several of the railroads from Buffalo to Asbury Park and return, hoping thus to tempt many of the visitors at the fair to enjoy a little outing at the seashore before returning home. It speaks well for the enterprise of the Asbury Park people and should materially aid in attracting visitors to that popular resort.

The newspapers of Hunterdon county are preaching the gospel of "good roads" to their readers, but, so far, it has seemed to have little effect. Attempts have been made to get the Board of Freeholders of that county to take advantage of the State aid law but they have not succeeded. Some time the day will come when these Freeholders will realize what a great mistake they have made and see that they are directly responsible for keeping back the progress of their county when the neighboring counties are advancing in rapid strides. There is nothing like good roads to build up and improve in many ways a rural community and the sooner the Hunterdon county Freeholders realize that fact, the better it will be for the people they represent.

Those who have aided in the work of that worthy charity, the Children's Home, will be greatly pleased to learn that the institution is in a flourishing condition as the report, which appeared in The Daily Press yesterday, showed. Because it is prospering, however, is no reason why any of those who have heretofore aided it, should no continue to do so in the future. Don't get the idea that the institution will run itself without any help for it will need just as much aid during the coming year as it has received in the last twelve months.

In Phillipsburg, a new way has been tried to solve the tramp question. A home and occupation was found for one of the wanderers and he promptly settled down and became a good citizen. The Easton Express points this out as the true solution of the tramp problem. While such a course might be successful in some cases, experience has shown, however, that some of the hoboes are too confirmed in their wandering ways to adapt themselves to the proposed change.

The erection of a new court house at Elizabeth will be an important happening in building trade circles. So the leaders of the Building Trades Council of this county are trying to secure the approval of the Board of Freeholders to their plan that only union labor shall be employed on the work. If they are successful, it will be an important victory for the building trades unions.

There is no doubt but that student rule in High Schools is the ideal form of government. Experiment has proved it to be a fact. It is only with the co-operation of the pupils that the teachers can secure the best results. The day of the hickory and the birch rod is gone. Reason and common sense have taken their places.

The street signs are now all in place. The improvement is a great one and the members of the street committee of the Common Council are to be congratulated on the timely improvement which they have accomplished.

Plainfield's industries stand high in their respective classes and exhibits of their work will be shown at the Pan-American Exhibition as some of the best accomplishments of the American people.

All the newspapers through the State have had something pleasant to say about the new venture of the Democrats in the journalistic field in Elizabeth.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

The local letter-carriers have not as yet received any notification of the fact that they must wear shirt waists. Notices have been sent to carriers in other cities, but why Plainfield has been left out no one seems to know.

Arrangements have been made by the local Y. M C A. at Buffalo to aid persons visiting the Pan-American Exhibition to secure comfortable quarters while in that city. With this object in view the Y. M. C. A. has established a Bureau of Information, where all visitors may obtain needed information concerning the locations and rates of respectable boarding houses and hotels. Plans have also been perfected whereby the three local Y. M. C. A's. will accommodate 250 men daily in the several buildings of the institution.

Last week seventeen officers and men of Company K marched along North avenue to the station for the purpose of going to Trenton. With heads erect and keeping step the men attempted to appear very soldierlike. One of the officers, however, recognized a young woman along the route and immediately saluted her by raising his cap. Fifteen of his comrades doffed their caps and one man in the line gave the regulation military salute.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at L W Randolph's drug store.

Mrs. E S. Dodge and daughter, of Providence, R. I., who have been visiting friends in Plainfield, have gone to Brooklyn where they will make a week's stay.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence.)

Dunellen, May 4—Since the raid on the Greenbrook tanks by the New Brunswick officials a few days ago, the tramps have been conspicuous by their absence. The word has gone along the line that their favorite haunt has suddenly become a "hostile" place, and, unless a sojourn at the Middlesex county jail is desired, it is deemed advisable to Greenbrook a wide berth. In a surprisingly short time, the news of the raid has traveled the entire length of the Central Railroad. The residents of the vicinity are in hopes the effect will be permanent.

Although the attendance at the "Spinsters" entertainment in the Presbyterian church Thursday evening was very good, the impromptu thunder storm kept many away who would otherwise have been present. For that reason the committee in charge is considering the advisability of having the spinsters repeat the story of their adventures. In case a final decision should be reached it will probably be Thursday evening.

The meeting of the Board of Trade Thursday evening was fairly well attended, but no business of importance was transacted. Several propositions were discussed and communications from persons wishing to assist in the advertising movement were read and considered.

Nearly the entire department turned out at the "wash" of Defender Fire Company last evening. Several hydrants on New Market road were opened and found to be in a satisfactory condition. Chief Chas. Wyhuskey was in charge.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education will be held Monday evening, at which time it is expected several matters of importance will be considered.

A love feast will take place in the Methodist church tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered after the sermon.

Mrs. John Heil, of Raritan, has returned home after a several week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Sirisky.

Miss Trust has returned home from New York, where she has been spending the winter with relatives.

Mrs. Lewis Tinsman and Miss Sadie Giles were the guests of Newark friends yesterday.

William Liable has taken a position temporarily as bartender at the Park hotel.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence.)

New Market, May 4—Dr. M. J. Whitford expects to put up a new barn next week on his lot on Prospect avenue. J. E. Meeker is the carpenter.

John Adelmann is having a drain dug from the cellar of the Hotel Nelson to the culvert across the street.

Mrs. Michling leaves today for Quakertown, N. J., to spend a couple of days with her sister.

Mrs. Frank Hill, who has been residing with her mother, Mrs. Runyon, hae gone on a visit.

Mrs. Wm. Ackerman was in town yesterday visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Davis.

W. J. Davis was in New York yesterday on business.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence.)

Scotch Plains, May 4.—The regular services will be held at the Baptist church tomorrow and Pastor Shott will occupy his pulpit. In the morning the subject will be "Worthy of Seven-fold Honor," and the evening theme will be "Plowing, Sowing and Reaping." The Baptist Young People's Union will meet at 7 o'clock in the evening. The public is cordially invited to all services.

Most of the streets and avenues in this vicinity are in fine condition for wheeling and driving. Every pleasant day Plainfielders in large numbers are to be seen enjoying the beautiful drives about the Plains.

The Arbor Day exercises will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the public school under the direction of Superintendent John Morey and the teachers. Several trees will be planted.

Rev. Mr. Beacom will occupy the pulpit at the Methodist church tomorrow morning and evening. The usual Epworth League service will be held prior to the evening service.

Thomas Paff, the real estate agent, reports business to be good. He says that there have been more inquiries this season for properties than usual.

The fur mill was shut down today to allow for some repairs that need attention. The mill will be started as usual Monday morning.

Lynus Walpool has made some excellent improvements about his hotel properly and in the near future more will be made.

The anniversary of the Epworth League will undoubtedly be observed May 12 in an appropriate manner.

The usual services will be held in All Saints' P. E. church tomorrow and the rector will be in charge.

Mrs. Meyer, who has been visiting in New York, has returned home.

Miss Amy Cook is visiting friends in New York for a few days.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

(Special Correspondence.)

South Plainfield, May 4—The sermon topics for tomorrow, will be, in the morning, "The Worthiness of the Lamb That Was Slain;" at the evening service, "The Striving Spirit." Rev. J. A. Cubberley will occupy the pulpit as usual.

A horse caught its front foot in the crossing at the South Plainfield depot yesterday. The animal was thrown violently to the ground, and lost a few front teeth.

James H Cubberly will lead the Christian Endeavor meeting tomorrow night at 7 o'clock. The topic given is "Decision of Character."

The choir of the Baptist church meets this evening at 8 o'clock for practice.

Crushed stone is put upon the grounds at the South Plainfield station.

The Misses Smith, of Brookside Farm, are spending a few days in New York.

Daniel Sofield is having his house repaired and papered.

T. J. Carey, formerly of this city, who is under treatment in a New York hospital, is slowly recovering from an operation.

Mrs. George Morton, of Westfield, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. R K. Case, of Central avenue, has returned home.

Charles McCann, of the local telephone company, who has been detained at home by illness, went to work again yesterday.

Dr. and Mrs. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who have been enjoying a trip through the New England states, have returned home.

Mrs. W. C. Smith, of Grandview avenue, who fell several months ago and severely injured her foot, is able to get about, but the injured foot still gives her much trouble.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

need is for the immediate passage of a resolution which will permit the street committee to take advantage of these rates. The resolution was passed.

George F. Brown, the treasurer and collector submitted the following report for the month of April:

RECEIPTS

Taxes and interest,	$1,141.82
Board of Health,	12 82
Special school	419 43
Fines, Frank Rowley, clerk,	19.00
Macadamizing,	24 00
Balance on hand April 1	1,785 95
Total receipts	$3 403 02
Disbursements	$1.852 79
Cash on hand May 1	$1,550.23

The report of the street committee showed that the total disbursements, for the month of April, were $843 17. Of this amount, $308 06 represents expenses incurred in widening Somerset street.

On motion of Councilman Clark, the meeting adjourned until May 17.

Bed Bugs and Cock Roaches.

For destruction and complete riddance of Cock Roaches, Beetles, Wood and Water Bugs, Bed Bugs, Ants, Rats, Mice, etc., "Rough on Rats," though poisonous, if used with care is most effective. In fact it is the only thing that will permanently annihilate Bed Bugs and Cock Roaches. As an exterminator of Rats and Mice, "Rough on Rats" is the old reliable that never fails nor disappoints. They "don't die in the house." Is sold all around the world. Is used by all civilized nations of the earth. Is the most extensively advertised, the best know and has the largest sale of any article of its kind on the face of the globe. It gives satisfaction every time. Beware of imitations. I employ no peddlers. Have a suspicion of any dealer offering substitutes said to be as good. 15c. and 25c.

Funeral of Mrs. Moore.

The funeral services of Mrs. Jeremiah Moore, were held from her late residence on West Fourth street yesterday afternoon. They were conducted in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, by Rev. Father McGeary, curate of St. Mary's church. The floral tributes were numerous and pretty. At the close of the services, the remains were interred in the Methodist cemetery. Those who acted as pall bearers were Fred Lewis and David Dunavan, Wilbur Henderson, James Totten and R. B. Rogers

PERSONAL.

James Houston and wife, of Ann Harbor, Mich., are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Maze Edwards, of the Jackson building. Mr. Houston is secretary and treasurer of the General Mileage Association, with an office at Detroit.

Drop In.

All young men, whether members of the association or not are invited to attend the "drop in" social at the Y. M. C. A. building this evening.

Nature's Crowning Work.

As for the woman, she found the chief wonders of creation not in the culminating vertebrate, but in the lowest orders of life.

"The jellyfish, for instance!" exclaimed the woman. "How was it ever got to jell so beautifully?"

Now the others thought they coule understand her awe, although none of them, as it transpired, had ever put up any preserves.—Detroit Journal.

The Kaiser's Palaces.

It is a rare privilege to be permitted to visit any of the kaiser's palaces. He thinks he is entitled to at least as much privacy as the lowest of his subjects, and his orders in regard to visitors are strict. As the Neues palace is regarded as above all others a haven of rest, few tourists are permitted within its precincts.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Too Big a Dinner.

Recently at Relau, in the Selama district, a boa constrictor swallowed four goats one after the other and then disposed his 18 feet of length to slumber. It was not his dinner that disagreed with him, but the vengeful owner of the goats, who followed and slew him as he slept.—Penang Gazette.

Cars in a Palace.

The sultan of Morocco, who is not inclined to pedestrianism, has had a little line of cars built through all the rooms of his palace, ending in his bedroom. A small motor pulls a novel sort of sleigh fitted with two seats, in which the sultan is able to recline at his ease.—N. Y. Post.

Railway Traffic of the World.

Somewhat of the going to and fro of the people may be guessed at when it is known that 2,000,000,000 passengers and 950,000,000 tons of goods are carried in a year on the world's railways.—N. Y. Sun.

The Goat as a Milker.

The goat produces more milk annually in proportion to its live weight than any other animal kept for milk production.—Chicago Chronicle.

The lights of Liverpool lay along the shore half a mile distant. The black hull of the Cleopatra loomed overhead like a threatening cloud. Mrs. Goddard held her satchel tightly in her lap. It seemed such a short distance and yet the little boat seemed only to creep. She drew the foggy air deep into her lungs. It seemed so sweet after her close confinement. She would feel that she had earned the right to her freedom when she got it. After awhile, through the gray light of coming dawn, she began to discern the buildings of the city.

A little later the tender was scraping against the piles of the wharf. As she went ashore, Mrs. Goddard saw that two or three sleepy custom officers were hurriedly passing the hand-luggage without examination. It was evident that only the trunks would have to bear close scrutiny. One of the officers caught her arm and turned her round, but when he saw how small her bag was, he gruffly begged her pardon and she passed on out of the throng into the cold, deserted streets of the sleeping city.

"The dead is alive," she muttered, "and very much alive!"

Without much trouble she found the Hamilton house, and "Mrs. Charles Gray" was soon in a big comfortable room.

"Now, if Lucy only passes the custom officers safely there will not be one single thing to bother me," she said. "And what is to hinder her?"

"WHAT COULD HAVE DELAYED THE WOMAN?"

But as the morning passed and her companion did not appear, her elation changed to anxiety. What could have delayed the woman? Surely something had arisen, even at this late hour, to rouse suspicion. Mrs. Goddard walked the floor like a caged beast. Noon came and passed, and the afternoon dragged itself along at a snail's pace. She was afraid to go out in the street. For aught she knew the police, having arrested her accomplice, was now turning Liverpool upside down to find trace of her. The first shadows of nightfall were like palpable substances which rasped a brain now inflamed with fears and direful imaginings.

"Exposure!" seemed to be written in letters of fire on the unlighted walls of her chamber. "Suicide!" was the next word she saw, but she brushed it aside. She would not even think of such a step. Even after this game was played, and had entertained the victims of the nine-day sensation habit, there would yet be other fields for the exercise of her fruitful brain. The world had always seemed so large to her—so full of resources.

At ten o'clock she heard some one coming up the stairs. She weighed the tread, wondering if it was a policeman's. No, it was too light for that. It was a woman's. Opening the door, she saw Mrs. Nolan standing before her in the ill-lighted corridor. She drew her in, her fears completely dominating her speech.

"I know you are angry, but I could not help it?" began Mrs. Nolan in a harsh undertone.

"What was it?" demanded Mrs. Goddard; "don't keep me waiting."

"It was a lot of things. I did my best, but the custom officers would not let me have your trunks."

"Is that all?"

"No, they held me there for several hours asking all manner of questions about you and making me swear to statements. I swore enough lies to draw a pension from the kingdom of Hell for the rest of my life. It was all about the ownership of the contents of the trunks and which were your things and which mine."

"Then they did not suspect us of—?"

"No, it was only about the things. Then after I had managed to get possession of my trunks, by showing my name on them, I slipped away and got a cab that took me to the Portland house. I thought I would be free, but the police officers kept calling to make other inquiries and get me to make other affidavits about the color of your hair, your age, your residence, the name of your husband, and what not. Then they had no sooner given me a breathing spell than the reporters and foreign correspondents began to troop in."

"Reporters?" Mrs. Goddard pronounced the word as if she were learning to speak English.

"Yes, you don't mean to say you haven't seen the afternoon papers!" Mrs. Nolan drew three damp ones from her cloak pocket. "I can't imagine what you have been doing all day. They have been yelling your name all over Liverpool."

"I thought it would get into print, of course," said Mrs. Goddard. She had calmed down considerably and now set herself to the task before her.

"Of course, I can't go without clothes," she murmured, reflectively, "and let those stupid limbs of the law ship every rag I have back to the major. It would upset him awfully! Now, let me think."

The product of her meditation was worthy of her ingenuity. She laid aside the newspapers, of which she had only read a few big headlines, and sat down at a table where there was a pen, paper and ink, and began to write as follows:

"Whereas, I, Jeanne Goddard, wife of Major Rowland Goddard, of Lyndhurst-on-the-Hudson, New York, do hereby acknowledge that I owe my companion, Lucy Nolan, for past services, the sum of one thousand dollars, which debt I do secure by a mortgage on all my personal effects, such as my jewelry, trunks and all their various contents, such as wearing apparel, etc. In case of my death while we are abroad I hereby authorize her, the said Lucy Nolan, to retain the forementioned property till my husband, the said Major Goddard, has satisfied her claim in full. To this I herewith set my hand and seal.

"Jeanne Goddard."

"What does all this mean?" questioned Mrs. Nolan, when she had read it twice, each time with contracted brows and a doubtful shake of the head.

"You must go and inquire the address of the most reliable lawyer in Liverpool. Pay him his fee in advance, give him this paper and tell him that you want him to get my luggage turned over to you. You must explain that I have always been—that I always was a hard individual to get money out of, and that as I already owed you a thousand dollars you refused to go abroad with me without some sort of security. Tell him that you intend to take the things right back to America, believing that Major Goddard will settle your claims as soon as you do. Are you willing to do this?"

"Oh, I don't mind at all," said Mrs. Nolan, smiling. "I have just begun to get my hand in and rather like the excitement. The English are so polite. I think I can tell a tale straight enough."

The two plotters did not meet till the following afternoon. About four o'clock Mrs. Nolan entered, her face radiant with good news.

"I had very little trouble," she announced. "I secured the services of the best barrister in Liverpool. He charged $50; but he said he would stand as my security in case of any legal complication. I tell you I felt good when I saw the trunks unloaded at my hotel."

"Then we shall go on to London to-night," exclaimed Mrs. Goddard. "The train leaves at eight o'clock. Meet me at the station. When we get to London we shall rent a furnished villa in the suburbs somewhere and be dead to the world for awhile at least. We'll have a lot of fun, Lucy."

CHAPTER XII.

It was about 12 o'clock on the tenth day after the sailing of the Cleopatra. Maj. Goddard, Mr. Talley and Blanche were in the dining-room about to sit down to luncheon, Miss Dean having sent down word that she would be detained in her room.

The door bell had rung, but none of the trio had heard it. Just at this juncture James came in bearing a telegram on a tray. He handed it to the major, who opened it slowly.

"I wonder what this is?" he murmured.

"Mrs. Goddard has arrived safe," suggested Talley; "this is the tenth day, you know."

"No, it is not a cablegram," answered Goddard, whose eye was well schooled in such matters; "it is from the city."

The others watched his face as he unfolded the sheet of paper. They saw him start, and his eyes open wide

"Surely, she could not—" he began, and there paused.

"May I see it?" asked Talley, his thoughts on falling stocks, bank failures and possible financial crashes. The young man engaged in speculation now and then.

The major gave him the telegram and turned away. He was deathly pale and tripped on a rug as he walked towards the door. Blanche looked over Talley's shoulder. The message was from the agents of the Cleopatra's company on Broadway, and ran as follows:

"We regret to inform you that your wife, in a temporary fit of insanity, during a severe storm two days before the Cleopatra arrived at Liverpool, threw herself overboard and was not rescued. Our information comes direct from the captain of the Cleopatra, who adds that full particulars are being sent to the New York papers."

"Although I am young, and have always been healthy, and blessed with a good appetite, yet, during the past six months, I have been affected—after I would eat a hearty meal—with a severe pain in the stomach, lasting for from one to three hours, causing me great distress. Then again I would become suddenly dizzy, and almost fall, sometimes. This would happen on the street, and cause me a good deal of annoyance. The only relief I could get was the constant use of cathartics. About two months ago a friend gave me a small vial of Ripans Tabules, asking me to try them, as they had done him good. I did, and was so pleased with the result that I afterwards bought a supply, and up to the present time have had no further trouble. When I notice an indication of the old trouble, I take a Tabule, and that ends it."

WANTED. A case of bad health that RIPANS will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word RIPANS on the package and accept no substitute. RIPANS, 10 for 5 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

PEASANT WOMEN OF NORMANDY

Everywhere in Europe except in Great Britain there are two distinct physical types of women—the peasant and the lady. They differ as much as a thoroughbred and a plow horse. The two types produce a strange and puzzling effect on an American. It suggests that ages ago, before historic times, a slender, active race invaded continental Europe and conquered the native inhabitants, who were short, slow and stocky, tillers of the soil, not warriors. The two races seem never to have mingled, but remained side by side, yet apart even in occupation, the slender, active tribe becoming lawgivers, rulers, professional people and ladies and gentlemen, the conquered race remaining to this day underlings and tillers of the soil.

Going from Paris through Normandy the difference impresses an American sharply, it being even more marked among the women than among the men. The Parisienne is tall and slender and exquisitely gowned. She is quick, bright and gay, as graceful as a sea gull. The Norman peasant woman is the exact opposite. Instead of changing the style of her dress every three months, the Normandy woman follows practically the fashions of her great-grandmother, fashions originating somewhere in the cradle of history. Ancient pictures show the peasant woman clad in the same kind of short, full, clumsy skirt, coarse blue cotton apron and towering snow white cap her descendant wears today.

The renown of French dairy and poultry products is due to the fact that these industries are largely in the hands of women, the patient, plodding, plow horse women of the provinces. Women and cows, women and poultry, naturally belong together. The fragrant, rich cheeses, the delicious, sweet smelling butter which delight the tourist's palate in Paris are out fresh every morning from the thick yet clean hands of the peasant woman in Normandy, Brittany. Her cows are her constant care. You see them at pasture everywhere as you are whirled through the rural landscapes from Paris to Havre.

But cows do not roam and browse at will, 200 in a herd, in vast pastures, as on dairy farms in the States. No, indeed! European farmers would raise their hands in horror at such a wasteful proceeding. The Normandy woman drives her cows to the pasture. There are not many, usually a bunch of from six to a dozen at most. She carries with her a stool and a huge and heavy wooden mallet. Everything in this region appears to be clumsy and heavy except the flowers. A rope attached to the cow and a long spike of iron complete the outfit.

The woman lifts the mallet and drives the iron peg deep into the ground. To the peg one end of the rope is fastened; the other end confines the cow. The cow mistress tethers her bossies all around her, each with an individual peg and rope. The woman puts her stool down among the cows and knits, knits, knits, till you would think she had made stockings enough to supply the universe. But then French peasants know nothing of knitting machines.

When the cow eats off the grass in one spot of the tiny field, the mistress draws up the peg, carries it and pounds it down with the lumbering mallet in a fresh place, moves her stool and sits and knits anew. When the cow gets enough she lies down and chews her cud, but the woman never stops.

Scores of these women you see in the fields as you are whirled past on the train, mostly old women in white caps—not the gorgeous creations which top off their Sunday and holiday attire, but just plain, common things, not even picturesque. They give you somehow an impression as if they were dependents, living in the family of a married son or daughter. If so, here is use for a mother-in-law, and a useful use.

ALEXANDRA COSMO.

THE PATENT OFFICE.

One of the Most Important Branches of Our Government.

Founded by the Framers of the Constitution and Carefully Nursed by the Officers First Placed in Charge of It.

[Special Washington Letter.]

FOR the first time in two score years the patent office has sufficient room for the transaction of its voluminous and increasingly important business. The interior department building, one of the most beautiful structures in this city, was overcrowded for many years, and its magnificent corridors were disfigured with book racks and other official impedimenta. But when the new post office department edifice was constructed, and that department was moved from its quarters opposite the interior department, the building which it had occupied since 1846 was taken possession of by the interior department; and this gave an opportunity for the commissioner of patents to so arrange the working force of his office that business might be carried on in a systematic manner.

WILLIAM THORNTON.
(First Patent Clerk of the United States.)

By a wise provision of the constitution of our republic (article 1, paragraph 8 of section 8), the congress was given power to promote the progress of science and the useful arts, by securing to authors and inventors, for limited times, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries. This portion of the constitution was obtained through the efforts of James Madison and Charles Pinckney, and was the beginning of the patent system. The first general law providing for patents was passed in 1790, and the first patent issued was to Samuel Hopkins, July 31, 1790, for making pot and pearl ashes.

Under this patent law the office fees were paid to the state department clerks who made out the patent. The fees amounted to $3.70, and ten cents for every 100 words for filing the specification. The chief clerk of the state department issued the patent and received the fees as a part of his salary. Under this law, which was repealed in 1793, there was no patent office, and not even a division of patents. A new law was passed in 1793, and several amendments made thereafter. The issuing of patents, however, still remained in the state department.

In 1800 the department of state removed to Washington and took up its quarters at Pennsylvania avenue and Twenty-first street; and in May, 1802, President Jefferson appointed William Thornton as a clerk at $1,400 per year to have charge of the issuing of patents. This William Thornton was an interesting character, especially to inventors and Washingtonians. An excellent portrait of him hangs in the commissioner's room in the patent office. Thornton had charge of the patent affairs from 1802 to his death in 1828. He was an intimate friend of Washington, and was by him appointed one of the three commissioners to survey and lay out the federal capital. Thornton's house, at 1331 F street, was one of the first private residences to be erected in Washington.

(Second Superintendent of the United States Patent Office.)

He was an Englishman and was born on the island of Tortola, his uncle being at that time president of the island. He first met Washington at Philadelphia and became a warm friend of the "Father of His Country," and his home on F street in Washington became a familiar resort of Washington when he was president.

A story is told of him that during the war of 1812, when the British captured the city of Washington and destroyed the capitol building, a loaded cannon was trained upon the patent office for the purpose of destroying it, and he is said to have put himself before the gun, and in a frenzy of excitement exclaimed: "Are you Englishmen or only Goths and vandals? This is the patent office, a depository of the ingenuity and inventions of the American nation, in which the whole civilized world is interested. Would you destroy it? If so, fire away, and let the charge pass through my body." The effect is said to have been magical upon the soldiers, and to have saved the patent office from destruction.

In 1821 Thornton assumed the title of superintendent, and was so registered in the government blue book, but it was not until 1830 that the law recognized the title by specifically mentioning the office.

The 1810 congress authorized the purchase of a building for the post office and the keeper of the patents. Into this building, where the post office now stands, Thornton moved the records, etc., of the patent office.

In 1816 the personnel of the patent office consisted of Superintendent William Thornton, $1,400; Clerk William Elliott, $800; and Messenger Benjamin Fenwick, $72 per annum.

Dr. Thomas Jones, who succeeded Dr. Thornton as superintendent of the patent office, was born in Herefordshire county, England, in 1774. In 1826 he founded the famous Franklin Journal at Philadelphia. On April 12, 1828, he removed to Washington and took charge of the patent office under Henry Clay, secretary of state. This position he held until after the organization of the patent office under the act of July 4, 1836, at which time Hon. H. L. Ellsworth was made commissioner at a salary of $3,000 per annum, and Charles M. Keller and Dr. Jones were appointed the next year examiners at a salary of $1,500 per year. The officials of the office under Dr. Jones' reign were William Elliott, clerk, at a salary of $1,000 a year; Alexander McIntire, clerk, at $800, and B. Fenwick, messenger, at $400. Dr. Jones resigned his position in 1838 at the age of 64.

In 1836 a new law was passed which was a return to the American system. The law established the patent office as a bureau under the department of state, and put it in charge of a chief officer to be called the commissioner of patents, at a salary of $3,000 per annum, his duty being, under the direction of the secretary of state, to superintend the issuing of patents. The law further provided for a chief clerk, "an examining clerk," at $1,500; two other clerks, one of them to be a competent draughtsman; one other clerk, a machinist and a messenger. It provided also a seal for the office, and required that the patent should issue under that seal, and be signed by the secretary of state and countersigned by the commissioner.

The first patent issued under this law was to Hon. John. Ruggles, for locomotive engines on inclined planes.

Henry L. Ellsworth was appointed the first commissioner under this law and Charles M. Keller examining clerk, and thereupon the present system of examinations began. Later the office was transferred from the department of state to the interior department. Every man has more or less inventive instinct, and there are thousands of attorneys throughout the land who devote their time and attention to the study of patent law, and to the interests of their inventive clients.

And right here, to be practical rather than historical and discursive, let it be known that no man, be he attorney or claim agent, can secure a patent for anybody by the use of money to influence a decision. No man should allow himself to be deceived on that score. Any attorney or claim agent who intimates anything of that character should be set down as a fraud. The commissioners and the assistant commissioners are always men of high character, standing well in their home communities and in this community. The examiners and clerks are honorable men. Each case receives as careful consideration as any case in a court of justice. Each case is decided upon its merits. Because of the careful consideration given to each case there are necessary delays which are often exasperating to the inventors who believe that their fortunes are being withheld from them, because each inventor looks upon his model and believes, as Col. Sellers believed, that "There's millions in it."

But there's not. The inventor usually gets some fame for his name; but the capitalist gets the cash-paying game. Poor men constitute a vast majority of inventors, probably because necessity is the mother of invention; but very few of them die any richer than they were born. SMITH D. FRY.

He Was Cautious.

Wederly—The doctor says I must take more exercise. Do you think I ought to begin with dumbbells?

Mrs. Wederly—Suppose for a starter you come out with me this afternoon and wheel the baby carriage.

" 26—Harbor Hill at Harbor Hill.

Cause of Lights Going Out.

Last Sunday night darkness reigned supreme in most of the city churches, the electric lights going out for a short time. Inquiry failed to disclose the cause at the time. It has since been learned that an armature at the electric light station burned out and caused a suspension of business for a short time. Last evening the new armature was being tested and a hitch in the connection again caused the lights to go out. The trouble was soon fixed and everything is in working order again.

Good Speakers.

Staff Capt. Nice, the talented violinist will speak and render solos at the men's meeting, at Y. M. C. A. Hall Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock. Grace D. Hildebrand, the "gospel nightingale," of New York, will sing. Capt. Nice and Miss Hildebrand will also take part in the boys' meeting at 4 o'clock.

To Take Part in Dedication.

B. W. Hand, of this city, will go to East Orange tomorrow to take part in the dedication of the Park Avenue church, Disciples of Christ, Park avenue and North Seventeenth street. He will make the address to the congregation.

New Helmets for Police.

The police department received this morning a consignment of new helmets for summer wear.

—Skin affections will readily disappear by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Look out for counterfeits. If you get DeWitt's you get good results. It is the quick and positive cure for piles. L. W. Randolph.

CHIEF'S EYES ARE SAFE.

DRUNKEN WOMAN WANTED TO PUT THEM OUT WITH HAT PIN.

Sentence Was Suspended and She Left at Once For New Brunswick—Other Offenders Arraigned.

Agnes Gibson, according to her statement of Montreal, Canada, and a one time actress, developed a healthy state of intoxication yesterday and, in her excitement, theatened to gouge out Chief Kiely's eyes with a hat pin. She was placed in a cell before she could carry out her threat, and this morning appeared before City Judge Runyon, penitent and sober. An overdose of whiskey to allay a rheumatic pain, she said, was responsible for her condition. She had no recollection of attempting to use her hat pin. On promising to leave at once for New Brunswick, where she has friends, sentence was suspended.

A number of cases were to have been tried, but owing to the non appearance of the complainants, they were not heard. That of Mary VanNess ngainst John VanNess for non-support, was adjourned for one week; Simon Springs against Lucy Thompson, adjourned for one week, and Jas. Fields against Jefferson Walker, for drawing a knife on the complainant, adjourned indefinitely. Wm. Wikoff, a small colored boy, denied striking Robert Marcley with a brick and was discharged.

Removing Old Wires.

Employes of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company have been removing old wires along West Front street during the past few days, with a view to ultimately removing the objectionable poles that now line the street. As soon as possible these poles will be taken town.

Col. Tyler Offered an Orchestra.

The orator for the Memorial Day exercises to be held in Reform Hall has not yet been secured, but some one with a National reputation will be engaged. Col. Mason W. Tyler has offered to furnish a stringed orchestra to render music in the hall.

Deposit for Proper Work.

The Borough Council at its meeting ast evening accepted a draft for $150 as a deposit for the faithful performance of laying the underground telephone conduits on Somerset street by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company.

Getting Ready for Memorial Day.

Members of the Women's Relief Corps held a meeting at the home of Mrs. W. C. Smith, of Grandview avenue, Thursday afternoon, to complete arrangements for Memorial Day exercises to be held in Reform Hall.

In Justice Nash's Court.

The case of the VanDeventer Carpet Company against the Jersey Central Railroad Company will be tried before Justice Nash Saturday morning, May 11, at 10 o'clock. Lawyer W. S. Angleman represents the plaintiff.

Offered Scholarship.

Miss Marguerite Burnet, of Madison avenue, has so excelled in her art studies, that she has been offered a scholarship at the New York School of Art.

The Old And The New.

The old plea, "teach me my days to number," still wells up from the hearts of the faithful, while there are some of the unregenerate who do not even go as far as to say: 'teach me my house to number." The hour is ripe for reform, however, and a call at Collier's will assist you in bringing about that reform neatly and inexpensively.

A son has been born in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Marx Pastner, of West Second street.

COURSE IN FINE CONDITION.

TOWNSEND RUSHMORE WAS LOW MAN IN PLAY FOR CUP.

Howard de P. Wright Won Prize Offered for Lowest Gross Score of the Afternoon — Improvements Made to the Course.

Although the opening of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course was of necessity postponed a week ago on account of the inclement weather, a more auspicious opening could not have been asked for than that which took place Saturday. It was a beautiful day in all respects and even the strong wind did not prevent good scores from being made by the large number of enthusiasts that visited the course. Most all of the best players were out, while a few novices took occasion to improve their game.

The course was in fine condition, with the exception of a short distance on the homeward stretch. There it was a trifle soft owing to the recent rains. There was also a fair sized pond in evidence. Many compliments were passed concerning the course, which reflected credit on the greens committee, the members of which have worked unceasingly to have the course ready for the opening.

A decided improvement is being made near the old barn, where a frame structure, formerly used to cover stacks of hay, is now being converted into a shelter for the golfers. Seats will be provided and it will make an ideal place to take a rest as the players journey toward the eighteenth hole. The roadway that divides the course has also been given attention.

The clubhouse was not forgotten for the opening day, and Steward Ivamy was on hand to welcome the members. He was fully prepared to serve meals and the same excellent service was the rule. Mr. Ivamy is exceptionally well-fitted for his position and gives the utmost satisfaction to all.

The event for the day on the course was the opening play for the Golf Committee cup and a prize for the best gross score, this cup is to be played for each Saturday throughout the season by active members only at handicap play, eighteen holes. The three lowest net scores count three, two and one point respectively for the cup which goes to the player making the greatest number of points during the season. There were a generous number of entries. The scores were all very close. Howard deP. Waight won first scratch honors with a gross score of 89. His handicap was 3, while Townsend Rushmore, who made the best net score, 86, had a handicap of 18.

The scores turned in for the opening competition for the cup were as follows:

	Gross.	Hand.	Net.
Townsend Rushmore	104	18	86
Howard deP. Wright	89	2	87
Howard Huntington	102	115	87
Dr. B VanD. Hedges	96	8	88

Will Change His Store.

The widening of Somerset street has prompted Stillman Elliott to alter the present position of his frame store at 58 Somerset street. The building, which is occupied by A. Wolfe as a tailor shop, is being moved closer to the south side of the building at 60 Somerset street, which is used by Samuel Taub as a shoe shop. The first named store is also being set back some feet from the present pavement. S. F. Randolph is the contractor in charge of the work.

Delegates From Somerset.

The Somerset County Prohibitionists have selected Wm. Lunger, Peter Robinson, Andrew Wilson, of the borough, and H. K. Trumpore, George H. Murphy, Theodore S. Quick and C. R. Howard from other parts of the county, as delegates to attend the State convention to be held in Trenton May 7.

LABORED IN THE KLONDYKE.

REV. S. HALL YOUNG TOLD OF HIS WORK THERE.

Went Into the Gold Region—Spoke at Crescent Avenue Church Yesterday Evening.

Rev. S. Hall Young, who for a great many years has been doing mission work in Alaska, told something of his work at the Crescent Avenue church last evening. It was the first opportunity that Plainfielders have had to hear a graphic description and interesting details concerning the gold region.

Mr. Young told something concerning Alaska and of the natural beauty to be found there. For many years Mr. Young labored in southeastern Alaska, but when the gold fever broke out in the Klondyke region he went there. He then told of his exciting and interesting experience with the white miners in that section.

Mr. Young described the sufferings, the hardships and privations experienced by the people who had gone there. Nearly one half of the gold-seekers had made a failure of their venture and hundreds had died of pure home-sickness. Mr. Young told of his work of establishing a church and providing a home for himself. He paid $800 for a cabin twelve feet long and a few feet wide, and he got a bargain at that. The house used for worship was leased in a partially completed condition for $850 for seven months and the money had to be raised in three days. The interest in that country is 10 per cent. a month. During his talk, Mr. Young related many amusing incidents.

SIXTEEN RUNS IN AN INNING.

THAT WAS TOO MUCH FOR THE ALIS A. A. NINE.

Plainfield High School Boys Won Handily by Score of 23 to 8 in Seven Innings.

After receiving a crushing defeat at the hands of the Newark Academy nine, the Plainfield High School baseball team redeemed itself Saturday afternoon by administering a sound thrashing to the Alis A. A. team on Martine Common. The story of the game is summed up in the score, 23 to 8 in favor of the High school boys.

Responsibility for the severe defeat rests on the miserable work done by the Alis boys in the third inning. It was then that they seemed to go to pieces and the High School lads did not fail to take advantage of the condition presented. Moynahan hit the leather for a home run and the joy of the school boys was unbounded. Before the inning closed sixteen players had crossed the home plate for the High school team.

Both pitchers were hit hard at times, but VanAuken showed superiority in the box. Neither team did very good field work. Munroe on third base for the High School missed some chances. Davis on first base showed marked improvement. No especially fine playing was done by the Alis boys, but Schoonmaker, at third base, was very weak.

The make-up of both teams was greatly changed, especially so with the Alis. On the High School VanAuken was put in the box instead of Townsend Mason, and the change proved to be a good one. During the course of the game many changes were made on the Alis team, but it seemed impossible to reduce the lead of the High School lads.

On account of the lateness of the hour the game closed in the middle of the seventh inning.

The batting order follows:

P. H. S.	Alis.
F. Mason, 2b.	Thompson, ss.
VanAuken, p.	Kline, p.
T. Mason, ss	A. Egan, c.

SUCCESSFUL PARISH FAIR.

GIVEN BY TEACHERS OF HOLY CROSS INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

Disposed of Fancy Articles Made By the Pupils During the Winter Months—Those in Charge.

A successful fair was held in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the teachers connected with the Industrial School, a worthy organization of the parish.

The pupils of the school, all little girls, had worked during the winter and early spring months making various pieces of fancy work. The results of their labor were placed on sale, together with some selected work contributed by kindly disposed parishioners. Cake, candy and ice cream were sold to all except the pupils, who were given a treat by the teachers.

The interior of the parish house was tastefully decorated for the occasion. At one end of the room was a Japanese tea room. Superintending this department was Miss Ida Davis, dressed in native Japanese costume.

Mrs. J. O. Stevens, the superintendent of the school, had charge of the entire affair. Assisting her were the teachers of the school, Mrs. Wm. M. Downey, Mrs. G. T. Rhoades, Mrs. Bradley Hall, Miss Davis, Miss Ida Davis and the Misses Osgood. Among the assistants were the Misses Florence Burr, Florence Windom, Lulu Dentz, Sadie Brown, Nettie Diem, Elsie Burner, Viola Stites, Carrie Kliner and Bertha Bremer.

This fair and festival marked the close of a prosperous year in the industrial school work. The institution has been self supporting under the management of Mrs. J. O. Stevens since its organization.

The proceeds of the affair will be devoted to the fund being raised to purchase a piano for the use of the Sunday school and the church choir.

SECRET OF STRENGTH.

Second of a Series of Sermons on Health Preached by Rev. C. W. Gardner.

Rev. G. W. Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church, delivered his second sermon last evening in the series of health talks inaugurated the previous Sunday. His subject was "The Secret of Strength" and he preached from I John 2: xiv. "I have written unto you young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one."

Strength, the speaker said, is the glory of young men. It is something greatly coveted and not easily obtained, and he who possesses it is most fortunate. It is absolutely essential to success in all walks of life, yet there are many who waste it through riotous living and intemperance. But there are other kinds of strength beside that in a physical and mental sense. There is a spiritual strength and strength of character, all of which are essential to each other. Temptations beset men on every side but, imbued with the spirit, they are enabled to fight them off and thus preserve their nerves and muscles for greater battles.

There is only one way to obtain strength, and that is by the inward dwelling of God's word. With this in his heart a man is consecrated and until he is, he cannot be strong.

DEATH OF MRS. RANDOLPH.

Passed Away at Her Home on Duer Street Yesterday Morning.

Mrs. Malinda Randolph, the widow of the late Robert Randolph, died at her residence, 138 Duer street, yesterday morning.

The cause of death was dropsy which resulted from a severe cold contracted some weeks ago. Mrs. Randolph for many years resided on Elmwood place in this city. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. William H. Shotwell, of Fairview avenue, and Mrs. Louis E. Barkalew, of Lincoln place.

Mrs. Randolph was a devout christian woman and was an active member of the First Baptist church, where she labored faithfully for the upbuilding of the church. She was born near Easton, Pa.

The funeral services will be held from her late residence Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerdes will officiate.

At the Pan-American.

Among the exhibitors of etchings and drawings at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, is George Wharton Edwards, of Plainfield. The art exhibit will not be visible until some time in June.

TOOK ELEVEN INNINGS TO DECIDE THE GAME.

Great Playing Finally Gave Victory to St. Mary's Team by Score of 9 to 8.

AGAINST CLINTON AVENUE.

BATTLE OF THE PITCHERS FOR MOST OF THE GAME.

Clinton Avenues Led 5 to 0 at End of Fifth Inning—The Home Team Rallied Well and Won Out in Eleventh Inning.

By far the most exciting local baseball game which has taken place this season was that played Saturday afternoon between the St. Mary's and Clinton Avenue nines on the former's grounds. It required eleven innings of the hardest kind of playing to decide which side was the winner. The St. Mary's finally won by a score of 9 to 8.

From the first inning, the work on both sides was almost faultless. For the part it was a pitchers' battle in which O'Keefe, of the St. Mary's, won out. His record of thirteen men struck out has seldom been equalled by any pitcher in this city. Squires, of the Clinton Avenues, struck out five men.

In the first inning neither side scored, but at the beginning of the second the Clinton Avenues brought in one man. A short time later a wild throw from first by Kilbride over Barry's head at home plate allowed two more runs to come in. The St. Mary's were shut out, and neither side scored again until the sixth inning, when another wild throw by Taylor to Keen gave the Clinton Avenues a double score, making it 5 to 0.

Matters were looking dubious for the St. Mary's when, in the ending of the ending of the sixth, good batting work gave them three runs. In the seventh, the Clinton Avenues were shut out and the St. Mary's scored twice, making it 5 to 5. In the eighth both sides made two runs, one of them being a home run by George Taylor.

The ninth and tenth innings ended with the score still 7 to 7. The excitement was intense. Everyone of the 500 spectators was shouting unheeded advice to the players, while the latter in turn advised the pitchers, about whom interest had centered. Symons made a safe hit and stole second. The excitement was great when he was brought home on a two base hit by Squires before the Clinton Avenues retired.

In the last half of the eleventh, two of the St. Mary's men were put out at once. Then Kilbride reached first. He was followed by Madden and Keen who both got to first on balls, advancing him to third. In an opportune moment, he reached home and the score was again tied. Winn took the bat and sent a grounder past second base, which brought Keen in with the winning run.

A noticeable fact throughout the entire game was the good feeling which existed between the players of both teams. At no time was there the slightest dispute over decisions, while none but pleasant words passed from side to side.

Following is the batting order:

St. Mary's.	Clinton Avenues.
Mack, ss.	Martin, 2b.
Keen, 3b.	Rich. Rogers, c.
Madden, rf.	Bolsterle, ss.
Winn, 2b.	Robt. Rogers, 3b.

Taylor, lf.	Giddis, cf.
O'Keefe, p.	Squires, p.
Kilbride, 1b.	Bolmer, lf.
Barry, c.	Herlich, rf.

The score by innings was:

Clinton Av'es.	0	3	0	0	0	2	0	2	0	0 1—8
St. Mary's	0	0	0	0	0	3	2	2	0	0 2—9

Base hits—Clinton Avenues, 13; St Mary's, 10. Struck out—By O'Keefe, 13; by Squires, 5. Two-base hits—Clinton Avenues, 3; St. Mary's 2. Three-base hits—St. Mary's, 1. Home runs—St. Mary's, 1. Base on Balls—By O'Keefe, 2; by Squires, 4. Umpire—Daniel Mack. Scorers—Rufus LaRue and Archibald Derby. Time of game—Two hours and fifteen minutes.

Meeting of City Union.

The semi-annual meeting of the City Union of Kings Daughters will be held in Vincent chapel Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The election of officers will be held at that time.

BOTH TEAMS BATTED FREELY

BUT HOPE CHAPEL BOYS WERE THE STRONGER.

Defeated Team From North Plainfield High School by Score of 11 to 10.

In a baseball game, marked by loose pitching and weak fielding, the North Plainfield High School team was defeated by the Hope chapel team on the Plainfield avenue grounds Saturday by the narrow margin of one run.

Both the pitchers showed a falling off in their usual style of play. J. Montrose, who was in the box for the Hope chapel team, was batted frequently with ease. Pitcher Crite, of the North Plainfielders' team, at times was at the mercy of the Hope chapel team's batters.

Crite and Jacot, of the boroughites, each made a two base hit. For the Hope chapel boys two baggers were made by Gordon and J. Montrose and a three bagger was made by Roseberry.

The field work of each team was poorer than it should have been. Muffing of flies was a feature and it was a costly one. In this respect Emmons, Lewis and Conover, of the boroughites' team, were conspicuous as were also Mague and Auten, of the Hope chapel nine. Lewis, of the High school, however, made a good catch off Smith in the seventh inning which was difficult because of the high wind. Another good piece of work was the catch of Auten's foul in the fifth inning by Armstrong of the High school team.

The two teams were composed of the same players as at the previous games, but the Hope chapel boys nine was considerably strengthened by the reappearance of Roseberry who resumed his old position at centre field.

A peculiarity of the game was that all the runs of the High School were made in the fifth and ninth innings, five in each. In both these innings they hit Montrose hard but their good work was not lasting.

The batting order follows:

Hope Chapel.	N. P. H. S.
Mague, lf.	George, c.
Gorden, 3 b.	Lewis, rf.
Smith, ss.	Overton, lf.
Roseberry, cf.	Conover, 2 b.

Hartfelder, c	Crite, p.
Evans, 1 b.	Hamilton, ss.
Auten, rf.	Jacot, 1 b.
Hand, 2 b.	Emmmons, cf.

The score by innings was:

Hope Chapel	0	3	0	1	4	0	0	2	1	—11
N. P. H. S.	0	0	0	0	5	0	0	0	5	—10

Base hits—H. C., 25; N. P. H. S., 30. Two-base hits—H. C. 2; N. P. H. S. 2. Three-base hits—H. C. 2; N. P. H. S. 0. Errors—H. C. 4; N. P. H. S., 8. Struck out—By Mague, 7; by Crite, 9. Umpires—Frederick B. Newman and Benjamin Schuck. Scorer—Walter Foster.

FIRE IN SHOE SHOP.

Chemical Engine Summoned to Put Out Small Blaze in A. C. Perry's Shop on Park Avenue.

A fire in the small shoe shop of Albert G. Perry, of Park avenue, this mornine, caused about $25 damage. It originated from the flames of a small kit lamp, used for heating irons. Perry was busy at the time and did not notice the flames until they had made considerable headway. He attempted to extinguish then himself, but found it impossible. The fire department was notified by messenger and the chemical engine responded. One tank was necessary to put out the blaze.

GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY.

Pleasant Affair at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Blates, Saturday Night.

The friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Blates, of Mountain avenue, gave them a surprise party Saturday evening. Music and dancing were the enjoyable features of the evening. At midnight refreshments were served.

Among the present were Mr. and Mrs. Sutton, Mrs. Dentz, the Misses Henry, Mrs. Windham, Miss Carry Dentz, Miss Faron; and Messrs. Perrine, Windham, Franklin Dentz and Oscar Philpott.

Coming Her for Daughter's Health.

Robert W. VanWyck, of Brooklyn, has leased a pretty residence on West Fifth street, just beyond Grant avenue, and will remove his family here June 1, to take up a permanent residence in Plainfield, as the air here is conducive to the health of his little daughter. Mrs. VanWyck is a cousin of Mrs. J. E. Townsend, of East Sixth street.

Announcement of Engagement.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Anna Powers, of New Market, to Harry Dencklau, of East Second street, this city. The wedding will take place at the residence of the bride's parents, June 5.

CHILD BURIED IN PUBLIC DUMP

WESTFIELD HAS A MYSTERY TO SOLVE.

Stranger Came There by Trolley Saturday Morning and Buried a Two-Days-Old Infant.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, May 6 —The burial of a two-days old child was reported to the local police force here Saturday night, and the body of a newly-born boy awaits the sequel in the Westfield police station.

John Herder and his younger brother reported to Officer Thomas O'Neill that in the morning about 11 o'clock, they, in company with May Herder, a sister, and Julia Perrine, a neighbor's child, had seen a man alight from an eastbound trolley car. He had a box and a long-handled shovel. Proceeding to the public dump, he dug a hole, threw in the box, covering it up and then hurried away.

The two young boys later in the afternoon, overcome by boyish curiosity, dug up the box and, terrified by their ghastly find, they reported to Officer O'Neill, who was their on duty. He, accompanied by Officer John Knapp, went to the dump. They summoned County Physician Westcott who removed it to the police station where it now remains.

The body is dressed in white underclothing packed in a box, which has been made of another one sawed down to fit the body, and the whole wrapper with coarse gray wrapping paper. The only marks visible on the box or paper are "L. O. W" on the corner of the box the boards being sawed close to "W" and the numbers "¾ 46" written in charcoal on the paper.

ANOTHER CASE AT FANWOOD.

THE TRAINED NURSE IS NOW ILL WITH DIPHTHERIA

Case is a Very Light One—Both Children Have Practically Recovered From Dread Disease.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Fanwood, May 6.—Just at the time when the Board of Health was expecting to raise the quarantine at the home of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Ellis, Forest avenue, another case of diphtheria developed. Miss Yeatman, of Nashville, Tenn., a trained nurse, who recently came to the Ellis home to assist in nursing Dorothy and James, the children, who were ill, was taken ill last Friday and the quarantine will have to be maintained for some time to come. It is a comparatively light case and Miss Yeatman is doing very well under the best medical treatment.

The children are now up and about the house. The physician now considers them practically well. Mr. Ellis returned home from New York Friday night and he will remain at home for the present.

He received word from New York that his wife and son are still in quarantine at the home of Mrs. Norton. Mrs. Ellis wants to return home, but it is not considered wise. Mrs. Ellis and her son are perfectly well and have not developed any symptoms of diphtheria. The health authorities for excellent reasons think that it is best to keep them quarantined.

WELL KNOWN TALENT.

Lotus Glee Club and Miss Minnie Marshal Smith Will Take Part in Concert.

The only appearance of the Lotus Glee Club of New York, in this vicinity this spring, will be made at the First M. E. church tomorrow evening.

Between the musical numbers Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith, with whose ability Plainfielders are familar, will recite.

QUAINT SOCIAL.

Held at Y. M. C. A. Saturday Night and it Proved a Decided Success.

The "quaint" social at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening was very well attended and the originators were well pleased with the result. It was given mainly for the purpose of getting the members of the physical and educational departments better acquainted. The boys spent a very pleasant evening playing checkers, chess and carroms in the parlor, where a log fire had been built. Others busied themselves relating personal anecdotes. A similar social will be held next Saturday evening.

—Warren Engine Company will drill on Watchung avenue this evening. Capt. Wm. C. Smith will be in charge.

THREE ARE NOW TIED FOR PRESIDENT'S CUP

That Trophy Played For on Links of Park Golf Club Saturday Afternoon.

J. H. HOWELL LOW MAN.

TWENTY TOOK PART IN SATURDAY'S PLAY FOR CUP.

Low Gross Score Was Made by Morgan T. Townsend—New Greens Were Used For The First Time—Course Was Good.

While the links of the Park Golf Club opened a week ago, the regular putting greens of that course were not used until Saturday when the second day's play for the President's cup was held. But for the high wind the day was ideal for golf while the course itself was in splendid condition. The new greens were good but a trifle slow.

Twenty members registered for the afternoon's play for the President's cup and a fair lot of cards were turned in. Morgan T. Townsend did the best, scoring 102 gross. Fred P. Taylor, the other virtual scratch player, was way off his game. Joseph H. Howell was low man for the cup, with 85 net, playing around in a four ball match. There were no others below 90 but half a dozen competitors were closely bunched above that mark. None of the scores were at all phenominal but most of the players showed steady improvement over their game of a week ago.

As a result of Saturday's play, there are now three players tied for first place for the President's cup with three points each. The standing for the cup is now as follows:

Morgan T. Townsend	3
Joseph H. Howell	3
Charles W. McCutchen	3
William J. Butfield	2
W. de la R. Anderson	1
Herbert S. Rogers	1

The best scores turned in during the afternoon were as follows:

	Gross.	Hand.	Net
Joseph H. Howell	113	28	85
Morgan T. Townsend	102	10	92
W. de la R. Anderson	107	14	93
Herbert S. Rogers	118	25	93
Charles B. Morse	122	28	94
F. Roland Horne	135	40	95
H. D. Hibbard	115	18	97
George T. Rogers	122	25	97
Fred P. Taylor	114	10	104
Charles A. Reed	133	25	108

WILL GRANT NINE HOUR DAY.

Well Known Leader in Building Trades Council Believes It Will be Granted.

A well-known leader in the Building Trades' Council informed a Press representative Saturday that he was sure that the bosses in the local machine shops would grant the nine-hour day May 20, as recently stated.

While no formal demand has been made for the shorter day with an increase of 12 cents a day in wages, he felt quite positive that there would be no trouble when the time arrived to make the change. There seems to be an evident desire on the part of both parties concerned to keep very quiet on the subject under consideration.

Initiation of Golden Crown Castle.

Twenty members of Freedom Castle, K. G. E., of this city, were present at the institution of Golden Crown Castle at Somerville Thursday evening. The degree team was from New Brunswick. TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

Some very amusing mistakes have been made by interpreting messages given over the phone. Not long ago a message was received in this way at an office in this city by a friend of the man for whom it was intended. The friend hurriedly wrote the message on a slip of paper and addressed to the proper person. This is how the note read "Bring home one dozen custard tarts—without the address." Puzzled to know what was meant the man rang up his family and in a short time it was explained that "postal cards" and not "custard tarts" were wanted.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May Be Of Interest to Plainfield and its Citizens.

An interesting event of the week was the announcement of "Farmer Orator" James E. Martine, of Union county, that he was a candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket. It has been supposed that Mr. Martine was a candidate for something for a long while, but it was not suspected that he would thus early in the present campaign step into the lime. Mr. Martine has long been a conspicuous figure in the political affairs of New Jersey. He was one of the earliest and most ardent supporters of Bryan and his eloquent voice and his bulging purse were on tap day in and day out during the memorable campaign of '96. Last year he was one of the State's delegates to the Kansas City Convention, and happy, indeed, was he when the Nebraskan once more was named to lead the party in the fight for the Presidency. Mr. Martine is very popular at home, and if he shall continue as a real candidate he may win the delegates from Union, if from nowhere else. It begins to look, however, more and more as though Senator Johnston Cornish, the piano man of Warren, would have a moving voice in the situation. If he fail of the nomination himself he will come pretty near saying who the winner will be, for to the man up the tree it looks as though Cornish is the most popular of all the candidates named for a Democratic standard-bearer up to date. Martine's candidacy bodes no good to Mayor Seymour, of Newark.—Philadelphia Record.

With Democrats in this section of Union county, the prevailing belief has always been that there is no honor or office in the gift of the party to which James E. Martine is not entitled, and the boom for his nomination for governor will in consequence meet with a support that will no doubt surprise many of the politicians from other sections of New Jersey. Mr. Martine has rendered services of incalculable value to his party during the past thirty years. Straightforward, faithful and honest, he is just the character of man that the party should delight to honor and of the stamp who would discharge the duties of any position with honor to himself and credit to his party.

If nominated and elected the taxpayers of the state would be certain of an administration of the executive office that would be free from the abject servility to the corporations, disgusting subservience to his party bosses and arrant hypocrisy and partisanship that have characterized the administration of the office for the past three years. The Democrats of Union county owe much to James E. Martine and will no doubt await themselves of an opportunity to discharge a portion of the debt this fall.—Summit Record.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." Rhey T. Snodgrass, of Central avenue, has gone to Baltimore on a week's business trip.

Frank Ayers has resigned his position as night operator at the local telephone exchange.

Miss Mabel Hockridge, of East Fifth street, has returned from a visit with Brooklyn friends.

Miss Marion Porter, of West Third street, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Arthur McVoy, of Hoboken.

—Wm. Lunger, of North avenue, has removed to the Voorhees' flats on West Front street.

—"Our little girl was unconscious from strangulation during a sudden and terrible attack of croup. I quickly secured a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure, giving her three doses. The croup was mastered and our little darling speedily recovered." So writes A. L. Spafford, Chester, Mich. L. W. Randolph.

Removed Fire Plug.

The widening of Somerset street necessitated the removal of the fire plug at the corner of Pearl street and the first named thoroughfare. The position was set back about six feet.

A SUNDAY IN TEXAS.

President and Party Take a Rest In El Paso.

EL PASO, Tex., May 6.—The presidential party reached El Paso, the gateway of Mexico, at 9 o'clock Sunday and will remain here until noon today. President Diaz of Mexico had hoped to meet the president here and shake hands across the border, but as the Mexican congress is in session he could not leave the capital. He sent a personal message to the president, however, and also dispatched General Juan Herendez, the commander of the second military zone of the state of Chihuahua, personally to present his good wishes to the chief magistrate of the United States.

Governor Miguel Ahumada of Chihuahua, the most northerly state of Mexico, also traveled to El Paso to pay his respects, and these distinguished Mexican officials, accompanied by General Hernandez's staff, in full uniform, were received by the president in his car at the station. After exchanging felicitations the president requested General Hernandez to convey to President Diaz his personal good wishes for the health and happiness of President Diaz and for a continuation of the cordial relations at present existing between the two countries.

It being Sunday the president requested the local committee here not to arrange any programme for the day. His wishes were respected, and the military parade and official exercises were postponed until today. The president and his wife and the members of the cabinet attended the Station Street Methodist church in the morning, and in the afternoon some of the party went for a drive.

After dark the Mexican band which had been brought from the City of Mexico by General Hernandez serenaded the president. No horns or drums were used, and the soft, languorous Spanish airs strummed on guitars and mandolins in the cool of the evening were thoroughly enjoyed. While it was a comparatively quiet day in El Paso, notwithstanding the large number of strangers in town, it was otherwise in the Mexican city of Juarez, just across the Rio Grande. May 5 is the anniversary of the defeat of the French invaders at Puebla and is celebrated as our Fourth of July is in the United States. The great feature of the celebrations yesterday was a Spanish bullfight. A famous matadore had come to Juarez from the City of Mexico for the occasion. None of the members of the president's immediate party attended.

Governor Murphy of Arizona and his staff participated in the formal greetings this morning. One of the features of the programme was a Mexican breakfast, with the typical Spanish dishes, for the ladies of the party.

SUNDAY AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.

Gates Open to Visitors, but Exhibitions Closed.

BUFFALO, May 6.—The first Sunday of the Pan-American exposition's official existence brought out a good sized crowd. Peaceful strolling along the terrace and the esplanade, restful sitting on the green benches within hearing of the sacred band concert on the plaza and uninterrupted sauntering on the Midway were the few indulgences of the Sunday sightseers. The gates were open, but the buildings were closed. Guards stood by the doors of the great exhibit buildings and politely told the visitors that no one would be allowed to enter.

On the Midway two of the shows opened their doors in the morning, and their criers announced that they were ready for business. They were promptly notified by the exposition police to close their shows. They did so under protest, and a test case will be tried to decide whether the Midway concessionnaires have a right to give their exhibitions on Sunday.

American and Mexican Boys Fight.

EL PASO, Tex., May 6.—As the result of a pitched battle between American and Mexican small boys Anasticio Pailen, 9 years of age, is dead from the effects of a rifle ball wound and three American lads whose ages range from 12 to 14 are in jail on warrants. It has long been customary for the boys of both races who reside in the western suburbs to fight whenever the different bands encountered each other, but not until Friday had any one been seriously injured. On that day about 50 Mexicans attacked a dozen little Americans, and for a time the battle was severe, but was confined to the throwing of stones. The Americans were being worsted, when they procured a target rifle and small pistols. The rifle was directed at the ranks of their assailants, and the bullet struck Pailen, inflicting a wound from which he died Friday night.

Our Force Leaves Peking.

PEKING, May 6.—The United States cavalry and artillery left Peking this morning to march to Ton-ku. Imposing farewell ceremonies attended their departure. Sir Alfred Gaselee and the other British generals, with their staffs, were present, and the British commander sent a detachment of Baluchis, who escorted the Americans outside the city wall. General Chaffee publicly thanked the cavalry and artillery for their services in the international relief expedition and for their behavior since, which had been, he said, a credit to themselves and their nation. The infantry and headquarters staff will leave by rail as soon as the transports arrive at Taku.

A Maniac's Terrible Deed.

GRENNA, Sweden, May 6.—While Baroness Augusta von Dusen was introducing a patient named Nehrmann into a hospital for nervous diseases here, Nehrmann became violent, seized a knife and stabbed the baroness and her three daughters. The patient then escaped into the street clad only in underclothing, tried to force an entrance into several houses and attacked and wounded five persons before being overpowered. One of the daughters of the baroness has succumbed to her wounds.

The Korean Loan.

YOKOHAMA, May 6.—Advices from Seoul, capital of Korea, says: "In the Korean loan agreement, now published, the Yunnan syndicate retains a tenth part for the ostensible purpose of establishing a bank, while the government undertakes to repay the whole 5,000,000 yen in 24 years, the customs duties being pledged as security."

Waldersee May Retire Soon.

BERLIN, May 6.—"In view of the favorable development of events here," says the Peking correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger, "it is possible that Count von Waldersee will return home about the middle of June."

FEEDING THE HUNGRY

Relief Comes to Jacksonville's Ten Thousand Homeless.

OFFERS OF ASSISTANCE POURING IN

Loss Now Fixed at Eleven Millions Searching For the Missing. Thousands Leave the Stricken City.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 6.—The hunger of 10,000 homeless people was satisfied yesterday upon the arrival of relief trains and boats bringing provisions from neighboring towns. Early in the morning a commissary was established in the center of the city, and thousands were fed during the day. The relief fund is growing hourly, and every mail brings offers of assistance. An order was promulgated under martial law requiring all merchants whose stores were spared by the conflagration to open their doors and sell to all who asked. The streets were crowded all day with shoppers who lost all in the fire and many stores remained open all night.

It is estimated that 3,000 persons have left the city, and every outgoing train is crowded with refugees. Five carloads of tents were received, the property of the state, which are to be used by the homeless temporarily. Another shipment of tents is expected from the government.

This morning The Times-Union and Citizen establishes the total property loss at $11,000,000. These figures are based upon an itemized statement furnished by a volunteer committee of citizens.

Rumors of loss of life are on every hand, and the river is being closely watched. Many persons have confirmed the report of loss of life at the Market street wharf. Numerous advertisements appeared in the local papers asking for aid in searching for persons who are missing. As many have left for the gulf it is impossible to ascertain who have been lost in the Market street pier tragedy.

A committee of Atlantans was here yesterday to deliver $1,000 worth of provisions, promising another car during the week. Atlanta also furnished by express 1,000 feet of hose.

Martial law is being rigidly enforced, and the town is quiet, although much anxiety prevails because of the threats said to have been made by the negroes that they would obtain provisions by force at the first opportunity.

In the eastern portion of the city the debris is still burning, but no further outbreak of the flames is anticipated.

RELIEF FOR FIRE SUFFERERS.

New York Makes Preparations to Aid Jacksonville.

NEW YORK, May 6.—The Jacksonville emergency committee of the Merchants' association of this city, organized to send relief to Jacksonville, Fla., which city is suffering from the great fire of Friday last, has received the following telegram from Governor Jennings:

"Food supplies needed as temporary relief. Jacksonville association will issue call, which will be furnished you, giving class of supplies needed. The people of Florida appreciate your noble work. In their name I thank you."

Also one from Mayor Bowden of Jacksonville:

"One hundred and thirty-six blocks, covering best residental and business portion of city, destroyed. About 10,000 people homeless and thousands destitute. Our people responding liberally, but demands for help beyond our ability to meet."

To Mayor Bowden a telegram in reply was sent telling him that the citizens of New York would respond nobly to his appeal for that which is necessary in the way of food, clothing, cots, household utensils, drugs, etc., as soon as they knew just what was needed and that the emergency committee would meet together with the old Galveston relief committee to take immediate action upon receipt of intelligent information.

President Pledges Aid.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 6.—Governor Jennings has received the following telegram from President McKinley, dated El Paso, Tex., May 5: "I have just learned of the calamitous fire that has swept over the city of Jacksonville and hasten to express the deep sympathy, in common with our country. I feel for those who have suffered. The government will do all it can in the work of relief."

Clothing and Money Sent.

MIAMI, Fla., May 6.—At a citizens' meeting yesterday afternoon 19 cases of clothing and a considerable sum of money was donated to the Jacksonville sufferers. Hon. John B. Reilly, president of the board of trade, wired the relief committee of Jacksonville $300, and more will follow.

Free Transportation Offered.

MACON, May 6.—The Georgia Southern and Florida railroad is deadheading all freight over its line intended for the fire sufferers, and the agent at Jacksonville has been authorized to give free transportation to all needy people who want to leave Jacksonville.

Galveston Contributes.

GALVESTON, May 6.—Over $1,000 was raised here yesterday afternoon for the relief of the fire sufferers at Jacksonville, and more will follow. Committees are at work collecting for the fund, and it is growing fast, both rich and poor contributing.

Kansas City Dry.

KANSAS CITY, May 6.—Saloons in Kansas City were closed tight yesterday, the first time in six years. But one arrest for failure to respect Mayor Reed's order was made, and one of the quietest days for a long time was the result. Saloon keepers spent an active day, however, circulating petitions to the mayor and police commissioners giving their side of the question and requesting a resumption of the old regime.

Fifty Years In One Pulpit.

SYRACUSE, May 6.—Presbyterian clergymen from all parts of the state are gathering at Ogdensburg to be present at the jubilee celebration this week of D. L. Merrill Miller of the First church of that city. Dr. Miller has occupied the same pulpit continuously for 50 years.

Two Children Burned to Death.

MALONE, N. Y., May 6.—Two children named Pringle, aged 8 and 12 years, a boy and a girl, were burned to death in Burke, N. Y. The remainder of the family were away at church, and the house caught fire after the children had gone to bed.

CHINESE SITUATION.

Minister Conger States the Case as He Sees It.

LENIENT TREATMENT FAVORED.

Our Representative Says He Was Not the Bloodthirsty Member of the Foreign Legation at Peking.

NEW YORK, May 6.—Minister E. H. Conger, who has lately returned to this country, furnishes an article on the Chinese situation which will appear in the coming number of Leslie's Weekly. Mr. Conger says in part:

"Unless matters have changed very materially since I left China six weeks ago the powers will reach some conclusion in regard to China very soon. Of course it is difficult for 11 men to agree on anything, especially when they have 11 governments with differing views behind them. China is perfectly willing to do anything that the powers agree upon—that is, anything within her ability to accomplish. She is only too anxious to expedite these matters and settle down to peaceful pursuits again. Of course the powers must not demand an indemnity which China will be physically unable to raise. It is possible that China will not be able to meet quite all the expenses of the war, but even if there should be a slight balance left on the wrong side it would pay the powers far better to abate a little in the amount of their demands and allow trade to commence again than to insist on the last farthing and delay the renewal of commercial relations.

"It is not certain that finally some nation may not demand territory of China in lieu of a money indemnity. It is perfectly certain that if any nation does make this demand the partition of China will follow, and this will inevitably cause much dissension between the powers. These difficulties and disputes would be long in the settling and would lead to terrible confusion in China. No man can tell how long it would be before the country would be peaceful, and there would be constant strife between the powers and the provinces which they attempted to govern—all this to the detriment of trade. Russia has so far mitigated her demands that there is not now much danger of serious difficulty between her and Japan. Personally I am very much in favor of the continued existence of China as an empire, governed by her own emperor. It will save us and all the rest of the world lots of trouble if the integrity of the empire is maintained. The empress dowager has done much harm. She is not, however, entirely to blame for the Boxer uprising. Among her counselors and near to her were many men of strong antiforeign feeling, and she listened only too willingly to what they said, her own prejudices coinciding with theirs.

"At home I understand that I was thought bloodthirsty, but in China I was the most lenient of all the ministers except one. We knew the conditions better than those who were not there could possibly know them. Drastic measures were demanded, but I do not think that we were cruel. What would seem a severe punishment to us at home would not impress the Chinese at all, for the reason that they indulge in so many cruel and unusual punishments. The reports of cruelty on the part of soldiers have been grossly exaggerated, though I am sure that there was plenty of brutality on the part of individual soldiers. As an army the allies were exceedingly well behaved. Nor were the stories of unrestricted looting true. In Peking the soldiers took what they needed of course, just as we would have seized anything that we needed while we were caged up in the compound had we been able to fasten upon anything that would help us to withstand the siege. As for the stories of missionary looting, they are undisguisedly false. The missionaries did not loot."

Seven Persons Burned to Death.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Seven persons were burned to death while asleep early yesterday in a tenement house at South Chicago. A freight train of 65 cars which was standing in front of the building and which, it is claimed, the crew refused to move, blocked the firemen, who were unable to get near the burning building until it was too late. The train crew was arrested and is being held without bail.

Transsiberian Railway Open.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 6.—Although the entire Transsiberian railway is now open for traffic, Americans should not fall into the error of assuming that a journey by rail between Vladivostok and Moscow is yet possible. The line ends at the Chinese frontier, and the Manchurian railway will not be finished this year. River traffic continues exceedingly difficult.

The Gardo House Sold.

SALT LAKE CITY, May 6.—The Gardo House, known as "Amelia's mansion," built by Brigham Young for his favorite wife, Amelia Folsom Young, and for years occupied by her, has passed out of the hands of the church. The property was sold in the name of President Snow as trustee for the church to Colonel F. E. S. Holmes of this city.

British Scouts Captured.

LONDON, May 6.—"News has arrived here," says the Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Express, "that Colonel Dennison, with a patrol of scouts, has been captured. The location of the mishap is not known in Cape Town."

Indian Philanthropist Dead.

BOMBAY, May 6.—Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit, the well known millionaire and Parsee philanthropist, is dead.

CONDENSED DISPATCHES.

The Chicago Homeopathic Medical college has decided to admit women on an equal footing with men.

Mrs. Kate Achels, a Christian Scientist, tried to raise her three children from the grave in Stanton, Neb.

Comprising 1,000 persons, a whole congregation in Wilkesbarre, Pa., took a pledge of total abstinence.

Twenty torpedo boat destroyers and torpedo boats will soon be completed and turned over to the government.

Between 8,000 and 9,000 employees in the 43 shops of the Illinois railroad system have secured a horizontal increase of 5 per cent in wages.

At Verona, N. J., a golden eagle measuring seven feet from tip to tip, the first one ever seen in that part of the state, was shot by Albert Brady.

NEW YORK SCHOOLS.

Some Interesting Facts From Superintendent Skinner's Report.

ALBANY, May 6.—Superintendent Charles R. Skinner of the state department of public instruction has just issued the forty-seventh annual report of his department.

The sum expended for the maintenance of the public schools of the state during the last school year was $33,421,491, an increase of $5,368,500 over the previous year. This increase is attributable for the most part to the activity in building schools in New York city. There has also been a general increase in other lines. Teachers' salaries in the state aggregate $19,218,892, an increase of $2,734,245. This increase is in a great measure due to the operation of the Davis law affecting teachers' salaries in the city of New York, which was put in operation a few years ago.

The average annual salary for teachers in the entire state has correspondingly increased and is now $694.78, an increase of $64.28. The increase in the commissioner districts is $4.14 and in the cities $107.73.

The average annual salary in the country districts of the state is now $322.49, an increase of $30 per year over the average salary paid ten years ago. The aggregate daily attendance of the public schools has increased by 3,531,525 days, and the average daily attendance shows an increase of 8,053. The total number of children of school age attending school last year was 1,209,574.

THE OHIO'S LAUNCHING.

Mrs. McKinley Will Set In Motion the New Battleship.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—The much discussed question as to whom would fall the honor of launching the battleship Ohio has been settled by the announcement that the function will be performed by Mrs. McKinley. After the simple ceremonies preceding the event, consisting of short addresses by President McKinley, Governor Nash and Irving M. Scott, Mrs. McKinley will press the button and the released ax will sever the rope just at the turn of the tide at 12:26 p. m. Just as Mrs. McKinley touches the button Miss Helen Deshler of Columbus will break the bottle of California wine over the bow and give the new fighting machine the name of Ohio.

All preparations for the reception and entertainment of President McKinley and Governor Nash of Ohio, with their respective parties, while in California have been completed. A programme of receptions and side trips to points of interest has been arranged on such an extensive scale that it begins to look as though it will be impossible for the president to get to all the places at the time scheduled for the various functions.

Governor Gage and his reception committee, accompanied by United States Senator Bard and the seven congressmen from California, will leave tonight for Redlands, Cal., where the presidential train will be met Wednesday morning.

Lipton Pleased With His Boat.

SOUTHAMPTON, May 6.—None of Sir Thomas Lipton's party came ashore here after the return of the Shamrock II from the spins. Sir Thomas, it is asserted, is more enthusiastic than ever. "I consider it demonstrated beyond question," he said, "that the new challenger will make the finest fight ever made in a contest for the America's cup. I do not know what America has to array against us, but I am convinced that the Americans will be well pleased to see a good race and will bear me no ill will if, as I now think possible, I should win the cup." From an amateur who was on board during the spins it was ascertained that Captain Sycamore was greatly pleased with the behavior of the challenger in all respects and that he remarked that her smoothness in traveling was extraordinary. Another trial has been arranged for today, when everybody hopes there may be a fresher breeze.

Cuban Commission Reach Home.

HAVANA, May 6.—The special commission of the Cuban constitutional convention who went to Washington to obtain a better knowledge of the intentions of the United States government regarding Cuba arrived here early Sunday morning. They were met by a delegation of Cubans and by Colonel Scott, representing the military governor. Senor Llorente said the commission had held several conferences on the Havana during the trip and that an understanding had been reached. He explained, however, that it would be necessary to hold another meeting today, when the report of the commission would be drawn up and a call issued for a conference with the other delegates tomorrow.

Hungarian Gypsies Poison Wells.

LONDON, May 6.—The Daily Mail publishes the following telegram from Vienna: "A gang of gypsies, in revenge for their previous capture by gendarmes, poisoned the wells in the village of Kapolya, Hungary, with the result that 15 persons have died of poisoning. Several of the gypsies have been arrested, and strychnine was found in their possession."

Wholesale Arrests In Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 6.—During the last few days there have been wholesale arrests and seizures in connection with the alleged revolutionary movement. It is reported that persons of high position and reputation are involved. Several hundred persons have been arrested during the last 48 hours, including a number of prominent officials.

Alleged Robber Arrested.

BUFFALO, May 6.—Detectives of the police headquarters staff yesterday arrested E. E. Jessup, alias C. E. Brooks, who, it is alleged, was at the head of a trio of robbers who broke into the home of Mrs. Ruth Ayers in Lenawee, Cambridge county, Mich., and after binding and gagging her robbed her of between $7,000 and $8,000.

Arrested For the Killing.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., May 6.—John Wallace of the town of Warren has been arrested by Sheriff Strobel for killing Benjamin Hoyt, who had killed Wallace's wife. Wallace was taken to Herkimer jail and makes the plea that the killing of Hoyt was in self defense, as Hoyt had a revolver drawn and ready to kill him.

France to Get "The Flower Girl."

LONDON, May 6.—The trustees of the Chantrey bequest have purchased for the nation Mr. C. H. Shannon's painting, "The Flower Girl," for £500. "It is a picture," says The Daily Chronicle, "which the nation will really care to possess."

THE COLOMBIAN REBELLION.

It Is Now a Guerrilla Warfare—Rebel Strength Unknown.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, May 6.—Claude C. Mallet, the British consul at Panama, has just arrived here on the steamer Atrato on his way to England. Mr. Mallet was interviewed on conditions in Colombia and said that the revolution there had degenerated into guerrilla warfare and that the strength of the rebels was not known. One week perhaps 5,000 men are in the field, while the next week there will be but 1,000, as the rebels are in the habit of returning to their homes in order to gather supplies, and the following week they are out in full force again.

The Colombian government has taken the most strict precautions to guard the most important towns of the country, especially Panama, which is considered to be perfectly safe. In spite of the strong garrisons, however, the rebels occasionally manage to get near enough to the towns to inflict damage by sniping. No organized attack has been made during the past two months.

Advices from other sources report heavy fighting last week in the interior from Savanilla and Baranquilla. The rebels repulsed an attack of the government forces, with heavy losses on both sides.

MAY INVADE THE CAPITAL.

Pennsylvania Senate Must Not Hold Up Labor Bills.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., May 6.—A committee from the United Mine Workers, composed of Districts Nos. 1, 7 and 9 of the anthracite region, went to Harrisburg today to see Acting President Snyder of the state senate. He is expected to inform them whether the senate committee intends holding up the labor bills or report them in the negative. In either event news will be sent to the coal region, whereupon the secretaries of the districts will notify the locals to hold mass meetings tonight in every town and village to prepare the men for mobilization preparatory to the invasion of Harrisburg. Secretary Hartleln of District No. 9 said that the men should be at the state capital by Wednesday night or Thursday. The men do not expect the authorities to interfere with them, despite a rumor that the militia would disperse them if the march started.

A dispatch from Hazleton says: "It is estimated that the Hazleton region will furnish about 5,000 men on the march to Harrisburg if the leaders decide that such a move will be necessary to force through the legislature the bills indorsed by the United Mine Workers.

After Runaway Husbands.

ST. PAUL, May 6.—The county board of control has decided to seek requisition papers in order to secure the return to this state of 30 husbands who have deserted their wives. The last legislature passed a law making wife desertion a felony, punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary from one to three years, with a provision for a suspension of sentence providing the delinquent husband shall give a bond to the state to support his wife and family. The county board of control, which has charge of the county charitable institution, has had to support a number of families where the husbands have deserted and left the state. They asked an opinion of the county attorney as to the possibility of securing the deserters' return, and the attorney having decided that this is possible the board will ask for requisitions in 30 cases. The deserting husbands are located in various states, and the effort to secure their return will doubtless give rise to some novel complications.

Newspaper Men at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, May 6.—Mr. George E. Daniels and his guests, representative newspaper men from New York and Brooklyn and prominent railroad officials, who visited the Pan-American grounds Saturday, spent the greater part of Sunday at Niagara Falls. Mr. Godfrey Morgan, general manager of the Gorge route, escorted the party over that road in a special car. Returning to the falls, they inspected the power house where the electricity used for motive power and lighting purposes at the exposition is generated. After luncheon at the Prospect House, a drive through Prospect park, Goat island and the other parts of the park preserve was enjoyed. Returning to Buffalo in the evening, Mr. Daniels and his guests were entertained at dinner by the newspaper owners of this city. They left for New York at 8 p. m. on the Pan-American express.

Quiet Sunday In Omaha.

OMAHA, May 6.—The Sunday closing orders issued by Mayor Moores were in most instances observed. Two saloonkeepers in outlying portions of the city were arrested for failing to bolt their side doors, and half a dozen bootblacks were also detected in the act of disturbing the Sabbath quiet. They were arrested, but were bailed out by "Mogie," the so called king of the newsboys. The mayor says he is satisfied with the operation of the orders which he laid down, but he has not decided just how stringent the directions for next Sunday will be.

Colonel Lyman's Funeral.

OSWEGO, N. Y., May 6.—The funeral of Excise Commissioner Lyman, who died Saturday, will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The services will be at the residence, and an Episcopal clergyman will officiate. The burial will be at Riverside cemetery, Oswego. Post Obrian, G. A. R., and Masonic lodges will attend. Telegrams of condolence have been received by the family from state officials, members of the legislature, politicians and personal friends. Flags on public and private buildings are at half mast.

Thousands Greet Duke and Duchess.

MELBOURNE, May 6.—One hundred thousand sightseers thronged the streets of Melbourne yesterday to view the beautiful decorations in honor of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York. Lord Hopetoun, the governor general, accompanied by Lady Hopetoun, visited the Ophir yesterday afternoon to welcome the duke and duchess. The weather was excellent.

Court Waiting For the Astrologers.

SHANGHAI, May 6.—It is reported that famine will make it impossible for the Chinese court to remain longer in Sian-fu and that the court is now only waiting for the astrologers to fix an auspicious day for beginning the journey to Kai-feng-fu, in the province of Honan.

NEW CUP DEFENDER.

Construction of the Yacht Constitution Outlined.

LAUNCHING TAKES PLACE TODAY.

Herreshoff's Latest Creation Said to Be No Experiment, but Only an Improved Columbia and Probably Faster.

BRISTOL, R. I., May 6.—In spite of the precautions taken by the Herreshoff company to keep dark the secrets of the design of the Constitution, which is to be launched today, through various mysterious sources all the essential points of the cup defender are known. Against a force of skilled mechanics, all sworn to secrecy, searched fore and aft daily to guard against the carrying of the tiniest camera known to science in the innermost recesses of their garments and pledged by the code of honor to reveal nothing, the news gatherers have had a hard time of it.

There is no doubt that Mr. Herreshoff has a good deal yet concealed up his sleeve. It is his object to advance with deliberation, as the whole story of his marvelous craft shows most conclusively to the intelligent observer. Vigilant was succeeded by Defender, Defender by Columbia, and each was a trifle better than the prototype and each one by all odds far superior to Valkyrie I and II and Shamrock. Nat Herreshoff is a wizard at yacht designing. His methods are mathematically progressive.

The Constitution is by no means a new experiment. She is an improved Columbia. A couple of feet more beam, a little more length both on the water line and the overhangs, a judicious fining away fore and aft, a larger sail plan, perhaps a little more lead—these are the elements which in the natural course of Herreshoff events should make her the conqueror of Columbia. The boat is a most artful modification of a successful model, with a view to further improvement.

Broadly speaking, the Constitution, being a more powerful craft, should beat Columbia just about as much as Columbia beat Defender. A solid casting of about 90 tons of lead constitutes her keel or fin, to which is bolted her canoe-like superstructure of bronze plating and steel, framework spidery in construction as it may seem at the first glance, but so artfully strengthened and supported by struts and straps and braces as to recall to the mind the craft of the bridge builder rather than that of the shipwright. The steel mast, which may be called the lever which gives the motive power to the hull and which is the center of all the strains, is firmly imbedded in the keel plate and is so supported and sustained in every part by an ingenious system of stays that it is as strongly held in position as an oak tree of half a century's growth by its immense main roots and its myriad fibrous rootlets. The spar itself may succumb to a sudden gust, as has happened before, but the foundation in which it stands is as firm as a rock. The wooden spars are hollow, and, though no exact measurements are available, it may safely be said that they call for even a larger sail spread than that of Columbia. The canvas, when all sail is set, will weigh more than four tons. Wire rope has been used for the luffs of the sails and, in fact, everywhere where it was possible to use it with advantage. The Herreshoff sails, though slovenly when compared with the stylishly cut muslin of the British challenger, hold the wind well and propel the yacht all right, and that is the main purpose of sails.

Will Reduce Force to 40,000.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—After a careful consideration of the situation in the Philippines as it exists today the administration has decided to reduce the army in the islands to 40,000 men. The opinion prevails here that this number will be ample for the present needs of the service in the islands, and if conditions continue to improve in the satisfactory manner that has been shown in the past few months the force may be reduced still further. The expectation of the war department is that all the volunteers now in the Philippines will have left the islands by the end of June, leaving only the regulars on duty there. Following the departure of volunteers will come the regulars who were sent to Manila in 1898 just after the outbreak of hostilities, and their movement home will continue until the force is reduced to approximately 40,000 men.

The First Launching.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.—The first launching at the New York Shipbuilding company's yards on the Delaware river below Camden took place Saturday afternoon, when the steamer M. S. Dollar, built for the Robert Dollar company of San Francisco, was launched. It was christened by Miss Marie Morse of Woodbury, N. J., a daughter of the president of the company. The M. S. Dollar is a single screw freight steamer capable of 1,500 indicated horsepower. It is 309 feet long, 40 feet beam, of 5,000 tons displacement and has a gross tonnage of 2,500 tons. The M. S. Dollar will carry freight between San Francisco and Hawaii.

Two Drowned In Saratoga Lake.

BALLSTON, N. Y., May 6.—Farquhar McLennon, aged 24, and Charles M. Arnold, Jr., aged 17 years, employees in the Idle Wild Paper mill, were drowned in Saratoga lake, four miles east of this village. The two left their homes in this village early in the morning to spend the forenoon fishing. They rode their wheels to the lake and procured a boat from J. J. Hayward. They went on the water about 8 a. m., and that was the last seen of them alive.

Princeton Commencement.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 6.—Commencement exercises at Princeton Theological seminary began yesterday with baccalaureate services in Miller chapel. The Rev. Dr. Marcus A. Brownson of Philadelphia preached. Today the annual meeting of the board of trustees will be held.

Sunday Baseball.

NEW YORK, May 6.—Two National league games were played yesterday. At Chicago the home team was defeated by Pittsburg by a score of 2 to 4, and at St. Louis the score stood 5 to 7 in favor of Cincinnati.

Fire In a Texas Town.

LUFKIN, Tex., May 6. Fire swept away 21 business houses and their contents, entailing a loss of about $65,000, on which there is little insurance.

Plainfield of Today.

Although spring has been delayed this year far beyond the usual time of arrival now that it has come, it finds signs of unusual activity in Plainfield. Never has a spring found such a general interest in outdoor sports and pleasures. This city is now prepared to offer a wide variety of attractions for those who enjoy a breath of fresh air and a little exercise as well.

Even in the palmiest days of baseball, there did not appear to be the general interest taken in the sport that there is today. Plainfield has undoubtedly possessed stronger teams than at present. There has never been, however, so many really good nines, composed of Plainfield boys, as are now playing on local diamonds. There are four strong teams, the St. Mary's, the Hope chapel, the Pond Tool Works and the Clinton Avenues, which will play every Saturday afternoon during the season. Then there are three good school teams which will be seen on the field till the latter part of June. Several other teams, including the Alis A. A., will appear in occasional games. Then there are scores of minor teams which furnish more or less interest to the national game.

In golf, there are two flourishing clubs possessing two of the finest courses in the State, which are now open for play any day in the week except Sunday. Both clubs have announced very interesting schedules which include competitions for every Saturday afternoon and holiday of the season. The membership of both the clubs is large and much interest is taken in the ranks of both.

Never have the roads of Plainfield and vicinity been in as fine condition as they are today. Careful management by the local street department has made the Plainfield streets the equal of any in the country. Then the county roads are in remarkably good condition. Bicyclists, horsemen and automobilists are given plenty of opportunity to enjoy their favorite pleasures.

Within a short time, the open cars of the various trolley lines which radiate from this city will be in general use and those who enjoy the ride in them will have plenty of chance through a stretch of beautiful country.

The city itself has donned its spring attire and never looked more beautiful than it does now. Unusual care has been taken in putting the lawns and gardens in proper condition. The result of it all is apparent to those who ride or drive through the city streets and see the well-kept lawns and the pretty homes on every side.

Plainfield is today one of the finest of New York's suburban cities and it is no wonder that the growth of the city has been steady and healthy to even a greater degree than most of its neighbors.

The only way that the public knows of what transpires at the meetings of the Plainfield Board of Education is through the medium of the newspapers. When business is transacted either in executive session or at an open meeting, no notice of which has been given to the newspapers, the public knows nothing of it. It was no longer ago than last month that a meeting of the board was held of which the newspapers knew nothing until the formal advertisement, asking for the school tax, which is required by law, was brought to them several days later for publication. A little more care in that respect would render the board much less liable to criticism.

While no attempt has yet been made to secure expert advice regarding the possibilities for municipal water works in Plainfield, there will undoubtedly be something interesting in the report of the street committee at the Council meeting this evening. The committee has been investigating the subject and has held a conference with the officials of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. Just what the result of that conference was has not yet been made public. It will doubtless have a direct bearing on the future of municipal ownership in Plainfield.

A foregone conclusion as to the chief nomination with the consequent lack of interest is bound to injure the chances of any political party. While it now seems as if Franklin Murphy would receive the gubernatorial nomination of the Republicans without opposition, there is no doubt but that a change will appear before the campaign is over. The Trenton Times sagely remarks that Mr. Murphy is too good a leader to allow things in the Republican ranks to drift along without some kind of a contest to renew the interest.

No expenditure made by the city is more fully appreciated today than the money which went to pay for the new street signs. These signs are now all in position and make it possible at last for people to find their way about town without the aid of a map. The street department is also working to see that houses are properly numbered.

A storm sewer for Somerset street, which has just been authorized by the Borough Council, will be a needed improvement to that thoroughfare. The present time, when Somerset street is being torn up to permit the widening, seems by far the best opportunity to make the change.

Some of the results of the recent Twentieth Century Gospel campaign were seen at several of the churches yesterday when large additions were made to their memberships.

The names of the men who are to investigate the subject of sewage disposal in reference to the borough, will soon be made public.

TWENTY NEW MEMBERS.

Those Who Were Received Into Congregational Church Yesterday Morning.

At the Congregational church yesterday morning, the following were received into membership: By letter, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Noe, John C Noe, Miss Ethel Noe, Mrs. Amelia Beekman, from Grace M. E. church, Mrs. Ernest A. Millard, from First Presbyterian, Mrs. Frank Shattle, from New Preston, Conn., Congregational church; received on confession of faith Josie Fisher Culbertson, Henry Eggerding, William Andrew Kenyon, Edith Marie LaRue, Joseph Welsh Robinson, Sidney T. Smith, Bessie Fairfield Millar, Mrs. I. C. VanNatta, Ethel and Elmer Weseman, Marion D. Woodcock, William VanAlstyne, Emily Lawrence Winant and Bessie May Wycoff.

HELD A SALE.

Youthful Members of Park Field Club Conducted an Affair.

The Park Field Club, an energetic lot of youngsters who have recently organized a baseball team, held an open air party on the lawn of 72 Willow avenue, Saturday afternoon.

Douglas Waring and Percy Howard, who are at the head of the club, managed the affair. Assisting in them were John Valiant, Jr., Frank Curtis, Jr., Walter Vail, Harold Hegeman, Martin Fawcett, Russel Pond and William Barlow. These boys were in charge of various stands on which were placed for sale ice cream, lemonade, candy, cake and other sweets.

WEDDED LAST NIGHT.

Miss Rox Morten and Frank Plummer Plighted Their Troth.

Frank Plummer, of this city, and Miss Rox Morten, of New York, were married last evening at the residence of G. H. Henderson, of 181 North avenue. Rev. Scott Wallace officiated at the wedding service.

The bride was attired in white silk. A reception followed the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Plummer will reside at 181 North avenue.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Arbor Day at High School.

In accordance with the State school law Arbor Day was appropriately celebrated at the Plainfield High School this morning. The chief feature of the exercises was an address on the topic of trees, delivered by Principal I. W. Travell.

Many School Children are Sickly.

THE WHITE GOODS SALE.

The sale goes merrily on and the interest grows in intensity. Ladies are buying not only for their own use, but are buying for their friends here, there and everywhere. There are about 400 styles varying in price from 10c to 50c per yard, and all at about half price. Styles and prices cannot be duplicated. If interested in white goods (and who is not this season) you will surely find something in this large showing to please you.

Colored Wash Goods.

We have a reputation for selling reliable wash goods, of which we are proud. This season's showing is one of great variety and exceeding beauty. Dainty novelties selected in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and all the great trade centres are shown in profusion. For hard wear the A. F. C. Corded Ginghams at 10c and the well-known Bates Seersuckers at 11c.

For hot weather the delightfully comfortable printed dimities at 15c and 18c in perhaps 100 styles. Summer Home Furnishings

Refrigerators, Blue-flame Stoves, Hammocks, Screen Doors, Window Screens, Bamboo Porch Screens, Lawn Mowers, Croquet Sets, Garden Hose, Porch Chairs and Rockers, Ice Cream Freezers, Sprinkling Pots, Etc., Etc. . . . . .

It will certainly prove refreshing to the buying public to read of our offering of dependable Summer Home Furnishings, because everything we offer is of the highest character, the newest and best styles and with it all, the very lowest prices, take it for granted that when we push any certain line or make of goods, they are backed up by merit.

SOME INSTANCES:

"Jewett Refrigerators,"

sold exclusively in this city by us, have proven to be just what the manufacturers say, "The best in refrigerators," we have found them so and sell at least a car load of them every year, and it affords us much pleasure to heartily endorse them. Enough styles and prices to suit everybody's pocketbook, the easiest refrigerators in the world to keep clean and cold. Prices for moderate sizes, 6.75, 7.98, 9.75, 10.98, and so on up to 45.00.

Wickless Blue Flame Oil Stoves.

Two of the best makes sold exclusively in this city by us and backed up by the endorsement of the Standard Oil Company, the manufacturers, and Us, the only blue flame stoves in the market that are considered absolutely safe, we positively would not offer a stove for sale unless we knew it to be such.

The Sterling Puritan—2 burner 5.98. 3 burner 7.98.
The Brooklyn—2 burner 6.98. 3 burner 8.98.

Now being demonstrated in our basement, they are so simple a child can operate them.

Palmer Hammocks, represent the highest type of excellence, twilled and combination weaves, open weave and linen finish, Jacquard and other designs, concealed spreads, with or without valance, all trimmings appropriately finished, the pillow is so fastened that it can be laid back when desired. We have at least 50 styles to show you in all the newest colorings, which of course are fast colors and the prices are 98c, 1.25, 1.48, 1.75, 1.98, and so on up to 5.00.

Porch Rockers.

We have just purchased a large lot of Porch Rockers which were consigned to the Plainfield Furniture Co. at a big reduction in price, they are large roomy chairs, strong and durably made, we have assembled them in two lots and priced them as follows:

Lot No. 1 at 1.39. Lot No. 2 at 1.98.

We are selling them very rapidly and they wont last long.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence.)

Dunellen, May 6—A little son of Peter Schneiderwind, of Prospect avenue, was struck in the forehead Saturday by a pitchfork, wielded by his brother. The children became involved in a quarrel and one of them seized the fork. In the melee which followed one of the tines pierced the unfortunate lad's forehead, just above the eye. The wound, though painful, is not dangerous.

At the next meeting of the Literary Circle, which is to be held Saturday evening, Miss Louise Doolittle will read a paper on music and musicians and Miss Flora Wilguss will read one on art and American artists. On Decoration Day, the members will enjoy a ride and dinner which will conclude the season.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church has made definite arrangements for repeating the "spinsters" return. They will again be heard Thursday evening. The admission fee will be reduced. Musical selections will form part of the programme.

At the spring conference of the Middlesex county Sunday-school convention, which is to be held in St. James M. E. church, New Brunswick, Tuesday, May 14, T. W. Day, of the borough, will read a five minute paper on "What the schools seem to need."

The Dunellen Gun Club held the second shoot of the series arranged, on its grounds, Saturday. There was a good attendance and the members spent the entire afternoon at the traps. Another shoot will probably be held the coming Saturday.

At the Borough Council meeting which is to be held this evening, it is thought Mayor Swackhamer will complete his appointment of borough officials.

Mrs. Morris Rarick has returned home from a week's visit with her parents at Freehold.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ross have been entertaining company from Elizabeth.

Mrs. VanArsdale was the guest of Somerville friends Saturday.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence.)

New Market, May 6—Thirty people from New Market attended the Y. P. S. C. E social held at the residence of Mrs. William Ackerman in North Plainfield Saturday evening. Music and games were the attraction of the evening. As the trip was made by trolley it necessitated a rather early return.

The regular quarterly business meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and society was held last evening in the church. Rev. L. E. Livermore was elected as a delegate to the Eastern Association to be held at Shiloh, N. J.

Children's Day will be observed in the Seventh-Day Baptist church June 22. A committee has been appointed to arrange a programme for the occasion.

Hiram Kelly expects to move in the Fulton house opposite Danz's Hotel today. This places him nearer his place of business.

Leslie, John and Robert Stevens, of Newark, were the guests of J. R. Dunham Sunday. The trip was made on their bicycles.

J. R. Dunham entertained Luther Davis, a student of Rutger's College, New Brunswick, Saturday.

J. A. Wilson and wife, of Millstone, spent Saturday and Sunday with their parents.

Open Cars in Service.

For the first time this season open cars were placed in service on the local lines of the street railway yesterday. During the afternoon the riding was very pleasant, but with the sudden lowering of the temperature in the evening, they were shunned by prospective passengers. At the end of this week it is the intention of the company to remove all the closed cars.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society, of Grace M. E. church will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. James Lunger, on Westervelt avenue.

1905 ENTERTAINED.

Cave Entertaining Programme And Candy Sale in Franklin School Saturday Night.

The class of 1905, of the Plainfield High School entertained its friends very pleasantly at the Franklin school Saturday evening. A goodly sized crowd was present and the affair, under the supervision of Miss Katherine Ball, proved to be very enjoyable.

The musical programme arranged was well rendered A song entitled "The Owl" was sung by a trio composed of the Misses Florence Cuming, Ethel Forbes and Edna Randolph George Rogers and Miss Beulah Rogers sang a duet and Miss Ethel Forbes rendered "School Master and Truant." To the delight of everyone Miss Gilbert, of New York, sang a couple of children's songs. She also sang two other numbers, both of which were well received.

One of the best things on the programme was "The Ballad of an Oysterman." This amusing skit was read by Miss Mae Batchelor and the various characters were personated in shadow by several pupils. The part of the "gallant oysterman" was taken by Harry Thompson and the "pensive maiden" by Miss Mina Bock. Martin Bowman represented the "stern parent." Miss Batchelor also recited very cleverly a Welsh classic.

At the conclusion of the programme a candy sale was held by the class and the the remainder of the evening was spent in a social way.

NEW TEACHERS.

Appointments by the Borough Board of Education Announced.

The new teachers selected for the coming year by the Borough Board of Education are Miss Margarretta Paulding, who takes the position of Miss Laura Walker in the third grade; Miss Grace Anderson, who fills the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Grace Remington, and Miss Jessie Hill, who will teach in the fifth grade instead of Miss Alice Thompson.

Miss Paulding is a resident of Dover, N. J., and was graduated from the Trenton Normal School. Miss Anderson resides at Cortlandt, New York, and attended the Binghamton State Normal School. She assumed her duties this morning owing to the absence of the regular teacher, Miss Remington, who has been ill since the Easter vacation. Miss Remington has notified the school authorities that she will be unable to finish the term as teacher.

Miss Laura Walker, the present teacher in the third grade will teach in a private school next fall.

FRAZEE'S STORE CLOSED.

Well Known Grocer Has Retired From Business for the Present.

Vincent L Frazee, who for a great many years has been engaged in the grocery business on West Front street, closed his place Saturday evening and has retired for the present. Until matters pertaining to his business are settled, Mr. Frazee will not announce his plans for the future. It is a source of regret on the part of Mr. Frazee's friends that he was obliged to give up business and it is generally hoped that he may soon be able to resume.

"Isn't it awful—poor old man!" said Talley, looking at Blanche, but she seemed to have lost the power of speech. She turned white to the roots of her hair. Going into the little reception-room adjacent, she found her guardian standing at a window She laid her hand on his arm.

"Oh, I am so—sorry!" she said, tenderly.

But he only laid an unsteady hand over hers, pressed it a little, and said:

"Thank you, dear little girl; leave me alone now, please."

And as she moved away she saw him sink into a big armchair and cover his face with his hands.

That afternoon the papers came bearing a long account of the tragedy The major was in his room and sent one of the maids down for them, so no one saw his face while he was reading the details, which shocked him as if every word of the account had been true.

"Did you ever imagine that Mrs Goddard was not quite right mentally?" asked Talley when he was able to catch Blanche alone that afternoon.

"Yes," she answered. "I suspected—or rather she confessed to a tendency in that direction the night before she sailed. She said she hoped the voyage would cure her."

"Ah, that sort of thing never entered my head," said the private secretary. "I thought she had the clearest head of any woman alive, but bright people do lose their balance."

They saw little of the major that day. He remained in his room. Friends called to offer condolences and letters and telegrams of sympathy piled up on his desk in his study, but he saw no one nor opened any communication. The next day he went to the city, and there in a small hotel where he was unknown to any of the inmates he took up his abode.

He was as nearly insane as a man of sound mind can become. His existence became a routine of mental torture. He spent each day in walking through streets where he was not known. At night he would lie awake till his physical nature would refuse longer to bear the burden his wife had put upon him, and then his strong frame sank under the blessing of sleep.

He realized fully what she was expecting of him, and he hardly knew if he would be equal to carrying out her plans. At the expiration of the first week after the reception of the news a letter arrived in his private letter box on Sixth avenue. He was almost afraid to open it. It seemed like a communication from the dead—or worse, a command from hell. And when he had finally devoured it, and found that Jeanne and Mrs. Nolan were comfortably domiciled in a little furnished villa near Kensington Gardens and really enjoying life in perfect security from detection—even then, I say, he had no more hopeful horizon.

It was the sin of it all that ground his finer nature down into despair, and he was wise enough to know it. However, there was even in Jeanne's letter much of the potent charm which had been since his marriage his directing influence, and he read and reread the graphic account of her adventures till the awful picture was stamped on his brain. She wrote often, and her epistles were always replete with good humor, her old vivacity and endearing expressions.

In that way a month passed. He scarcely spent an hour out of each day at Lyndhurst. Often he went out on an afternoon train and took the next back to New York. The man who had charge of the private letter boxes stared at him curiously every time he came in and with quivering fingers unlocked his box.

The major began to disregard his dress; often his neckties were not carefully tied, nor his boots polished, nor his silk hat ironed. He no longer frequented the armory of his old regiment, nor his club. He had no desire to meet men he knew.

It was after he had received a letter from Jeanne urging him not to delay any longer in the matter of making Blanche his wife, owing to the great likelihood of the girl's dying suddenly, that he bethought himself that he had neglected his ward very much, considering her solicitude in his behalf. He knew the girl was thinking of him, for every time he entered his room at Lyndhurst he saw evidence of her thoughtfulness in fresh flowers cut in the conservatory by her own hands.

On this day, when he arrived at Lyndhurst, he went into the library. His father, who had been in his lifetime a distinguished surgeon, had left a good collection of valuable medical works. It was Jeanne's allusion to Blanche's critical condition that caused him to look up a description of her malady. "Aortic aneurism," he murmured, as he ran through the index of a big book. But the finding of the article on the subject, and the colored illustrations of the delicate organs on the point of bursting from the pressure of blood, sickened him.

"It is indeed fatal," he said. "She can't possibly live long, and if I only knew that she would be happier as my wife for the remainder of her life Jeanne might have her wish. It would make Jeanne happier, too, and perhaps she does deserve better luck than to be the wife of a poor man."

Had he been as suspicious and as observant as many detectives he might have noticed that the words "aortic aneurism" had been pressed into the surface of the paper across the text, as if some one had written them with a pencil on a piece of paper resting on the page. The formation of the letters resembled the handwriting of his wife, but he noticed none of these points, and closed the book.

Just then the footman brought in a small parcel and placed it on a table.

"What is that, James?" asked the major.

"A package of medicines for Miss Briscoe, sir."

Goddard went to the table and took the parcel in his hands. Just then Miss Dean entered the room.

"I have been looking for it," she said, indicating the parcel. "Blanche's

"DID YOU WANT TO SEE ME, GUARDIAN?"

medicines gave out last night, and I promised to send them up as soon as they came."

"Is Blanche so very bad off, then?" he asked, his mind full of the grewsome article he had just read.

Miss Dean looked at him steadily.

"I think she needs great care and attention, Maj. Goddard," she said, softly. "I wish I could be brave and speak out my mind to you, as I have imagined myself doing a good many times."

"Well, I am sure you may," he returned. "In fact, if it is anything touching my ward's welfare I should want very much to hear it."

"Then it is not a physical disease that is wrong with my dear friend so much as it is—something else."

"Go on, please," said Goddard, mystified.

"She never will get well or be her old self till—pardon me—till you cease to treat her as you do."

"I don't follow you," said the major, slightly embarrassed.

Miss Dean sat down, holding the parcel in her lap.

"I am saying something Blanche would never forgive," she went on, "but you are not blind, Maj. Goddard. You must have known that Blanche's whole life was wrapped up in you before she left school."

The major was looking at a particular figure in the carpet with unnatural steadiness, and he did not raise his eyes.

"Do you think so, Miss Dean?"

"I know it," declared the champion of one woman's rights. "She and I were intimate in school. She knew my heart—I knew hers. I hated you, sir, when I heard you had married a—the woman you did marry, after having led such a confiding young creature as Blanche to believe you were in love with her and spoiled the life intrusted to you. You did this, sir!"

Goddard started. He had never imagined such strong condemnation could come to him from such source. He found himself unable to formulate a reply. Miss Dean, now hot and flushed, continued:

"You might at least treat the poor child decently. She will never get well as long as she frets about you as she is doing. She has hardly slept an hour any night since your sad news arrived. Don't you see she can't put out the fires you kindled in her heart? If you were happy she might do so, but seeing the man one loves in constant misery is enough to kill any organization as sensitive and delicate as Blanche's. If she could only see you once a day and feel that you look upon her as a friend she would not suffer so, but you are always away."

"I thank you for—for speaking so plainly and showing me my duty," stammered Goddard. "I have been very selfish."

He was about to make a reference to the dread malady which was laying siege to the life of his ward, but, remembering his promise to Jeanne not to speak of it, and fearing Miss Dean's indiscretion, he held his tongue on that point.

"Could I see her now, do you think?" he added, contritely.

"Yes; let me send her down to you," said Miss Dean, impulsively.

"I shall wait here," he said. And as Miss Dean left the room he decided no longer to try to stem the tide which seemed bearing him, he knew not whither. He walked the floor till Blanche came. Her sweet young face showed the ravages of a tortured spirit, but it now shone with a light of anticipation.

"Did you want to see me, guardian?" As she spoke, she held out her hands. He took them and stood for a moment gravely looking into her eyes.

"You have been unhappy, Blanche?" he said.

"How could I be otherwise, and you—" her voice failed her and she coughed to disclaim that it was due to rising emotion.

"I know I have not done my duty," he said. "But I want to begin. Blanche, would you like to have me stay more at home than I have since—since Jeanne went away."

"Oh, I wish you would!" she answered, quickly. "You can't imagine how I have worried. You know I could not tell what might have happened to you."

"Blanche." He felt something grasp his heart as he hesitated. It may have been the hand of his conscience—the revolting of his better nature. Then something like the worst form of his recent despair seemed to settle on his brain. He felt that he was groping towards the accomplishment of an unpardonable deed.

"Blanche, if I were to ask you to be my wife, would you consent—could you, knowing how I feel about the—the other?"

He felt her soft warm hands grasp his tightly. For a moment she stood with eyes downcast, then she looked up and said frankly:

"If you wished it I should be so glad, for something tells me I could then help you, and to do that is what I am certainly praying for."

"Would you consent to an early marriage?"

"I should want to do as you liked about it."

"Would you not care for what people would say about our haste in such a matter?"

"I should not care at all." She was breathing rapidly. "I should feel that I was acting right."

He hesitated a moment; then he said:

"Will you marry me to-morrow? Rev. Mr. Strothers lives about a mile from here, along the river. Talley can first see him and make the arrangements. Will you drive there in the morning and become my wife?"

"If it is your wish, yes."

He drew her head towards him and for a moment it rested on his shoulder. For an instant a memory of his courtship of her during her school days flashed into his mind and he experienced one of the old thrills which had made him feel so much like a boy again. Then he put her from him.

"Be ready, then, by 11 o'clock," he said. "I shall speak to Talley at once."

CHILDREN'S FRIENDSHIPS.

The Mother's Part In Choosing a Girl's Playmates.

Mrs. G.—Dear me, I wish my daughter was like Mabel Wright! Mabel has at least a score of nice girl friends belonging to the first families, and my daughter hasn't a single girl friend that she can be proud of.

Mrs. K.—I suppose you think that Mabel chose her own friends.

Mrs. G.—Why, of course. She met them all at school. Oh, it only goes to show how different she is from my Mary. Mary would associate with any and every body. The result is that now that she needs them she hasn't any nice friends.

Mrs. K.—If you will excuse me, I think that is your own fault.

Mrs. G.—Why, what do you mean?

Mrs. K.—Simply this: The mother has everything to do with the friends a girl makes. From 12 years upward a girl makes her friends for life. A child of that age has no judgment. She needs to be guided. Place her in refined surroundings, and she will make refined friends; put her in a common atmosphere, and she will make common friends. What school did you send Mary to?

SCHOOL CHUMS.

Mrs. G.—Why, that one around the corner. The teachers were very clever, and it was so convenient.

Mrs. K.—Exactly. Well, books are not everything—at least not in a girl's life. Mrs. Wright was of that opinion, and so she sent Mabel to a school at the other end of the town, where she associated daily with the nicest girls in the city. It was a little more expensive perhaps and certainly more trouble, but as a result Mabel has the entrance to half a dozen refined homes, and she has formed friends that will be of service to her throughout life.

Mrs. G.—But all that seems so calculating.

Mrs. K.—My dear, it is not calculation; it is prudence. Why should you not give the same care to the choosing of your child's associates as you would, say, to the selecting of a house? Don't you know that a girl's friends affect her character, her future, even her marriage? For young people meet each other at the homes of friends, and what can you expect to meet at the house of a common, mediocre woman? No, you certainly don't want your child to be calculating—in fact, she couldn't be if she wanted to, because she has not your experience and knowledge of the world. She must be made unconsciously to follow your wiser guidance. That is what a mother is for—to be calculating in behalf of her child. As for leaving anything in a girl's life to chance—well, let me quote you a bit from Scott's "Fortunes of Nigel:"

Chance will not do the work; chance sends the breeze.
But if the pilot slumber at the helm
The very wind that wafts us toward the port
May dash us on the shelves.

THE WINDOW.

It Can Be Made the Most Attractive Spot In the Room.

The illustration shows a modern interior which might nevertheless have belonged to the days "when knighthood was in flower."

The woodwork of the room is oak, stained a dull green. The frieze and ceiling are a dainty rose shade. The window is placed in a little recess, which is filled by a window seat. This has a green and gold cushion. The window glass is divided into tiny squares, and the sashes are stained green like the woodwork. The curtains are suspended from a brass rod, and there are two pairs—the inner one of ecru net with a coarse lace edging and the outer one of rose china silk. A cozy touch is given by the little round jardinieres, which hold pink and white azaleas. The chair in the foreground is of dull finished oak, and it is ornamented with burnt or poker work. The seat is upholstered in a figured rose velvet. R. DE LA BAUME.

AN OLD ENGLISH EFFECT.

Some Attractive Summer Gowns for Young Girls

They Are Preferable in Many Ways to Those Designed for Their Older Sisters

Some Dainty Summer Gowns for the Misses

SUMMER gowns for the misses are unusually attractive this year. To my mind they are built upon more attractive lines than are the gowns for mothers and older sisters. A belle of the select set who has a younger sister just in the middle of her teens said to me a few days ago that she was afraid the younger misses would get more than their share of attention at the resorts during the summer because of the unusually attractiveness of the gowns that were being provided for them.

"The people who fix our styles for us," she continued, "have burdened us with inharmonious contrasts, with bungling sleeves, with other things that, to my mind, are far from being as attractive as they might be, while for our younger sisters they have provided the sweetest, daintiest frocks, with a simple light airiness that never before seemed so attractive."

Her views are my views exactly, and the younger girls are the fortunate ones this year. For them the simple lines and light fluffy muslins with lace are in vogue. Summer silks in shepherd checks and stripes are also quite the thing. They are trimmed with lace, narrow ribbon, baby velvet or the fancy ribbons. For wash materials there are French ginghams, madras, percales, lawns and organdies, in checks, stripes and figured grounds. The plain colors are greatly favored. Lightweight cloth materials for outing suits are cashmeres, French flannels, nun's veiling, delaines and serges. These dainty materials are made up in sailor suits, gimp effects and slightly bloused effects.

TWO DAINTY SUMMER GOWNS FOR MISSES.

A PRETTY EVENING DRESS.

A dainty gown for a miss of 15 or 16 is of blue delaine with small white silk polka dot. It is trimmed with a plain delaine. The skirt is tucked down the front gore with a deep flounce that is tucked half way around and the remainder allowed to flare. A strapping of the blue delaine extends down each side from the waist line to the heading of the flounce, where it extends around the skirt. A large bow knot of plain blue is at each side of the front gore in the corner formed by the strapping. The bodice has a sailor waist effect, with a deep collar bordered with the plain delaine, and a wide girdle of the same. The sleeves are plain below and above the elbow, with a full puffing at the elbow.

A dainty afternoon dress for a miss of about the same age is of white muslin. It is trimmed with fine lace insertion. The skirt has tiny tucks about four inches long over the hips and is tucked at the back from the waist to the bottom. There is a plaiting around the skirt just below the knees, with three very narrow plaitings to finish the bottom, headed with the lace insertion, which also heads the wide plaiting above. It has a slightly full blouse which is tucked in clusters with insertion between, this forming a V in the back and front. The elbow sleeves have a V finish on the top. The girdle is of three velvet bands, with rosettes at one side.

A charming evening dress for a young miss is of soft silk in pale pink. The skirt is tucked at the back, and has two narrow ruffles at the foot. The bodice is tucked up and down in clusters of three, with a round neck and round yoke effect. This is trimmed with lace and finished with several dainty black velvet bows. Elbow sleeves of the tucked silk, finished with wide lace caught in a band of black velvet.

Increasing Popularity of Taffeta Silks

SO MANY taffeta silks are being made up for summer wear that they promise to be the commonest thing in the whole realm of fashion, and the women who are ever looking for something out of the ordinary are seeking a newer and less common material that will answer the same purpose as the taffetas.

That does not mean that taffetas will cease to be fashionable before the season is over. Such a thing is not possible, for Dame Fashion has ceased following the caprices and whims of a few leaders, and caters more to the favor of the many, and the many, very many, will wear taffetas.

For early summer wear black taffeta is proving a leader, and gowns of this are very much in vogue at the present time. They are either tailor-made or in more dressy varieties, one of which is tucked so that the tucks meet in points on the skirt above a deep circular flounce tucked down vertically a few inches from the top, and finished with a fancy silver and black silk braid. Pointed lines of tucks meet at the seams in the Eton jacket, the edges are finished with a stitched band and the collar and cuffs are trimmed with the braid.

Some of the little silk jackets are slashed from the bust down on either side of the front and laced across with black silk cord. Another feature of the season's jackets is the little cloth bolero to wear with the foulard silk gown. Although it is very short it is considered a sufficient wrap to wear with this kind of gown, and the cloth must match the prevaling color in the gown.

There are boleros without end, both for indoor and outdoor wear, and some of the latter show the round military collar. Black and white foulard gowns trimmed with lace insertions are very stunning with either a black or a white cloth bolero.

WHITE-PLUMED ARMY

Louisville Will Welcome It with Genuine Hospitality.

Twenty-Eighth Triennial Conclave of the Knights Templar of America to Be Notable Social and Masonic Event.

[Special Louisville (Ky.) Letter.]

THE twenty-eighth triennial conclave of the Knights Templar of America will be held in Louisville August 27 to 30 next. It will bring together perhaps the largest number of members of this great order—the York branch of masonry—ever assembled. As the first meeting in the new century the Louisville and Kentucky Knights have determined to make it the most successful in other ways than attendance in the history of Templarism. They are backed by an entertainment fund of $100,000, one-fifth of which was subscribed by the city council.

Louisville had a long and hard fight covering a space of 12 years before being allowed the honor of welcoming the White-Plumed army, and only won at Pittsburgh in 1898 by 17 votes, defeating Milwaukee. It was at the Smoky City conclave that Right Eminent Sir Charles C. Vogt, of the Falls City, was chosen an officer of the grand encampment, the national governing body of Templary. He was elected grand captain of the guard, and although it will take 15 or more years for him to reach the highest position in the order, that of grand master, his home city considered the selection almost as great a reward as in getting the next meeting of the Knights. Mr. Vogt was therefore chosen president of the triennial committee and chairman of the executive committee, which have charge of the preliminary work of the twenty-eighth triennial.

One of his first appointments to a chairmanship of a standing committee was Col. J. T. Gathright, as head of the committee on hotels and accommodations. In this capacity Col. Gathright has received every delegation of Templars that has visited Louisville to secure quarters for the conclave, and in this way has an acquaintanceship that extends in Templar circles into 35 states, this number of commonwealths having arranged to send large parties to the triennial. At the present time Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania are prettily evenly matched in the race for supremacy in largest state representation.

Col. Gathright believes that Louisville is prepared to care for a crowd of 150,000 during the triennial. There are 30 hotels, 250 boarding houses, a large number of the old southern homes for which Louisville is noted, a camp that will accommodate 4,000 and all the Pullman sidings for sleepers utilized as quarters, available for this purpose. It is thought from present indications that there will be 30,000 Knights and 10,000 ladies accompanying them. The rest of the crowd will come from the territory within a radius of 300 miles of Louisville.

COL. J. T. GATHRIGHT.
(Head of Louisville Committee on Hotels and Accommodations.)

The programme for the week is not yet complete, but as far as outlined it shows that the attractions will be up to the standard, and in many instances innovations. The week will open with divine service at the Broadway Methodist church, conducted by Very Eminent Sir and Rev. J. C. W. Coxe, of Iowa, grand prelate of the grand encampment.

Monday will be devoted to receiving and escorting to their quarters all arriving commanderies. For this duty over 1,000 Kentucky Knights will serve on the committee. They will be organized according to military tactics, and no body of Templars will come to the city without being met at the depot by a squad or company of Knights and a brass band.

The big parade will be the feature for Tuesday morning. There will probably be 30,000 Templars—mounted and as infantry—in line and 125 bands, which will include some of the most famous musical organizations in the country. No military or semi-military pageant in the world approaches in magnificence these Templar parades. Every man is in uniform. Rich banners, valuable for their age as well as their original cost, will be carried. It will probably require five hours for the column to pass a given point.

RIGHT EM. SIR C. C. VOGT.
(President of the Louisville Triennial Committee.)

On Tuesday afternoon there will be boat excursions up the Ohio river, exclusively for Knights and their wives and daughters. These will be repeated every afternoon and night of conclave week.

INSIGNIA OF THE YORK RITE OF MASONRY.

Tuesday night the crowd will divide between a reception at the Masonic Widows' and Orphans' home, the pioneer institution of the kind in the United States, and a southern darky entertainment at Confederate hall, under the special supervision of Col. Will S. Hays, the noted song writer. The latter will show the colored man in every walk of life, from the ragtime artist to the "nigger dude." On Wednesday morning the competitive drill will be held at Churchill Downs, where the famous Kentucky Derby is run every spring. This is the first Templar competitive drill since the San Francisco conclave in 1883. There will be five handsome sterling silver trophies awarded the successful contestants. One of these is offered to the best mounted commandery.

There will be a horse display at the Jockey club grounds on Thursday and Friday. Here will be shown the Kentucky king at home—on native turf—the trotter, the pacer and the runner in his best form. For this exhibit of the equine aristocracy of the Blue Grass state all of the prominent studs of the commonwealth will be drawn on.

The grand ball will be the event of Thursday night. It will be given in the horse show building, which will accommodate about 15,000 dancers and spectators. No ball in recent years in the south will compare with what the Louisville Knights expect to give. It will bring together the cream of American citizenship and the queens of American womanhood.

Other forms of entertainment are being discussed. There will be quite a number of private receptions. President McKinley, Rear Admiral Schley, Speaker Henderson and Hon. James D. Richardson are among the national characters that are expected, all having promised to attend if possible.

Between $35,000 and $40,000 will be spent in illuminations and decorations. Of the former there will be about 30 arches, the main ones being a quadruple and a floral. Something like 1,000 palms and other growing plants will be used on the floral arch, while the quadruple will require 5,000 incandescent lights, and cost $5,000. Four pillars, probably at the intersection of Fourth and Jefferson streets, will hold up an immense dome, on which will revolve a massive cross and crown.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Watchungs and the Whittiers will play a game of baseball this afternoon on the old golf grounds.

The Park Field Club's team will play a game of baseball against the Newman's team this afternoon on the Cricket grounds.

The North Plainfield Juniors defeated the American Eagles in an exciting game on the Somerset street grounds Saturday morning. The score was 29 to 16. McGann and Rowe was the battery for the victors, and Cooley and Downey for the Eagles.

TOO MUCH DRINK.

Accounted For The Appearance of Two Offenders in City Court This Morning.

Raymond Welch, a stone cutter, appeared before City Judge Runyon in the city court this morning, charged with drunkenness. He was found on Park avenue, Saturday, by Roundsman Flynn, helplessly intoxicated. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was given the alternative of paying $3 or spending ten days at Elizabeth. He has chose the former.

Samuel Hannigan, of the West End, imbibed a little more liquor than was good for him Saturday and started in to have a celebration of his own. It was cut short by the arrival of Patrolman Higgins. This morning Judge Runyon thought he had been punished enough and suspended sentence.

Sale Far Below Value.

The sale of the property of the late Miss Eleanor Roome, situated at the corner of Sycamore and Mercer avenues, was sold Saturday afternoon by the executors, John H. VanWinkle and Charles Place, to close up the estate. The purchasers were the four residuary legatees, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., W. J. R. Hegeman, W. J. Roome and Mrs. Emma R. Harbaugh. The property was sold for $6,000, which is far below the value of it. There was no competition.

Miss Mair Will Speak.

Miss Rachel G. Mair, of Mountain avenue, will speak at the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Mission Circle, to be held at the home of Mrs. Walter Freeman, 1008 South avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Meeting of Exempts.

The Exempt Firemen's Association will hold a stated meeting this evening at 8 o'clock. Every member is requested to attend to hear of the arrangements made for the Bayonne trip, May 15.

Prize Choristers.

The prize choristers of Grace church for April are Fred Kanen, Edwin Schiller, Miss Jessie Little, Miss M. Ulrich and Miss J. Smith. Fred Kanen received the Grace church cross.

Official Board and Trustees to Meet.

An adjourned meeting of the official board and a special meeting of the trustees of Grace M. E. church will be held in the church edifice tomorrow evening.

Summer Uniforms For Police.

The city policemen doing day duty have donned their summer uniform, but the men on the night beats have not ventured to change their uniforms as yet.

Council Tonight.

The regular May meeting of the Common Council will be held this evening, when many matters of importance will be considered.

TOO MUCH BEER AND NOISE.

POLICE RAIDED BERGEN'S "GROWLER" PARTY.

Captured Six, Who Were Fined $3 Each in the City Court This Morning.

A doleful sextette of colored people lined up before City Judge Runyon this morning, each one armed with an excuse for his or her appearance in court. They described themselves as Beulah Upshur, Mary Walker, John Bergen, Thomas Rowse, Edward Gillette and George Cline. Arrayed against them was Roundsman Mattox and Patrolmen Higgins and Gamo, who had quietly swooped down on the crowd as they were enjoying a rather noisy "growler" party at Bergen's home on Plainfield avenue at 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

Bergen is noted for his hospitality and when he invited his friends around Saturday night they accepted with one accord. Beer was the only article in the refreshment line provided. As fast as one can was exhausted, a trip around the corner to a convenient saloon provided another. In the hurry of procuring the beverage, they lost account of time. The noise attracted the attention of the police and the party terminated abruptly.

This morning many explanations were offered but none were accepted and the host and guests were adjudged guilty of disturbing the peace. A fine of $5 or ten days in jail was given each.

Wonderful Values Offered.

In the busiest part of the day Woodhull & Martin's white goods department is a most interesting place to visit. The excitement runs high and the eagerness with which the women crowd around the counter containing the special white goods now on sale testifies to the wonderful values being offered. The firm states that this is the most sensational sale ever made by them.

Sold Many Cakes.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church held a successful cake sale at the grocery store of J. A. Smith & Bro., Saturday. A large number of cakes were sent in and all were disposed of at the regulation price of fifty cents each. Mrs. Will F. Williams and Miss Annie Searing were in charge. The proceeds will go toward to work of the Band.

Special Wheel Sale.

Special wheel sale this week at A. M. Griffens. See change of ad in another column today. The Expert wheel advertised is a good reliable wheel, regular stock, made in diamond or drop frames, guaranteed against imperfections. They also have a special inducement on the Wolff American wheels this week.

Fine and Imprisonment

Borough Recorder Doud gave a sentence of seven days' imprisonment and $15 fine on Edward Leland, who was charged with drunkenness, at a hearing held Saturday evening. Leland was arrested Friday evening by Chief Marshal Campbell on Somerset street. The man is now serving out the time given him.

Culvert Caved In.

A stone culvert at the corner of Fourth street and Central avenue, was broken Saturday, and caved in, leaving a dangerous hole. Street Commissioner Gavett was notified and immediately place a danger signal at the spot. It was repaired today.

Sale Was Adjourned.

The sale of property at 527 West Sixth street which was to have taken place Saturday afternoon, was adjourned to Wednesday, May 15, at the same hour. There were not many bidders present and it was thought best to adjourn it.

Will Meet Tonight.

By mistake it was announced that the Exempt Firemen's Association would hold a meeting Wednesday evening of this week. The meeting will be held this evening in the rooms and a full attendance of members is desired.

Social at Hope Chapel.

The Christian Endeavor Society, of Hope chapel, will hold a sociable this evening. An excellent programme has been arranged consisting of vocal and instrumental selections. All young people connected with the chapel are invited.

Many New Church Members.

Twenty-seven people were received into membership of the First Presbyterian church at the communion service yesterday morning. Most of them were young people and united with the church on confession of faith.

RAISED $635.

Results of Relief Association's Rummage Sale Which Closed Saturday Night.

The rummage sale, conducted by the Plainfield Relief Association at its rooms on West Front street, was brought to a successful close Saturday evening.

Beginning Wednesday the sale was held each afternoon including Saturday and also Saturday evening. The purpose was to continue the affair until tomorrow, but the rapid sale of of the articles forbid this plan being carried out. Altogether $635 was the receipts and the managers seem to be well satisfied with the pecuniary result.

A rummage sale will be held every Thursday afternoon and Saturday morning in each week hereafter.

New Member of Choir.

Miss Derby sang very acceptably yesterday as the new soprano in the Trinity Reformed church choir in place of Miss Katheryn Glen, resigned.

Smart Turtles.

The turtle is usually considered a slow-going creature, but the three which figure in this story were swift enough to get out of harm's way. They are pets of a Mr. Eckert, who lives on a farm in Indiana. One day flames broke out in Mr. Eckert's clearing and swept over the entire field. After the fire had raged awhile he thought of his pets and went out to see what had become of them. Of course he was worried, fearing the turtles had not had time to escape. After a long search he went a short distance from the track covered by the flames and discovered a freshly dug hole. In it he found one of the turtles down a considerable depth, digging deeper with astonishing vigor. After walking around the other two were finally located down along a small stream, both in the water, with only their heads sticking out. When Mr. Eckert appeared on the scene they pushed their heads a little farther out, as much as to say: "We're all right; go about your business." Those turtles evidently knew when to get out of danger's way.—Golden Days.

The Honorable Highwaymen.

Sam Rawson occasionally said a good thing, and one of those occasions chanced to be the the town meeting. The people of Sam's village could not understand how the money appropriated for the roads had vanished with such poor results. A stretch of road running past Sam's house was in notoriously poor condition, although Sam declared that he had paid liberally to have it put in good order, and there was general interest when Sam rose to make his statement before the selectmen. "I'd just like to say one thing," he drawled, heedless of the fact that he had interrupted an indignant neighbor. "I don't want to make any fuss, but I'd just like to ask this honorable board of highwaymen—" That was as far as he could get. A roar of laughter swept over the town meeting and showed its effects in the red faces of the "highwaymen."—Youth's Companion.

A Confusion of Ideas.

Sir Henry Howorth, who was formerly a member of parliament, is a writer of mark, certainly of research, for his "History of the Mongols" took many years of steady and arduous inquiry. A good story Sir Henry tells against himself in regard to this work. One evening, while taking in to dinner a lady who had been lightly primed as to his great subject, there was a strange conversation.

"I understand, Sir Henry," the lady said, "that you are fond of dogs; so am I!"

"Dogs, madam," was the reply. "I really must plead guiltless; I know nothing at all of them."

"Indeed! And they told me you had written a famous history of mongrels."—Yorkshire (England) Post.

MR. DUMONT'S CRITICISM OF THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Explains State of Affairs Which Board of Estimate Brought to Light.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

SAYS BOARD MADE NO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS IN PAST YEARS.

City is Not Compelled to Turn Over Full Amount of School Taxes Until They Have Been Collected—Some Facts and Figures.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The remarks made by me at the special meeting of the Common Council, April 29, in explanation of the action of the Council's representatives in agreeing to the amount of $62 500 as the city's portion of the school tax, being an increase of $9 000 over last year, has brought out some comments from two members of the Board of Education.

The published reports of my remarks are not entirely correct but I am not responsible for that.

The Board of Education presented to the Board of Estimate a statement calling far a city school tax levy for the year of $69,749, an increase of about $16,500 over last year, which amount was reduced and agreed to unanimously to $62,500, an increase of about $9 000 over last year. The reason the members of the Council agreed to this large increase was, an official communication from the State Board to the effect that a special appropriation by the Legislature out of corporation tax receipts (Plainfield's proportion estimated $7,000 to $7,500), would reduce the levy for State school tax to that extent.

At the meeting of the Board of Estimate, held in June 1900 it was brought out that the treasurer had borrowed money in anticipation of Martin Act taxes collected but not distributed but the amount of the borrowings against delinquent taxes was not stated and neither the Mayor nor members of the Council knew the amount.

The statement presented at that meeting was in substance as follows:

For year September 1, 1900, to September 1, 1901, all estimated expenditures		$83,462
Less State school tax about	$21,500
Tuition, non-residents	1,500
Taxes	7,000
		$53,662

These figures from memory are nearly correct.

Two months later, or Sept. 1, 1900, the board's annual statement shows that nearly all the delinquent taxes had been mortgaged by issue of notes against same, and there was no free tax asset of $7,000. So the estimate presented to us was incorrect to that extent at least.

If the Board of Education had not given a statement in their last annual report the Common Council would certainly have asked for it.

Go back to the annual report of the board for the year ending Aug. 1, 1899. No statement of assets and liabilities will be found in that report.

Will any member of the Board of Education say that they were not borrowing against delinquent taxes at the end of that year? All previous annual reports that I have at hand to examine are similar in this respect, no statement of assets and liabilities. This condition must have existed for several years. It could not grow in one or two. The taxpayers did not know it.

As long as the State appropriations from corporation tax receipts continue, the rate of taxes for school purposes (State and city) ought not to increase much, if any, but this State appropriation is not expected to continue beyond two years, while the Board of Education's demands are likely to continue at present rate, and according to statements of the last four years are likely to increase $3,000 to $4,000 each year.

Expenditure for year ending August 31, 1899	$75,048
1901	83,462
1902	*85,099
*Reduced from $91,099.
Salaries, supt. teachers, 1899	$44,174
1900	47,754
1901	48,600
1902	52,160

Salaries, etc., increased $8,000 in four years and $3,500 in one year, while the difference between the estimated expenditures this year and last is only about $1,600 increase, there is no asset for taxes as against $7,000 last year.

Under the new school act the Board of Education can agree to recommend to extent of 75-100 of 1 per cent. of property valuation, (under the old law the limit this year would probably be 68½-100 of 1 per cent.,) and the Common

CHURCH CHOSEN FOR GRADUATION EXERCISES

Plainfield High School Commencement to be Held in First Baptist Church.

DR. WINSHIP TO SPEAK.

OTHER BUSINESS DONE AT MEETING OF BOARD OF EDUCATION.

School Tax Will Probably by 51 Cents on $100—Exhibit Sent to Pan-American Exposition—No More School Census Takers Needed.

For the first time in seventeen years, Plainfield's High School commencement, next June, will be held in a church difice. This was decided upon by the Board of Education at the regular monthly meeting held last evening. The closing of Music Hall necessitated some action being taken in the matter and on motion of Dr. Probasco, the First Baptist church was selected at a rental of $50. This includes the erection and removal of the special platform. The church was selected in preference to several others mentioned in view of the fact that it has the largest seating capacity and is more conveniently located than any other in the city.

It was also decided that the commencement be held Thursday evening, June 20. The speaker of the occasion will be Dr. A. E. Winship, of Boston. He is editor of the New England Journal of Education and a speaker of much merit. The remaining details of the occasion were then left to the following committee: Police, Abbott; printing, Lounsbury; music and ushers, F. B. Clark, clerk to the board.

The Board of School Estimate reported that the amount settled upon for the current year's expenses was $52,250, exclusive of the apportioned State and county tax. This will probably make the tax rate for schools fifty-one cents on every $100 of real and personal property. The report was approved and accepted.

In addition to these matters the remainder of the business transacted was of a routine nature. The tax collector reported $1,729.90 received and deposited with the custodian of school moneys The latter's report stated that with this amount added to the balance, the total receipts for the month had been $8,271.18. The disbursements were $7,871 40, leaving a balance of $399.78, of which $4.11 was in the Martin act account and the remainder in the general fund. There are notes outstanding to the amount of $8,889.95. According to the medical inspector's report, seventy-eight pupils had been examined during the month.

Superintendent Maxson reported that he had sent five hundred sheets of specimen work to Trenton as the city's exhibit at the Pan-American exhibition. In return he had received a letter from the officials stating that all were satisfactory and would be sent to Buffalo.

A communication was received from W. T. Newman, applying for the appointment as census enumerator. As under the new school law, the State tax is now apportioned by the school attendance, the services of an enumerator will in the future be dispensed with. Mr. Newman will be notified of this fact.

A communication from the street committee of the Common Council, requesting the board's consent to the macadamizing of Berckman and West Sixth streets, was laid on the table depending action of the property owners on the streets named. On motion of Mr. Abbott a vote of thanks was extended the trustees of the Seventh-Day Baptist church for the use of the church for the recent High School musicale.

The matter of appointing teachers for the coming year was then brought up and on motion was referred to the proper committee. No other business coming before the board, adjournment was taken.

Graduated With Honors.

L. J. Gerold has just been graduated with honors from the Baltimore Medical College, and as soon as he passes the State examination he will begin practice in New Jersey. For the present Mr. and Mrs. Gerold are living with Mrs. E. C. Morse, of Jackson avenue.

Invitations for Lectures.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. Reuben Knox for a lecture to be given at her home on Washington avenue by Mrs. Julia Keese Colles, of Morristown, Thursday afternoon, May 9. The subject of the lecture is "The Art of Conversation."

WILLIE GLEASON IN COURT.

SENT TO ELIZABETH FOR TEN DAYS IN JAIL.

Will be Transferred to Reform School—Judge's Leniency is Ended Now And Willie Must Behave.

Three previous visits to the city jail and subsequent reprimands by City Judge Runyon failed to curb Willie Gleason's wayward tendencies and he again appeared in court, a prisoner, this morning. The youthful offender was so small, His Honor was barely able to see the top of his head as he stood pleading before the desk.

His entreaties for leniency and tearful promises to be good failed to arouse the customary sympathy and much to Willie's chagrin, he was given ten days at Elizabeth as a matter of form until papers could be made out for his removal to the State reform school at Jamesburg.

The charge against the boy was made by his uncle, Fred Wharton, of West Sixth street, who after repeated attempts found it impossible to control him. He persisted in staying away from home and getting into mischief with older lads until his relatives could stand it no longer.

FINE RECORD.

Reports Received and Officers Elected at Meeting of Ladies Christian Work Society of Trinity Church.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church held its annual election of officers for the ensuing year in the lecture room yesterday afternoon.

The secretary's report, read by Mrs. T. R. VanZandt, showed that the organization has just closed a very prosperous year and has accomplished much good work. Mrs. Robert Clark's annual report as treasurer likewise proved that the finances are in good shape and the organization is flourishing in this respect.

It was decided to hold a strawberry festival early in June. The society's share towards the contributions to defray the expense of the new piano for the lecture room was ordered to be paid.

At the election the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. E. A. Parse; first vice president, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, re-elected; second vice-president, Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle; secretary, Mrs. T. R. VanZandt, re-elected; treasurer, Mrs. Robert Clark, re-elected.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended the retiring president, Mrs. A. M. Gillem.

CHOSE OFFICERS.

Annual Meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club Held Yesterday Afternoon.

The annual meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club was held yesterday afternoon. The election of officers and the reports of the secretary and treasurer took up all of the time. The secretary, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, gave a most interesting report of the past year's work, showing that the various meetings held were of deep interest and profit to all. She also reported the membership to be in a flourishing condition. The report of the treasurer, Miss Florence Tweedy, showed that that the club was in an excellent condition financially and after all bills are paid there is left a good balance on hand.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Edwin W. Conklin; vice presidents, Mrs. Israel C. Pierson, Mrs. William H. Sterling, Mrs. Edward C. Perkins; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles A. Reed; corresponding secretary, Miss Harriet R. Shreve; treasurer, Miss Florence Tweedy.

HOPE CHAPEL SOCIAL.

Evening Passed Pleasantly for Endeavors and Their Friends Last Evening.

The members of the Christian Endeavor Society of Hope chapel and their friends from the Sunday-school, enjoyed a pleasant social in the chapel last evening. The attendance was very large. Games, music and other entertaining features delightfully blended, made several hours pass very quickly. Refreshments were served at the close and during their disposal, a social time was had.

The committee in charge consisted of Miss Ella Edmunds, chairman, Miss Belle Slorah, Miss Carrie Konzert, Miss Laura Hangliter, Miss Gray and Miss Tripney.

Royal Arcanumites Gathered.

A VETERAN BICYCLIST RODE TO HIS DEATH.

Peter Miller Met Almost Instant Death In Collision With a Wagon.

EARLY THIS MORNING.

FAILED TO UNDERSTAND THAT APPROACHING VEHICLE WAS TO TURN.

Point of Shaft Struck Wheelman in the Chest—Broken Ribs Punctured His Lung—Wagon Was Driven by Peter Blaich, Baker.

Peter Miller, of Cottage place, met with almost instant death at an early hour this morning, by colliding with a wagon driven by Peter Blaich, of Regent street. The accident occurred at the corner of Madison avenue and Second street as Miller was riding his wheel to the Pond Tool Works where he was employed. The point of one of the shafts struck him on the right side of the chest. Several ribs were broken and one of them pierced the the lung. Bystanders picked up the lifeless form and summoned the ambulance. Not knowing the man was dead, the body was first taken to the residence of Dr. Long on Park avenue. The man had evidently died within a few minutes after being struck.

According to the statements of eye witnesses, Blaich, who sells bread on commission for John Wirth, was leisurely driving east on West Second street, intending to turn up Madison avenue to Front street. Miller evidently thought he was going to keep straight up Second street and attempted to pass to the right, without slackening his speed. Blaich saw him and tried to swerve his horse but it was too late. The next instant the crash followed and the man fell without a groan. The point of the shaft had struck the chest, crushing the bones and forcing them into the lung.

At first appearances, it seemed as though Miller was not badly injured as there were no other marks about his person and the real injury was not seen. Blaich assisted in caring for him until the ambulance arrived and then continued about his route, not knowing the man was dead. He was afterward informed of the fact and immediately went to police headquarters and surrendered himself. He was released on his own recognizance pending the coroner's inquest.

The dead man was forty-six years old and leaves a wife and four children, the eldest of whom is Mrs. George Bowers, who lives on West Second street within half a block of where the accident occurred. The other three children live at home.

The family resided in this city for fifteen years. Miller was employed for many years on the railroad but of late has been an employe at Pond's. He has long been an enthusiastic cyclist.

The body was taken to Cole's undertaking parlors where County Physician Westcott will hold an inquest.

WRECKED COUPE.

Carriage Belonging to W. W. Howland Demolished in Runaway.

A handsome coupe belonging to W. W. Howland, of Rockview avenue, was completely demolished in a runaway this morning.

The coupe, drawn by two horses, was standing in front of W. J. Conroy's carriage repair shop on Somerset street before the runaway occurred. Lewis Booker, the coachman, was unfastening the traces when the balky actions of one of the animals frightened an employe of Mr. Conroy's, who was holding the horses. They dashed down Linden avenue and at the intersection of Sycamore avenue collided with a post and water plug.

The coupe is a total wreck. Both the animals escaped uninjured.

Distinguished Guest.

John Harsen Rhodes, president of the Greenwich National Bank, of New York, was the guest Saturday and Sunday of Evarts Tracy, of 115 Hillside avenue. He visited the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course and expressed much admiration concerning it.

Phonograph Service.

Prof. Pangborn will give a phonograph service Thursday evening in the Salvation Army Hall for the benefit of the Sunday-school. Children are especially invited.

Organist at Holy Cross.

Miss Daisy Zerbe, assistant organist of Holy Trinity church, New York, played the organ at the services of the Church of the Holy Cross Sunday.

DEFEATED TROLLEY'S MAN.

Election of Town Commissioners at Somerville Saw a Lively Contest Over One Man.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, May 7.—The election for Town Commissioners took place yesterday. The candidates nominated at Saturday night's meeting were all elected, with the exception of R. H. Layton, who was defeated by Charles A. Houston by twenty-two votes.

Houston was a member of the board last year, but he stirred up the trolley company to such an extent that they took a hand in the nominations and prevented his renomination. Houston's friends then had some tickets printed with his name on in place of Layton's and succeeded in getting enough of them polled to elect him.

There were 446 votes cast, the result being as follows: C. L. Voorhees 430; James J. Bergen 408; William H. Taylor 423; John Gernert 431; George V. Vanderveer 437; John Hardgrove 434; Charles A. Houston 237; R. H. Layton 215. The appropriations for lights, sewers and police received 326 votes.

READY FOR BAYONNE TRIP.

PLANS ANNOUNCED AT MEETING OF EXEMPT FIREMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Three New Men Added to Membership—Former President Saltzman Was Present and Spoke.

The admission of three new members was the most important business transacted by the Exempt Firemen's Association at its meeting last evening.

William Wooden, an exempt member of the Gazelle Engine Company; E. J. McCann, an exempt member of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, and Frederick Hennis, an exempt fireman formerly of Westfield, were the three men admitted to the organization.

The committee on arrangements for the Bayonne trip reported that everything was in readiness excepting that as yet no music had been engaged for the occasion. Communication has been had with several bands, but the committee was unable to choose between them. The committee was instructed to select the music. According to arrangements a special train will convey the Exempts to and from Bayonne on May 15. The train will leave here at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and will return at 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

Auguste Saltzman, who has recently been chosen as the United States delegate to the International Convention of Firemen at Berlin, was present at the meeting. Mr. Saltzman made a short address in which he referred to the high honor bestowed upon him Coming as it does to a former chief of the Plainfield fire department and a former president of the Exempt Association, he felt doubly proud of the distinction.

In the absence of the president, L. E. Barkalew, the chair was occupied during the meeting by Vice-President J. C. Blinn.

LIVE WIRE LOOSE.

Stopped Traffic on West Fourth Street and Caused Considerable Excitement Last Night.

Trolley traffic on West Fourth street came to a sudden standstill at 10 o'clock last night owing to a break in the circuit. At that time the overhead wire suddenly snapped just as a car was passing beneath. One end of the writhing wire struck the front vestibule, breaking one of the glasses. The motorman narrowly escaped being shocked.

The repair crew was immediately summoned but it was after midnight before any cars were able to proceed over the line.

PASSED EXAMINATIONS.

William Gale Has Passed Tests Required by State Board of Registry.

William Gale, the new assistant prescription clerk in John P. Powers' pharmacy, successfully passed the examination required by the New Jersey State Board of Pharmacy. The examination took place at Trenton last week and Mr. Gale experienced no difficulty in answering the examining tests.

He is a graduate of the pharmaceutical department of the University of Buffalo and passed the examination in that state some years ago.

Will Elect a Captain.

A meeting of Company K will be held at Washington Hall tomorrow evening for the purpose of electing a captain and other vacancies in the line of commissioned officers. Major G. V. Packer has been detailed by Col. Gilmore to take charge. All members are requested to meet at 7:30 sharp.

WATER COMPANY MAKES ITS FORMAL DEFENCE.

A Communication From Its President, Frank Bergen, Received by Common Council.

LOTS OF OTHER BUSINESS.

APPROPRIATION FOR CITY SCHOOLS WAS MADE BY ORDINANCE.

Two New Firemen Appointed—Detective McCarthy Made Truant Officer—Lots of Objections to Dog Tax—Rubber Tires For Chemical Engine.

Out of the great batch of business which came up before the Common Council at its regular meeting last night, the most important item was a communication from Frank Bergen, president of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. The communication was presented by the street committee to which had been referred the question of the municipal ownership of the water works as the result of inquiry into the position of the company.

It set forth at much length the position of the company regarding the city and explained in detail about the much talked of rates. It gave comparisons in rates between Plainfield and other cities of a similar size, and in general gave a history in a comprehensive and complete manner of the company from its beginning to the present time. The communication will appear in a later issue of The Daily Press. It was ordered published by the Council at the request of President Dumont, who believes that it refutes many exaggerated statements heretofore made concerning Plainfield's water supply.

In the routine order of business the evening was mostly occupied in receiving petitions and communications. Collector F. H. Smith reported that during April, 124 tax warrants were issued for the collection of delinquent taxes. There were seventy-eight warrants returned and $297.02 collected. Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of eighteen permits, while Street Commissioner Gavett reported the granting of twenty-one sewer permits.

E. T. Hand, of Raymond avenue, protested against the taxation of two dogs, which he does not own. He stated that he killed the dogs in 1895 to avoid taxation. A similar protest was received from M. A. Ferguson, of 218 Kensington avenue. She was taxed for a dog in 1896, but the animal died the year before that. The matter was referred to the finance committee with instructions to learn if the dog died on the date mentioned.

At the request of the Plainfield Real Estate Company the Council remitted $20.39 which amount was paid twice on lots 965 and 975 West Fifth street. Because Byron E Young, of 337 Watchung avenue, never owned a dog, the Council voted to remit a dog tax for 1900. In response to the usual request the Council voted an appropriation of $100 to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., to assist in the proper observance of Memorial Day. O. Hermance and others petitioned to have Woodland avenue, between South and LaGrande avenues, repaired. Mr. vanHerwerden stated that the work had been under consideration and would soon be attended to.

Two petitions, containing thirty-seven names, asked the Council to establish a municipal water plant. These were referred to the street committee. The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company asked for permission to place conduits underground in Somerset street, between Front street and Green brook; Watchung avenue, from Ninth street to Hillside avenue; Hillside avenue between Watchung and Prospect. The request was granted.

The Board of Education asked the Council to appoint one or more policemen, in accordance with the State laws, to act as truant officer. Mayor Jenkins appointed Patrolman Florence S. McCarthy to that position and he was confirmed.

A communication was received from V. W. Nash in which he offered to pay $26 for curbing a strip of land on Park avenue near the Park Avenue Hotel. He said that there is a legal question concerning to setting of this curb, and to settle all differences he asked the city to accept the amount specified. It was accepted and Mr. Nash thereby released from all claim.

Because Wm. Patterson does not own any personal property a $200 personal tax was ordered erased from his tax bill. W. R. Codington, as counsel

NEW CANAL TREATY.

Draft of the Document In British Embassador's Hands.

LONDON, May 7.—The all absorbing topic in diplomatic circles during yesterday afternoon was a report that a new Nicaragua canal treaty between England and the United States had been prepared. This report gained credence as the day wore on, and in the evening it was officially announced to the representative of a well known press agency that the report was correct.

It was further stated that the draft of the new treaty had been received by Lord Pauncefote, the British embassador in Washington, it having been handed to him by Secretary Hay. The treaty, it is announced, advises neutrality.

Only a Memorandum.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—It is learned from an authoritative source that before Secretary Hay left here for the west he had several conferences with Lord Pauncefote relative to the basis for another isthmian canal treaty and that an unofficial written memorandum also was submitted to Lord Pauncefote on the subject. The embassador has made known the general results of these conversations and of the memorandum to the authorities in London, and it is doubtless to this that allusion is made in the London dispatches. It is said, however, that the negotiations are so tentative and informal that they are not regarded as an official exchange of propositions. What they embody is not made known here, though it is understood they are chiefly an expression of the views held by United States senators as to the essential features which should be included in a treaty. While this is not a proffer of a treaty, it conveys to the British authorities what is considered essential by the senators who control the ratification of any treaty which will be made.

NEW MEXICO GREETS

President Welcomed by Aspirant For Statehood.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM AT EL PASO.

Americans and Mexicans Vie With Each Other In Making McKinley's Stay In the Border Town Enjoyable.

DEMING, N. M., May 7.—Shortly after leaving El Paso the train crossed the line into New Mexico and ran through the grazing section of the territory. It was a hot and dusty ride. The first stop in the territory was made at Deming, where the president was welcomed by Governor Otero and his staff. There was a big crowd and a band at the station, and the president was given a warm greeting.

W. M. Berger, president of the New Mexico Press association, had met the party at El Paso and accompanied the train across the territory. The address of welcome at Deming was largely devoted to New Mexico's claim for statehood. A broad banner above the train read, "New Mexico Demands Statehood."

The reception to the president at El Paso was not only one of great enthusiasm, but it had the singular feature of being international in character. The cordiality of the distinguished Mexican officers did not end with their formal call on Mr. McKinley Sunday, when they presented warm greetings from President Diaz. They rode in the procession of carriages through the city yesterday, joining heartily with the mayor and citizens of El Paso in honoring the president of the United States.

From the time that President McKinley's special train rolled into the El Paso station until it left for New Mexico and Arizona it seemed as if the honors of entertainment at this border town were almost equally divided between the Americans and the Mexicans.

The carriage drive through the principal streets of the city began at 9 o'clock (local time). They have four standards of time in El Paso. At the head of the procession was the president's carriage, drawn by four coal black Texas horses and escorted by various bands and military and civic organizations that extended for nearly a mile along the line of march.

There was a Mexican military band ordered here for this occasion by the governor of Chihuahua, a Republican marching club, a company of Indians in full headdress and war paint, also from the Mexican side of the border; a hundred or more cowpunchers from the plains on their tough little ponies, a company of the Texas national guard and numerous other organizations.

The town turned out its whole population. The cheering was constant all along the line, and the cowpunchers in the parade gave vent to their enthusiasm with tremendous yells which were echoed and re-echoed from the crowd on the streets, in the windows and on the tops of buildings. The carriage drive was interrupted at the principal square in the center of the city, where a stand had been erected, and the president addressed a cheering cosmopolitan multitude.

At the conclusion of the addresses the party, including the Mexican officials, went for a drive. The president expressed a desire to take a look over into Mexico and was driven down to the international bridge. There, at the office of the American customs office, he alighted and chatted for some time with those around him. The old church of Guadaloupe, more than 300 years old; the Spanish prison and other interesting buildings in Juarez were pointed out to him. From the bridge he could plainly see the Sierra Madre mountains, 60 miles to the southward. President Harrison in 1891 went half way across the bridge, but President McKinley did not so much as set foot upon the structure. On the way back to the city the party stopped and cheered the Mexican consulate.

Cornwalls at Melbourne.

MELBOURNE, May 7.—There was a picturesque scene at parliament house when the procession of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, accompanied by Lord Hopetoun, the governor general; the state and federal ministers and the guard of honor arrived there at a quarter past 3 yesterday afternoon. Assembled on the steps of the building were the foreign ministers, the representatives of the colonies, including William N. Mulock, the Canadian postmaster general; the American and other consuls, the officers of the visiting warships and a host of other prominent persons. The royal party reached the government house at 4 o'clock. Here there was the scene of the greatest enthusiasm. A salute was fired, and the royal standard was hoisted. The weather was perfect, and it is believed that a crowd numbering 300,000 persons witnessed the procession. Last night the city and harbor were ablaze with illuminations of a most elaborate description.

Valet Jones Starving.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Charles F. Jones, formerly valet of William Rice and the important witness in the coming Patrick murder trial, is seriously ill. For five days he has declined all food. He is so weak that he will probably be removed from the house of detention to Bellevue hospital. In case of Jones' death his confession involving Patrick would be valueless as evidence, and the chance of convicting Patrick would be practically gone. Jones once cut his throat with a knife, furnished, he said, by Patrick, and there is a suspicion that he is now attempting to kill himself by starvation.

The Season's Seal Catch.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 7.—The season's seal fishery came to a close with the arrival at this port of the sealer Virginia Lake. The total catch was 350,000 seals, valued at $600,000. There was not a single fatality or serious accident among the 5,000 men engaged, and only one vessel, the Hope, was lost.

German Shoots a Russian.

TIEN-TSIN, May 7.—The Russian lieutenant Telekovsky, from the gunboat Bobr, was shot dead by a German soldier during a fracas on the Taku road. The German fired in self defense, Lieutenant Telekovsky having attacked him with his dirk.

A Compliment to Milner.

CAPE TOWN, May 7.—A complimentary address signed by 10,000 persons was presented to Sir Alfred Milner at a banquet here last night.

SAMAR MUST YIELD.

General Hughes Sent to Effect Pacification.

MORE FILIPINOS TO BE SET FREE.

One Thousand Prisoners to Be Liberated to Celebrate the Surrender of General Tinio—Eight Murderers Sentenced.

MANILA, May 7.—The island of Samar, one of the Visayan group, has been transferred from the department commanded by General Wade to that commanded by General Hughes. General Hughes has been ordered personally to Samar, and if he is unsuccessful in negotiating the surrender of the insurgent general Lukban the force of American troops in Samar will be largely increased, and a vigorous offensive campaign will be inaugurated.

The report of Colonel Charles R. Greenleaf, head of the medical department in the Philippines, which has just been forwarded to Washington, shows the percentage of sick among the troops in the islands to be only 5 2-3. This is less than the usual percentage, which in the Philippines has formerly been from 8 to 13.

The military authorities have prepared a schedule and forwarded the same to Washington, covering the sailing dates of the ten regiments of volunteers still in the archipelago. Unless unforeseen delays arise the last of these regiments will reach home before June 30.

The commission is preparing amendments to the form of provincial government which are a direct result of their experiences during their recent visit to the provinces.

The liberation and transportation of the 1,000 Filipinos set free by General MacArthur to signalize the issuance of Aguinaldo's proclamation have been nearly completed. The liberation of another thousand prisoners to celebrate General Tinio's surrender will begin this week.

The prevalence of lawlessness in isolated localities is well illustrated by the investigations of a military commission under Lieutenant Colonel Howze of the Thirty-fourth volunteer infantry, which has sentenced eight members of the Sondatahan society, who were guilty of the murders of 30 men and women, to suffer the death penalty on May 17.

General Sumner has returned with his column of 900 men which proceeded against the rebels in central and eastern Luzon. He struck the camp of the outlaw general Cailles three times, burned his outfit and scattered his forces to the mountains.

Speaker Henderson's Desk Searched.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Some time Sunday or Sunday night Speaker Henderson's private room at the capitol was broken into and the desks and boxes rummaged. Whether the object of the search was attained is not known. A great many documents and papers were displaced and scattered about, and afterward an attempt seems to have been made to break into the room of the ways and means committee, a few steps away. The capitol police are said to have no clew. There are some articles of value in the room, but none of these was taken. Among the historic relics stored there is the silver ink tray which has been used by speakers of the house since the time of Henry Clay.

The Eastman Trial.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 7.—Yesterday, the thirteenth day of the Eastman murder trial, was spent by the defense in piling up additional evidence to support the contention that relations between the defendant and the victim of the shooting, Richard H. Grogan, Jr., were at all times pleasant. No mention was made of rim fire or center fire bullets or revolvers. The incidents of the fatal day were scarcely touched upon. The evidence showed that the families were at all times congenial, that the two men enjoyed many athletic sports, boxed, jumped and played ball and frequently indulged in checkers together. But the sport which mostly took their fancy was shooting at a mark.

Attempted Hazing Results Fatally.

DAVENPORT, Ia., May 7.—Emil Mohr and Charles Reis were killed while pretending to hang August Blunck on a pulley rope outside the Independent Malting company's building. Mohr and Reis, with Gus Siems, were teasing Blunck and wound up by tying the rope about his wrist with the avowed intention of hanging him. The strain on the rope caused the fastenings 60 feet above to give way. An iron pulley struck Reis on the head, crushing it. A falling scantling brained Mohr. Blunck was slightly injured.

Mosquitoes Kill Cattle.

NORFOLK, May 7.—Mosquitoes, never before known to arrive so soon, have appeared on Knotts island, 40 miles south of Norfolk, in numbers unprecedented even for midsummer. Horses and cattle are dying from their poisonous bites, and the situation has become alarming to the residents, who are compelled to wear head nets and keep fully clothed, notwithstanding oppressively hot weather.

A Bull Stock Market.

NEW YORK, May 7.—There was a renewal of the bull spirit in the stock market yesterday, and sharp advances were scored on several issues. Northern Pacific was the feature of the day. It opened 4 points above Saturday's closing and then shot up to 133. It closed at 127½, making a gain for the day of 17½ points, with sales of 371,800 shares.

Another Niagara Power Plant.

NIAGARA FALLS, May 7.—The Niagara Falls Power company of this city will at once begin the construction of a power plant on the Canadian side of the river. The first development will be 25,000 electrical horsepower. This will be enlarged until a capacity of 100,000 horsepower is reached.

Boer Force Breaking Up.

KLERKSDORP, Transvaal Colony, May 7.—General Delarey's force of 4,000 Boers, which has been in the hills around Hartebeestfontein, is splitting up. Some of the men are moving to the southwest, while others are going north. Delarey himself is moving south.

Largest Man Dead.

SYRACUSE, May 7.—A Clyde special says that Frank Reynolds, the largest man in western New York, is dead at the county house, aged 42 years. He was 6 feet 2 inches in height and weighed 403 pounds.

CONSTITUTION LAUNCHED.

New Cup Defender Successfully Launched.

BRISTOL, R. I., May 7.—With her hull gayly decorated with flags and her deck well filled with sailors, the yacht Constitution was christened last evening by Mrs. W. Butler Duncan, who broke the traditional bottle of wine on her glistening bow just as she started slowly down the ways into the sea.

A platform had been rigged under the bow of the boat, and on this Mrs. Duncan stood when the gong for the starting was sounded. Beside her on the platform was her husband, the manager of the new boat, but all the rest of the party stood a little distance off.

At the sound of the gong Mrs. Duncan dashed a bottle of champagne against the yacht's bow, and as the wine gushed in sparkling foam on the prow the sleek racer acquired motion and slowly began her descent into the water. With the breaking of the bottle Mrs. Duncan in a clear voice said, "I christen thee Constitution."

The scene was a brilliant one as the Constitution was slowly lowered into the water, the cheering from the boats outside being loud and vigorous, while the brilliant searchlight from the steam yacht Colonia just outside the dock illuminated the stern of the Constitution in a brilliant manner. Rockets and other fireworks added not a little to the gayety of the occasion.

Mrs. Duncan was dressed in a dark yachting costume and gave the bottle a good hard crack.

A FATAL TRAIN WRECK.

Engineer Killed and Thirty Passengers Injured.

OTTUMWA, Ia., May 7.—Burlington passenger train No. 3 yesterday, while passing Thayer, a small town 18 miles east of Creston, struck an engine attached to a freight train which was endeavoring to get out of the way by backing on the side track and was derailed, killing Engineer S. D. Brown of Burlington and injuring 30 people, although the names of only 22 are obtainable. All but the two rear cars of the passenger train left the rails and rolled down a 20 foot embankment.

Thayer is situated in the bed of a deep ravine, through which the track is laid. A heavy train in order to make schedule time is compelled to use steam down one hill to reach the top of the other. Owing to the fact that both tracks for a great distance are heavily curved neither engineer could see the other train until within 200 feet of it. The engineer of the freight train heard the passenger train coming and made frantic endeavors to back the heavy train on the side track. He succeeded in getting all but his engine to a place of safety. On came the passenger train at the rate of 70 miles an hour. When within 200 feet of the point of collision, Engineer Brown saw the danger, threw the airbrake to the emergency notch, applied the sand and stuck to his engine in the grim endeavor to save the precious freight behind.

A Santiago Shooting.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, May 7.—Senor Corona, editor of the Cubano Libre, shot and slightly wounded Ricardo Miranda in the theater here last night. The Cubano Libre had published a statement accusing Miranda and two companions, who are all prominent Republicans, of indulging in drunken and disorderly conduct the previous night. The article called particular attention to the private character of Miranda and his friends. Miranda, accompanied by his companions, called at Corona's house during the day, but the latter refused to see them. They left a message that they would whip Corona on sight. Last night at the theater Miranda entered Corona's box and attempted to assault him with a cane. Corona quickly drew a revolver and shot Miranda above the ear, inflicting a painful but not dangerous wound. The attack is a result of the political feeling between the two Cuban factions, and considerable excitement has been aroused. All the participants in the affair are in jail.

The Shah's Illness Denied.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The Persian legation issues the following: "The telegram saying that his majesty the shah was dangerously ill and that there were disorders in Teheran, due to the newly imposed taxes, are denied by the Persian legation here. Recent telegrams received by the legation show that his majesty the shah is enjoying good health, except that he suffers now and then from the gout, to which he is subject. As to alleged disorders, there is none, and the country progresses under the paternal care of his majesty the shah."

Speculators In Peking.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Information has reached here to the effect that a number of speculators, including Americans, have been trying to secure options on and obtain possession of nearly all the land for legation purposes in the Peking compound. The ministers have taken notice of this attempt at what they regard as sharp practice and have issued a rule forbidding any exchange of titles to property in the compound until the legation settlements are secured.

Severe Storm In Georgia.

SAVANNAH, May 7.—Specials from Burke and Emanuel counties report a heavy hailstorm. The hail remained on the ground at Adrian for several hours. The damage to truck farms and young cotton is considerable. Much of the cotton was just coming through the ground. The indications at present are that 75 per cent of the cotton is beaten to pieces.

Fireman Injured.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 7.—Fred Wagner, a fireman on the Ontario and Western railroad, was discovered unconscious and bleeding hanging out of the cab window when the train reached here. It is supposed he came into contact with the abutment of an overhead bridge while watching a hot pin on the driver.

Journeymen Bakers Winning.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Thirty-five boss bakers have signed union agreements, increasing the number of signers to 60. Five hundred of the 800 bakers on strike in Manhattan returned to work.

Fatally Burned.

ALBANY, May 7.—Mrs. McMurray, a woman 65 years of age, was fatally burned at her home in this city. She was burning rubbish in her yard, and her clothes caught fire. She will die.

COAL TAX ADOPTED.

House of Commons Votes a Shilling a Ton.

LONDON, May 7.—The house adopted the coal tax by a vote of 333 to 227.

Consequently the tax of a shilling a ton on export coal was adopted by a majority of 106. These figures apparently do not represent the feeling of the members of the house, but the government made the issue strictly a party one and secured the record attendance for this parliament and by vigorous efforts polled within a score of the normal majority.

The galleries were packed to overflowing. Fashionably dressed women glued their faces to the grill until nearly 1 o'clock, and the members of the house themselves were unable to find standing room, much less seats.

The principal figures during the last day of the discussion of the coal tax were chiefly within the Liberal ranks. Sir Edward Grey, Mr. H. H. Asquith, Mr. William Abraham (Liberal) and Mr. Charles Fenwick all assailed the tax eloquently, the last two speaking with no little pathos and a broad accent on behalf of the miners, in whose station of life they worked before coming to Westminster.

Perhaps the most interesting feature was the speech of Hon. Frederick Lambton, brother of the Earl of Durham, who, standing amid the Conservative members, denounced the government as "a pack of riotous hounds after a ewe lamb," by which he referred to the coal industry. He declared that the chancellor of the exchequer had represented the colliers as liars and forgers and maintained that they were "as honorable a set of men as ever sat on the government benches."

HOGG'S BIG COMPANY.

A $10,000,000 Texas Oil and Iron Organization.

AUSTIN, May 7.—Former Governor J. S. Hogg is promoting the organization of an oil and iron company which is to have a capital stock of $10,000,000 to $20,000,000. He has left for New York city, where several capitalists who are members of the company will sign the charter of the corporation. It will be taken out under the laws of Texas. Mr. Hogg declined to make public the names of the New York men who are interested with him in the enterprise. The company intends to establish large iron furnaces in the New Birmingham iron fields of Texas and will operate oil pipe lines from the Beaumont oil field to New Birmingham, a distance of probably 200 miles. It is asserted that a practical method of using oil for smelting the iron ore will be placed in operation.

The charters of 15 new oil companies with capital stock aggregating over $9,000,000 were filed in the secretary of state's office here yesterday. The largest of these was the New Dominion Oil and Pipe Line company of Beaumont, with a capital stock of $5,000,000. Its principal stockholder is J. L. Laprelle of St. Louis. It will build and operate oil pipe lines in the Beaumont field.

The Pan-American.

BUFFALO, May 7.—Yesterday's attendance at the Pan-American exposition grounds was the best of any day since the opening of the exposition. The weather was fine and warm, and there was a noticeable absence of wraps and light overcoats which have been a necessity nearly every day for a week. Superintendent Townsend, who has charge of the installation of exhibits, made a tour of all the buildings in the grounds to get his bearings to enable him to see how much of that work still remained to be done. After a critical examination Mr. Townsend said that there was not the slightest doubt that everything would be practically completed by May 20, when the dedication ceremonies will be held.

Gun Works to Be Reorganized.

DERBY, Conn., May 7.—All the departments of the Driggs-Seabury Gun and Ammunition company will be temporarily shut down to take account of stock. The works are now running day and night. It is stated that the large government contracts which the company is now executing, together with new orders, has necessitated additional working capital and that a syndicate of bankers represented by Charles E. Williams of New York has undertaken the reorganization of the company, furnishing over $500,000 cash for increased working capital.

British War Losses.

LONDON, May 7.—The war office officially gives out the total number of deaths in the South African war at 714 officers and 14,264 men. Four officers and 314 men have been invalided home and subsequently died. Two thousand four hundred and ninety-three noncommissioned officers and men have left the service unfit for duty.

Woman Locks Up the Sheriff.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., May 7.—While attempting to replevin a valuable piano from the residence of Mrs. Anna Bassard, the sheriff, T. T. Ballard, was made a prisoner in a room by the woman and held under lock and key for some time.

Job Printers Strike.

UTICA, N. Y., May 7.—Thirty printers employed in job offices are on strike for an increase in wages. They have been receiving $12.50 per week and ask for $15. A compromise may be effected, but at present both sides are firm.

KILLED HIS PARENTS

Fearful Crime of a Prince Edward Island Man.

MOTHER CHOKED, FATHER DROWNED

Possession of Property the Motive. When Brought Face to Face With Justice, Young McLeod Takes His Own Life.

HALIFAX, May 7.—Three weeks ago Mrs. Donald McLeod was found dead on the kitchen floor in a farmhouse near Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, and the coroner's jury found evidence that she had been strangled to death. A year before her husband was found dead in a well.

With Mrs. McLeod lived a son Archibald, the only heir to the property now in this country. On Saturday Archibald was arrested on a charge of having murdered his mother, and there is a strong suspicion that it was he who drowned his father.

McLeod was to have appeared for trial in Charlottetown yesterday, but in the morning he was found dead in jail, having hanged himself with a towel. On Sunday night he was reading a Bible in prison and apparently was not greatly alarmed about the future.

Mrs. McLeod, his mother, had a life interest in the old homestead, and it is believed that the son was impatient to obtain the property.

R. D. McLeod, vice president of the Whitney Glass works, New York; Angus McLeod, one of Kansas City's leading merchants, and Malcolm McLeod, ex-mayor of Prince Albert, are brothers of the suicide.

Those Wonderful Blood Spots.

MILWAUKEE, May 7.—A Sentinel special from Marinette, Wis., says it is reported that several drops of fresh blood were to be found on the face of the famous "bleeding" picture of Menomonee. One of the priests drew some blood from his own veins and compared it with the substance on the glass. The two were identical. It is said that when some of the dried substance came in contact with the fresh blood from the priest's wrist it resolved itself into a shape that strongly resembled the face of the Saviour. On examination the red spots show that they are coagulated blood. Dr. Venega, one of the leading physicians of Menomonee, has declared so emphatically. The origin of the spots is shrouded in mystery.

Maryland Census Takers Indicted.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The director of the census has been notified that indictments had been returned to the federal court sitting in Baltimore in the cases of the men under arrest for census frauds in Maryland. There were two indictments each in the cases of the enumerators Abel, Bowles, Graves and Guyther and one in the case of Attorney Ching. The enumerators are charged with falsifying their returns and with conspiracy and Ching with conspiracy only. The court set the 27th inst. for the hearing of the cases. There are 3,565 items in the counts, and the papers in the cases weighed 48 pounds.

A Warship Construction Trust.

NEW YORK, May 7.—It is announced that a large combination will soon be formed for the construction of warships. According to report the concern will include several prominent manufacturing concerns of arms, armor plate, machinery, steel and shipbuilding plants. Incidentally the new company, when formed, will be a rival of the United States Steel corporation. It will have a capital of $50,000,000, not a cent of which will be water, the promoters say.

Freight Handlers Strike.

BOSTON, May 7.—A committee from Springfield, representing the freight handlers employed on the Boston and Albany railroad, held a conference yesterday with General Manager W. H. Barnes in connection with the demands of the men for an increase in wages from $1.50 to $1.75 a day. No agreement was reached, and as a result a telegram was sent to the union headquarters at Springfield instructing the men to strike. The order was obeyed.

A Dinner to the New Cardinal.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Embassador Cambon gave a dinner last night at the French embassy in honor of Cardinal Martinelli. Among the additional guests were Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Mgr. Marchatti, the papal delegate; Count Colarhicci, member of the papal guard; Mgr. Rooker and Justices White and McKenna of the supreme court.

Jacksonville's Loss Not Exaggerated.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The quartermaster general's department has received a dispatch from Captain Parsons, at Jacksonville, Fla., saying that he had arrived there with the hospital tents sent by the war department. He adds that the reports of the loss have not been exaggerated and that 15,000 people are homeless.

Comet Still Visible.

LIMA, Peru, May 7.—The bright comet which has been seen here for several nights is still visible and is the subject of much discussion among the naval astronomers and those at the observatory. The former are of the opinion that it is Vico's comet and the latter that it is Encke's or Brorsen's.

Cripple Does Well In Trade.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 7.—Cortland Coons, a lifelong cripple, having been born without legs, left here ten years ago. He had to borrow money to pay for his ticket. He has just returned on a visit with $12,000 which he had made in a candy store in Seattle. He walks on his hands.

Captive Balloon Breaks Away.

COLOGNE, May 7.—A military captive balloon with two men in the car ascended here during maneuvers Sunday afternoon. It broke loose in a gale, was soon lost to sight in the clouds and has not been seen since.

Another Carnegie Library.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., May 7.—Charlotte has complied with Mr. Carnegie's offer to give the city $20,000 for a library by voting an annual appropriation of $2,500 for the maintenance of the institution.

Mr. Bergen's Defence.

Now that the question of municipal ownership has assumed a prominent place in the public eye, there was considerable interest shown in the report of the street committee at the Common Council meeting last evening. It was to this committee that the Council had referred the question of the ownership of water works by the city of Plainfield. The committee has been considering the subject and has held a conference with the officials of the Plainfield Water Supply Company.

The report of the committee consisted of a communication from Frank Bergen, president of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. In it, Mr. Bergen made a defence of the water company, its methods and its rates. He further attempted to show by means of comparison that Plainfield, both as far as the city and the private consumers are concerned, was securing its water supply at a less cost than were other cities of the same size, whether furnished by a private corporation or where the water works were under municipal control.

There was also an explanation of why changes had been made in the bills of many of the patrons of the company. It was the same as was stated in The Daily Press at the time.

Although the communication was a lengthy one, the Councilmen wisely decided to have it published entire in the newspapers. It is doubtful, however, whether the advocates of municipal ownership will be satisfied with this defence. As far as the Council was concerned, there was no expression of opinion regarding it save that it contradicted many exaggerated statements made. In conclusion, Mr. Bergen expressed a willingness to confer with the committee if they so desired. It is probable that he will have an opportunity to do so.

The Daily Press has previously printed communications from two members of the Board of Education concerning the criticism of Councilman of J.B. Dumont as to the board's financial management. In another column will be found Mr. Dumont's ideas on the subject in full. Coming as it does over the signature of the President of the Common Council, the communication is bound to have considerable weight.

The first of the State conventions of any of the political parties will be held at Trenton today when the Prohibitionists of New Jersey will gather to select their candidate for governor. There is not the slightest chance of their candidate winning but they continue to nominate a ticket every year and maintain their party organization in the hope that some day they will be victorious.

According to the provisions of the State school law, yesterday was observed in all the schools in the State as Arbor Day. The day is made the occasion of impressing on the children the necessity of the preservation of the trees and the need of constantly adding to their number. Many of the schools took advantage of the day to plant a tree with appropriate ceremonies.

The Council is going to stop the decoration of the telephone, telegraph and trolley poles through the city. An ordinance to that effect has been introduced.

Every member of the Common Council was present at the meeting last night.

Council apparently has no option but to pass an ordinance to levy the amount so certified, if within the limit, and the Common Council has the power to increase the rate over 75-100 of 1 per cent.

The new law does not consider the taxpayer in the least, and his only remedy is to try to elect men to the board and Council who will try to keep down expenses.

As to the claim that the city is under obligations to pay over to the School Board January 5 each year the entire amount of levy, I do not admit it. The act plainly states that when the amount of the appropriation is determined by a Board of Estimate that the Common Council shall appropriate the amount so certified and it shall be assessed, levied and collected in the same manner as moneys appropriated for other purposes. In school districts where the amount of school tax is determined at any annual or special meeting of voters called for that purpose the amount so agreed upon shall be levied and collected. If not all collected by January 5 following, the collector shall pay over the full amount of the levy. It is a strained construction to make this part of the act apply to this city.

The new school act as amended provides that the Board of Education, or Common Council, or five per cent. of the voters may take action to have submitted to vote at any general or charter election to change the number of the Board of Education to nine. Under one provision they can be appointed by the Mayor and under another elected as now, the term to be three years instead of five. I am in favor of having this question submitted to a vote at the next election. I think the people are entitled to a larger representation and the possibility of an entire change in the Board once in two years instead of three, as now, is worthy of consideration.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel will meet this evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

—The house being erected on Grove street by Morris Abrams is now enclosed and the work is progressing rapidly.

—There will be a meeting of the Sons of Veterans this evening to take action concerning the observance of Memorial Day.

—"I have been suffering from Dyspepsia for the past twenty years and have been unable after trying all preparations and physicians to get any relief. After taking one bottle of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure I found relief and am now in better health than I have been for twenty years. I cannot praise Kodol Dyspepsia Cure too highly," thus writes Mrs. C. W. Roberts, North Creek, Ark. L. W. Randolph.

Election For Warren Engine Company.

Officers for the ensuing year will be elected by the Warren Engine Company at its annual meeting this evening. The yearly reports of those now holding office in the organization will be presented. It is expected that the committee having charge of the arrangements for the Bayonne trip will have some matters to report to the meeting.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence.)

Dunellen, May 7—Mrs. Martha Wilcox, wife of Frederick Wilcox, died at her home yesterday morning after a long illness from lung trouble. Her sickness extended over a period of two years. During the past six months it was known by the family that her death was likely to occur any moment. Mrs. Wilcox was in her forty-ninth year and has lived in the borough or vicinity, with the exception of a period at Westfield, all her life. She leaves four children, Frederick, Maud, Hudson and Margaret, all of whom live at home. The funeral services will be held from her late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. Interment will be at Hillside cemetery, Plainfield.

The first attempt at a baseball game in the borough this season will take place Saturday, when a team from the boys' class of the Presbyterian church, will meet a scrub team. The former will be captained by Will Dealaman, while Walter Craig will look after the scrub forces. The game will be played on the Lincoln avenue grounds.

Rev. N. J. Sproul, of the Presbyterian church, delivered an interesting missionary address in the Methodist church Sunday afternoon. It was greatly enjoyed by the large attendance.

The Board of Education will meet this evening in the Whittier school building In addition to routine matters the appointment of teachers for the ensuing year will be made.

Mrs. Walter Clawson spent yesterday in New York.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence)

New Market, May 8—At the meeting of the Piscataway Board of Education held last evening, the matter of closing the Raritan Landing school was brought up. It was decided to hold a special meeting May 14, at 2 o'clock and invite the residents of the vicinity to be present. The closing of the school and the method of transportation of the pupils to the Fieldville school, will then be publicly discussed. The only other business transacted was the payment of several bills.

Asa Bush is improving the appearance of his front yard by the addition of a new fence.

WELSH BROS.' SHOWS.

A Gladsome Day of Holiday Amusement in Store for Old and Young Alike.

The coming of Welsh Bros'. Big Railroad Shows and Trained Animal Exposition is being awaited with much interest by Plainfielders. The show is scheduled to appear here two days only, Wednesday and Thursday, May 15 and 16, afternoon and evening. Newly equipped throughout, doubly enlarged in all departments, the finest horses procurable, magnificent wardrobe, costly paraphernalia and a double company of all new faces are some of the features of this always excellent show, for this season. The $10,000 herd (fifteen in number) of performing Iceland and Shetland ponies presented by Prof. Charles E. Rice, their trainer, is a feature that will no doubt be received with great delight by young and old alike.

The Takezawa Royal Imperial Japanese Troupe, eight people, in many amazing Oriental acrobatic and ærial divertisements, is another crowning attraction. The ærialistic acts are all new and skillfully executed by the great Del Sabos troupe of French ærialists, Lee and Lenore and Herr Emil Schnorr. A first-class band and orchestra is another magnet that adds much life to this interesting arenic jubilee. The advertised free street parade will be given promptly at 11 o'clock on the morning of performance, followed on the show grounds by a series of free exhibitions.

It Saved His Leg.

for C. Chapot & Sons, offered to settle taxes owed the city by the firm for $100. The claim is $195, but, as the firm gave Mr. Codington a chattel mortgage sometime ago, it would appear that he has a first lien on the firm's property. If he decided to maintain his rights it is doubtful if the city would receive the tax. The Council decided to accept the amount offered. In a communication the Board of Health signified its willingness to accept the appropriation of $3,000 and turn over to the city all money received as fines and fees.

Mr. Corlell offered a resolution that two regular men be added to the fire department. Mayor Jenkins then appointed Frank Day and Griffin H. Freeman, service to commence July 1. The Mayor also appointed Daniel Sullivan and I. D. TenEyck as special policemen and they were confirmed.

Following the reading of the Collector's report, President Dumont took occasion to compliment Mr. Smith. He cited the fact that $3,000 in taxes for 1898 and $2,800 for 1899 had been collected, and said that he never remembered such an event before.

Mr. vanHerwerden offered a resolution transferring $1,500 from the general fund to the sewer improvement fund; $500 from the general fund to the fire fund and $300 from the general fund to the poor fund. Another resolution offered by the same member provided for the cancellation of certain assessments under the Martin Act, which were assessed in error.

Mr. Tolles moved that $100 be appropriated for the care of the City Park, as usual, and he offered a resolution that the Union County Board of Freeholders confer with the Somerset county members for the purpose of securing the erection of a suitable bridge over Green brook on Giraud avenue, the same to be the full width of the street. These were passed.

Mr. Corlell offered a resolution authorizing the fire and building committee to have rubber tires placed on the chemical engine at an expense not to exceed $300. A resolution by Mr. Buckle provided for a fine of $15 upon the conviction of any person or persons detected placing signs of any kind on telephone, telegraph or electric light poles. This was in the form of an amendment to an ordinance relating to peace and morals.

Mr. Gloak offered an amendment to an ordinance to license inns and taverns. It provided that a special hotel license be granted allowing the serving of liquors at regular meals between 6 a. m. and 11 p. m. For this privilege an additional sum of $100 will be asked and an extra $1 as clerk's fees. For the violations of the ordinance a fine of $100 or sixty days imprisonment may be imposed. The ordinance was adopted and ordered advertised.

Mr. VanHerwerden reported that it had been determined that the amount of money needed for school purposes for the current year, exclusive of the amounts apportioned by the county and state, is $62,250, to be levied, assessed and collected by the city the same as other money. He stated that this had been agreed to by the Board of School Estimate. He then offered an ordinance providing that $62,250 be appropriated for school purposes and that the same be collected the same as other money by the city. The ordinance was adopted on third reading and ordered advertised.

The ordinance changing from December to November, the time for the expiration of the collection of taxes, was adopted on third reading and ordered advertised.

After Mr. Mellick had complimented the street committee for its excellent work in securing street signs, which he considered a great improvement, the meeting adjourned. A special meeting will be held this month to take action concerning the enforcement of the Martin Act.

Ants, Cockroaches, Bed Bugs.

Mix, say, a 25c. box of "Rough on Rats" carefully with a pound or so of mashed boiled potatoes, or with a loaf of finely crumbled dampened bread, or two tin cups of fine powdered sugar, and place about their haunts, out of reach of children or pet animals. Even the hardier Black Cockroaches, Beetles, Wood or Water Bugs, in one or two applications will be completely annihilated. "Rough on Rats" is the only thing that will effectually and permanently annihilate Bed Bugs, and it stands unrivalled the world over for the prompt and effective extermination of Rats and Mice. 15 and 25 boxes at druggists.

When she had left the room, a strange, glorious light in her young face, he began again to walk the floor. He was tingling in every vein. His heart had begun to beat excitedly. He tried to think of Jeanne, the awful disease which was eating Blanche's life away, but he could only feel the pressure of his ward's hands, the warmth of her breath on his face, the depth of her great, trustful eyes.

"Great God! what can this mean?" he exclaimed.

He continued to walk back and forth across the room for half an hour, then he stopped suddenly and rang.

James obeyed the summons.

"Where is Mr. Talley?" he asked.

"In the study, at work, sir." James saluted in military fashion.

"That is all." The major went to the study, where he found his private secretary at work at a typewriter.

"Talley," he began, "you wanted to see me yesterday, I believe?"

"I did, major. I believe the amount you were keeping for me is exactly $5,000?"

"You are right, Talley; that is the amount, and, as I told you, you can get it at any time you wish. All you have to do is to draw the check. I will sign it."

"I have it ready now," said the young man, handing Goddard a slip of paper.

"I hope you are not thinking of leaving me?" said the major, as he signed the check.

"Not that, but I am flatly disobeying your injunctions, major. You have tried to keep me out of speculation, but the temptation is too strong to resist. This check covers all my savings, and yet I am going to put every cent of it into G. N. & W. railway stock."

"Oh, you can't be so foolhardy, Talley!"

"I am fortunately on the inside as to the future outcome of the stock," declared the young man. "I have a young friend, Hubert Johnson, the son of the Wall street Johnson. You know him by reputation. Well, this friend of mine happened to overhear a conversation in his father's office, which let him on to an important secret. His father and other big speculators have formed a syndicate to depress this stock. It has been going down like lightning for the last two months. It has reached its lowest notch. They are certainly buying all they can lay their hands on. I know I cannot be running any risk. I am in a sure deal. I tell you this because I hope that you will take a hand. I had rather see you make money than anyone, major, for you have been the best friend I have ever had."

"I shall not invest," answered Goddard; "but I wish you luck, Talley. I hope it will make you rich."

"Thank you major." The secretary put the check into his pocket.

"I have an important commission for you, Talley." The major cleared his throat, sat down at his desk, turned in his revolving chair and crossed his legs. A slight color had risen in his face. Talley had never seen him look so handsome.

"I am at your service, major."

"What if I were to tell you I am going to get married, Talley?"

The secretary stared. The carriage of his typewriting machine, with which he was toying, fell with a sharp click.

"Are you in earnest, Maj. Goddard?"

"Quite in earnest, Talley. I have decided to marry my ward."

"Miss Briscoe?" exclaimed Talley, his face suddenly falling.

"Yes, Miss Briscoe. And we have decided, under existing circumstances, that we will have the affair take place in as quiet a manner as possible. I want you to drive over to Rev. Mr. Strothers at once and see if we may come to his house to-morrow morning. If he consents, then I want you to attend to any other arrangements without delay."

The private secretary had turned quite pale. His eyes were expanded and fixed in a helpless stare on the face of his employer.

"Have you thought over this well, major?" he blurted out, suddenly.

"Why do you ask that?" asked Goddard, suspiciously.

"Pardon me," stammered Talley, "I only thought"—but it was not clear to Talley what he thought.

"I do not understand your—your question, Talley," insisted the major.

"You know Miss Briscoe is young," answered the secretary, "and—and she has been so upset over your recent bereavement that I was afraid that, through sympathy and vast interest in you as her father's friend and her benefactor, she might—"

"I see," broke in the major; "you think she may hastily take a step that might be regretted later, but you need not be afraid, Talley. The truth is, Blanche and I once thought of marrying before I met Mrs. Goddard. I think you need have no fears on that score."

"I did not know of that," said the private secretary, his face still set and white. "I beg your pardon. I shall carry out your instructions. I hope you can overlook my remark just now."

"Easily," said the major, "for it shows your interest in me and Blanche is more than skin deep."

When the major had left the room the young man lowered his head to his desk. He heard the major ring and order the horse and cart.

"God have mercy on me! What have I been allowing myself to think about?" he muttered. "I might have known there was something—behind that awful suffering of hers. I ought to have seen that she loved him!"

CHAPTER XIII.

During that night a light snow began to fall, and as the bridal party left the next morning to be driven to the house of Rev. Mr. Strothers a thin white carpet lay on the earth and fine feathery flakes continued to fall.

The servants had been apprised of the astonishing event and they gathered at the windows which look out upon the drive.

"A very sensible thing for 'em to do," said James. "She is the sort of mistress I want to work for. I should have left the other if she hadn't gone to the bottom of the Atlantic. I haven't lived with the aristocracy for ten years without knowing a sample when I see it. The good Lord has been kind to the major."

"I wish she had waited awhile, just for the looks o' the thing," said Katie, Blanche's favorite maid. "Then she could have had a swell wedding, plenty of presents, and—"

"And give you all her old clothes," sneered James, who was too fat to make use of the major's discarded apparel.

"I get everything I want anyway," was Katie's defense. "It is only because I think she deserves all that any rich young lady has that I object to this kind of a marriage; but if she is only happy, I won't complain."

These gossiping hirelings were at the windows when the returning carriage appeared in sight an hour later. The bride's beautiful face was flushed by the contact with the wind, and she had never looked so happy or moved with so much grace. Talley and Miss Dean had very serious faces as they came up the veranda side by side.

"Well, it is all over," said the major to his bride when they were alone in the luxurious company chamber, where a red fire glowed. He had never been such a mystery to himself as now. He felt as if he were drunken with delicious memories of their old courtship.

"Yes, I am your wife at last," she said, with a smile. "I am your wife, and I am going to make you happy. I feel it away down in my heart."

"You feel it," he repeated, as if in a dream, and he helped her to take off her cloak. He felt her warm breath on his face. He laid the cloak aside, then drew her into his arms and kissed her. "And so do I, dear girl. And so do I."

At that strange moment Jeanne Goddard and all her evil plans seemed as much removed from his life as if she had never entered it. It was as if the old life had come back to him—the life in which his love had for its object a creature so pure and undefiled that it lifted him up and opened his eyes to spiritual possibilities.

"I was at first afraid you would not consent so soon after—after her death," he said.

"I felt that it was my right to have you now," said Blanche, frankly. "She told me how she had deliberately beguiled you from me when she discovered that you loved me. The night before she sailed she confessed she had resorted to every trick and artifice within her power to make you cast me aside."

"She told you that?" the major exclaimed.

"Yes, and not only that, but she said she had some sort of presentiment that she was going to die abroad, and said if anything did happen to her she hoped I would marry you. Oh, I've tried to regret her death—to feel sorry for her at being taken away in the midst of such sins, but I cannot. She even told me—oh, I can't tell you what e'se she said. It makes me almost hate her memory."

"Please go on," said the major.

"She confessed that she was unhappy with you—that she wanted to get away from you—that she married you simply for your money."

"I suspected that," said the major, dreamily.

It seemed so wonderful to him that he could now calmly contemplate Jeanne's shallow faithlessness without the pangs such thoughts had always caused him. Was it because he really loved his ward and that he had never loved Jeanne—that his passion for her had been only a base infatuation which had already taken wings?

He could not answer these questions; he could only wonder at the strange exultation which was swelling in his breast—the boundless enthusiasm over the thought that he was loved by the beautiful young creature before him. He lost sight of the wrong he had done her. She had only a short while to live—that time, he told himself, should constitute his life and hers; beyond that brief period he could not reckon.

"You have suffered?" he heard himself murmuring.

MORE EVIDENCE.

It Is Coming In Rapidly In Plainfield.

Evidence on the following subject will prove of interest to every Plainfield reader. So many people go through the same experience daily. This public statement should be proof positive to every wavering doubter. Read it carefully.

Mr. Geo. S. McGinnis, of No. 212 Somerset street, foreman of R. H. McCullough's Sash and Door Mfg. Co., says: "I never was sick a day in my life until a pain struck me across my back and a lameness over the kidneys. I did not pay much attention to it at first, thinking it would soon pass away, but instead of this it grew worse. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills so highly recommended by those who had used them for such troubles that I went to L. W. Randolph's drug store and got a box. I used them according to instructions and felt somewhat relieved. Continuing the treatment, by the time I had finished the third box, the pain in my back and lameness disappeared."

A middle-aged lady residing in a Connecticut town believes that "truth is truth," and says of Ripans Tabules: "I have always shrunk from having my name used publicly, but truth is truth and should be told every time. I had some heart difficulty, a torpid liver, dyspepsia and constipation, and employed a great many different doctors, and each one said he could help me, but each one failed except for the time being. I suffered untold agonies for over twenty years. I would be feeling pretty well, perhaps, in the morning, and in an hour would begin to feel dead and heavy, as though being bound down with ropes or something from which I could not free myself. Do what I would, take anything I would, nothing seemed to help me. Sometimes for twenty four or thirty six hours I would be utterly prostrate and suffer as only Heavens, such agony; it was a living death. I could hardly tell which part of my body suffered the most, but of course the pain was in my head and stomach. THE NEW WOMAN.

By ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

Is there any known process of mind cure whereby it could be endosmosed into the average masculine reportorial brain that fainting is out of fashion for women? Here we have newspaper reports of a fire, a runaway smash up, a railway accident, a street car collision, two scandals and a ghost, and in every one the woman in the case fainted. One doubled up and fainted, another tumbled down and fainted, while a third fell into a man's arms and fainted. Now, I myself personally have been in a fire, a flood, a runaway and a collision at sea—yea, I have seen what appeared to be an apparition—yet to my certain knowledge not a woman there fainted, and I have never seen a woman faint under anything short of the torture of unbearable physical pain. Women do not faint. They keep their heads on to get out of a bad situation, whatever it may be. Did you ever see a woman faint, or even pretend to do so, when her lost husband returned to her or when her house took fire? Never. Nor did anybody else. Yet here, day after day, year after year, generation after generation, the newspaper young man puts into his accident stories that same feminine faint. It is his stage claptrap, as it were, his good old reliance for scenic effect. But now it has served so many centuries, this ancient, faithful, disintegrating gag! At length let it have rest—it and us.

Mrs. Mollie Spooner is the lessee of a Brooklyn theater, also its manager and one of the actors in the company. She has been remarkably successful with her enterprises from the beginning because of some original ideas she put into operation. To begin, her theater is immaculately clean and comfortable behind the scenes. Who ever saw before a theater that was either clean or comfortable back of the stage? Then at every Tuesday matinee Mrs. Spooner serves refreshments—tea, lemonade or claret cup—to her audience after the play. They pass behind the scenes, sip their refreshments and make the acquaintance of the players, who like the innovation as well as the audience does.

It is a little odd that, after all these ages of war among men, the best, lightest and easiest litter for removing the wounded from the battlefield or for carrying patients from one part of a hospital to another should be invented by a woman, yet such is the fact. She is Mrs. Chadwick, wife of Captain F. E. Chadwick of the navy.

The one hopeful fact in connection with Russia seems to be that Czarina Alix is in favor of the new woman, including suffrage, higher education and professions for the feminine sex. If the poor little woman could only impress these ideas upon Russian statesmen, there would be no more dynamite mines built under the palace of Nicholas II. All other reforms go with the emancipation of woman.

Put a pocket in your gown and don't be an idiot. Elizabeth Cady Stanton advises it.

Maude Buckley, 20 years old, is a slim girl detective employed in a great city department store. She saw a man making the rounds of the establishment stealing things and hiding them under his long ulster. When he turned to leave, Miss Buckley laid her hand upon his arm and detained him. He broke away and ran like mad up the street, she after him. She chased him two blocks and overtook him. What she lacked in weight she made up in wind and limb. Once more she seized him, and this time he could not shake her off. She clung to him till help came and he was taken by a policeman. I don't know what Miss Buckley did then, but she did not faint anyhow. I only mention the story to illustrate what athletic culture will do for a woman.

Congratulations from American women to Miss Cora Greacen, woman lawyer, late of Michigan, now law clerk in the United States treasury department, Washington; salary, $1,800. She will prepare and write legal opinions for the treasury department.

What may be named as the greatest blessing the last years of the old century handed down to the women of the new? In brief, the rainy day skirt. May its reign, not its length, be extended into all generations to come! Compared with the unspeakably filthy, bedraggled, discolored, disease breeding, street mopping skirt that immediately preceded it, it is as a clean and shining brand new greenback dollar to a foul, microby, greasy, ragged old one. one.

A man 68 years old recently tried to kill himself because a girl refused to marry him. He went suddenly insane from disappointment in love. Until man learns to control his emotions and behave like a reasoning human being it is not safe to trust him with the ballot. It can never be foretold what a sex so excitable will drag a country into.

SPEECHES TO ORDER.

How Some Public Men Obtain Their Oratorical Gems.

A Few Dollars Judiciously Invested Often Build Up a Reputation —Workings of a Modern Oratory Factory.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

THERE is a vast difference between an orator who enlightens the world by presenting living thoughts in eloquent sentences and a man whose only possession is the gift of gab. Of this difference the writer was reminded the other day when, in a western newspaper, he read a lengthy and nauseatingly complimentary account of a speech delivered by a venerable, but not eminently respectable, country legislator who surprised his colleagues by presenting an array of facts and figures clothed in such admirable language that even the speaker himself viewed his linguistic accomplishments with a feeling akin to admiration. When this old humbug received and accepted the congratulations of his friends he knew that he was robbing the poor devil of a whisky-ruined lawyer, who had composed the speech and arranged the statistics contained in it, of his just dues. He had paid just five dollars for an intellectual treasure which abounded in gems of purest ray; and in consideration of this magnificent sum, paid and delivered to a pitiable wretch, is now posing before the world as a thinker and orator. Those who know him well, and have heard him speak before country audiences, are well aware that the old fellow is absolutely incapable of thinking, that he doesn't know a noun from an adjective, that the science of government is a closed book to him, and that the only knowledge he possesses of politics is the trick of buying up the floating vote and packing a township caucus. Should he die to-day his memory would be honored by his fellow-legislators, the purchased speech would be quoted in senate and house, and hysterical funeral orators would compare him to Demosthenes and Cicero.

It is a fact now well known among observing people that many of our most eminent congressmen employ secretaries to collect figures for speeches to be delivered by them. This is perfectly legitimate. The statistics so arranged are public property. But the comments which are offered in connection with them should be original, and usually are so. The national congress, whatever may be said to the contrary, is composed of honorable men who, as a body, would scorn to acquire fame on false pretenses. Unfortunately, the same cannot be said of some of our state legislators; and many thrilling speeches, scores of bright comments and solid arrays of figures with which the honorable members from Podunk and Squedunk electrify their constituents have been bought at the rate of one dollar for 500 words from brainy dipsomaniacs who would sell their very souls for a drink.

Others buy their oratorical fireworks from bright newspaper men—brainy fellows who know how to frame sentences so that the applause will come in just at the right time. They have to pay a little more for this sort of help, but receive additional compensation for their outlay by having their "speeches" reported correctly, sometimes verbatim, in the journal with which their intellectual fountain may happen to be connected.

But it is not legislators alone who buy speeches. Preachers have been known to order sermons on religious and sociological subjects; lecturers frequently engage in similar deception; and the names of banquet orators who sail under false colors is legion.

To such an extent has this sham been carried that in every large city bureaus have been established for the production to order of speeches, sermons, lectures, papers and responses to toasts. Several years ago a Chicago newspaper man, tired of the grind of journalistic life, opened an office in one of the downtown skyscrapers and boldly advertised himself as a manufacturer of all kinds of intellectual merchandise. The scheme was a success from the start, and although several other establishments of a like nature have since been opened he is still doing a flourishing and profitable business.

The people who patronize him belong to what is usually called "the best classes of society." A few seasons ago—it will not do to be too exact—a prominent Chicago business man addressed a famous club on the subject of the Nicaragua ship canal. His remarks were praised for their logic and eloquence and were quoted by the press of America and Great Britain as an epitome of national sentiment. The speech was indeed one of the finest things ever produced on the subject, but it did not emanate from the brain of the man who recited it. It was written by an old Chicago newspaper man, now a resident of New York, who received for it an honorarium of $75. The writer can vouch for the truth of this story, as he was given an opportunity to read the speech several days before it was delivered into the hands of the purchaser. He was also present at the banquet, at the close of which it was recited, and he could not help but admire the nerve and self-possession of the declaimer, who received the congratulations of his friends with a dignity worthy of real merit.

Shortly afterward the chronicler of these historical episodes was invited by the manager of one of the local brain bureaus to prepare a 20-minute paper on a subject involving the relations of the United States with one of the European governments. There were no instructions with the order, except that the speech was to be "intensely patriotic." Ten days later the "stuff" was in the hands of the man who had ordered it. He committed it to memory and in due time delivered his little oration at a downtown club dinner, with credit to himself and honor to the organization he represented. The enthusiasm of his delivery was exceeded only by original outbursts of "patriotism," and when he announced that "whatever may be the result of the negotiations, whether the dispute end in war or peace, every loyal American will rally round the flag and shout, with me: 'Our country, God bless it!'" he assumed a pose which none of his fellow toasters will ever forget.

At the time of the Goethe revival, which turned the heads of so many otherwise sensible women a few years ago, and which, by the way, was far more dangerous than the later Browning and Ibsen cults, a prominent club woman surprised her sisters with an essay whose profundity staggered even the professional critics who heard her read it. Before the close of the meeting the president of the club invited members and visitors to discuss the paper. A curly-headed professor from some college or other asked the heroine of the evening for an explanation of a certain mysterious passage in her paper. She was, of course, unable to give it; but instead of breaking down, as a man would have done under the circumstances, she began to gesticulate wildly and exclaimed, in a voice trembling with excitement: "The passage is plain; so plain that nobody but an ignoramus would ask to have it explained; that's all I have to say." The curly-headed inquirer was completely squelched and the intellectual standard of Madame, with the masses, established for all time to come.

Her paper had been written by an old German scholar and translated by a teacher in one of the Chicago schools. Seven people in the audience knew all about this transaction, and Madame knew they knew it. Yet not for a single instant did she lose her presence of mind. On the contrary, she promptly assumed the role of outraged innocence, and when questioned by a friend stoutly maintained the justice of her position. "I paid for the paper," she said, "and it's mine; all mine."

In a way the speech builder is a philanthropist and educator. He knows that brevity is the soul of wit; hence his sentences are always short and his merchandise never too heavy, and those of us who must, perforce, listen to much public speaking are sincere in wishing him prosperity and a steadily increasing circle of customers.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Park Baseball Club has changed its name. The new title is The Park Field Club.

The Pond's team defeated the Hope chapel second team by a score of 24 to 16 in a six-inning game of baseball played on the Clinton avenue grounds Saturday afternoon.

The Park Field Club's team defeated the Newman Club nine in an interesting game of baseball played on the old cricket grounds yesterday afternoon. The score was 16 to 15.

For tomorrow afternoon is scheduled what promises to be an exciting game of baseball. The two High school teams, the city and the borough's, will cross bats for the first time this year. Both teams have greatly improved in their work and an interesting game is expected. The contest will take place on Martine Common.

A hotly contested baseball game took place on the Coddington avenue grounds yesterday afternoon between the American Eagles and Stephany's team. The former won by a score of 11 to 7. The batteries were Coley and Downing for the Eagles and Stephany, Baldwin and Smith for the opposite side.

A divinity student as umpire was a novel feature in the baseball game played between the Hope chapel and the North Plainfield High School nines Saturday. Frederick B. Newman, in that capacity, gave satisfaction to both teams.

The officials of St. Mary's A. and L. A. baseball club, have had issued a neat schedule of the games to be played this season. There is a space left for the insertion of scores as games are played and in this way they may easily be referred to. The plan is a very good one and is much appreciated by the team's followers. Baseball enthusiasts desirous of procuring one of the schedules may do so by applying to the secretary, T. J. Comerford.

A one-sided game of baseball was played yesterday afternoon on the Plainfield avenue grounds between the Whittiers and the Watchung ball club. The former winning by the score of 55 to 11. This made the sixth game won out of a possible seven. The battery for the the victors were Hellyer and McVoy, and for the W. B. C., Lock, Willes and Minford. Two of Whittier's valuable players have resigned for positions in New York. They are Captain Egan, catcher, and Smith, center fielder.

—Skin affections will readily disappear by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Look out for counterfeits. If you get DeWitt's you get good results. It is the quick and positive cure for piles. L. W. Randolph.

UNIFORM PRICES.

Scale of Rates for Patent Medicines Adopted by the Local Druggists' Association.

A uniform scale of prices for patent medicines was agreed upon last evening at the meeting of the Plainfield Retail Druggists' Association held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

All the druggists in the city and borough have agreed to abide by the price list in selling patented articles and the rate, which is fixed by the National Association of Retail Druggists, goes into effect tomorrow morning.

President E. F. Armstrong of the association secured able speakers who addressed the members last evening on the subjects of vital interest to retail druggists. The speakers included a member of the National Association of Retail Druggists from Jersey City and a member of the Union County Retail Druggists Association from Elizabeth, and also two members of the latter association from Rahway.

The Plainfield organization is affiliated with the Union County Association and with the National Association.

PERSONAL.

Harvey G. Wentrick, of East Second street, has been entertaining his brother, Clarence Wentrick, of Brooklyn.

Cornelius Schenck, Jr., of West End Park, has practically recovered from an operation for appendicitis, and will go home the last of the week.

Edward Young, of Jensen, Fla., who has been spending the winter with his father, Adam Young, of South Second street, sailed by the Clyde line for his home today. He was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Lillie Mague, who will remain with him for sometime.

CITY JOTTINGS.

—A "doctrine meeting" will be held at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow evening.

—A special meeting of the Epworth League of Grace M. E. church will be held after the regular prayer-meeting this evening.

PRICE OF STONE.

No Truth in Report of Madison's Low Rate for Crushed Stone.

A statement has recently gained circulation to the effect that Madison is obtaining its supply of crushed stone for street work at a figure greatly reduced from that paid by this city.

On investigation the statement proves to be groundless. Samuel Brandt, the chairman of the committee on streets in Madison's Council, says that the price paid there for the finer grades is $1.30 and the larger grades $1.20.

Plainfield pays but 80 and 90 cents for these grades, and in addition has them delivered free of charge on the streets.

The grade for which Madison pays at the rate of sixty-five cents would not be used at any price on the local streets.

TEN NEW HOUSES.

Work Begun on Their Erection by Elwood Dunn, of Somerville.

A building operation has commenced at the southwest corner of Clinton avenue and Third street, which, when completed, will greatly improve that vicinity.

Elwood Dunn, of Somerville, proposes to erect ten houses at that location. The plot of ground is subdivided into twenty-two lots. Mr. Dunn expects to spend $2,000 on each of the houses. Contractors have already started to work. The level of the ground is at present nearly six feet above the street. The height is being reduced at least three feet and the soil is being removed to an adjoining lot to fill up a depression.

As soon as this work is completed the building operation will commence actively.

Dairy Commissioner Made Complaint.

George W. McGuire, State dairy commissioner, appeared before Justice Moffett this morning and entered complaint against Thomas Garrigan for selling oleomargerine without notifying the buyer of the fact that it was not butter. He will be tried on May 17.

Building Frame Dwelling.

John I. Finley is erecting a frame dwelling on East Third street, near Richmond street. The house will be two stories high. Herman Hansen, of East Front street, is the contractor. The mason work is being done by Cormick Caufield.

Funeral of Peter Miller.

The funeral services of Peter Miller, of Cottage place, who was accidentally killed this morning, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Mary's church.

MAY TERM OF COURT OPENED

A NUMBER OF PLAINFIELD CASES WILL BE TRIED.

Large Gathering of Lawyers at Elizabeth Yesterday When Union County Court Opened.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, May 8—The May term of court opened yesterday with a large attendance of lawyers. There is much interest in the long list of cases that will be tried during the term.

Of the Supreme Court cases a few are of interest to Plainfielders. The case of Christenson against Lambert will probably be called today. Murphy & Blatz represent the defendant. The contract case of Jones against Chapot, et als, has been put last on the list. Codington & Swackhamer represent the defendant.

In the Circuit Court, the case of Charles J. O'Brien against John Traynor, in tort, is ready. Craig A. Marsh represents the plaintiff In the case in tort of Andrew R. Scully, by Mary F. Scully, his guardian, against the Jersey Central Railroad, Mr. Marsh represents the plaintiff.

Among the Common Pleas cases is that of M. Antionette DeBaud against Emma R. Naylor, et al, on contract. Codington & Swackhamer represent the plaintiff and W S. Angleman the defendant.

There are two justice appeal cases. John Ramsat against Henry McCandless from Justice Nash's court, and Guiseppe Acolia against Leonardo Vetromile from Justice Moffett's court

At the opening of court yesterday, Judge VanSyckel charged the jury concerning slot machines. He stated that any person indicted for keeping these machines would have their licenses refused in the future. He spoke very strong and emphatically on the subject.

The petit jurors from Plainfield are Jacob Blimm, Jr., John Garry, Wm. T Newman, Edward Nelson, George E. Rogers and Frank P. Sheppard.

AUTOMOBILES PROMISED.

Plainfield Automobile Company Hopes to Have Stages Running in June.

Considerable progress has been made in the necessary preparation for the early operation of passenger vehicles from Plainfield to New Market, by way of South Plainfield, and thence to Dunellen on the return trip to this city,

The Township Committee of Piscataway will take action on the petition for a franchise to run the conveyances through the township as desired by the Plainfield Automobile Company, which is the concern backing the scheme.

Some delay will be necessary on account of the scarcity of automobiles. These have been ordered but the company, which is to supply the vehicles, has been over rushed with orders. Some pressure, however, has been brought to bear on the company and word has been received that the order will be filled on or before June 15.

BRIDE KNOWN HERE.

Miss Anna Johnson to be Wedded at Brother's Home at San Jose.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Johnson, of San Jose, California, have issued invitations to the marriage of Mr. Johnson's sister, Miss Anna Johnson, and Carl Sund. The event will be celebrated Sunday afternoon, May 19, at 1 o'clock in the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Immanuel church, San Jose. The bride is well-known in this city. She and her sister, Miss Alfrida Johnson, lived in this city until a year ago last March when they went to California to live with their brother.

Change in Clerks.

D. N. Rose, of Asbury Park, has resigned his position as clerk in Hepburn & Company's pharmacy, at the corner of Park avenue and Second street. His position will be filled by Joseph G. WILLED TO DUNELLEN.

One of the Rice Wills Gives Elkwood Building to Dunellen Borough.

It is interesting to learn that according to the will of the late Millionaire Rice, of which Former Judge Bartine, of Somerville, is one of the executors, the Elkwood building in West Second street is left to the borough of Dunellen, while under the provisions of the will in which Albert Patrick is interested, the building is left to some people in Texas. It is generally believed that the will in which Mr. Bartine is interested will stand.

RECEPTION TO COMMITTEE.

DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR GIVEN BY THE GESANG AND TURN VEREIN.

Presented Singing Society Emblem to Two Members Who Lost in Race For Gold Headed Cane.

Merriment to a pronounced degree was the order of affairs last evening at the reception tendered by the Gesang and Turn Verein to the committee which conducted its recent fair. The reception was given in Saengerbund Hall and an unexpectedly large crowd was present.

The members and their friends held an impromptu dance which lasted until the early hours of this morning. Music furnished by Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra enlivened the occasion.

The society has had a surprise in store for two of its members, Rudolph Spiegel and John Wirth. These two, together with Frank Haurand, were the participants in a spirited contest at the fair for a gold headed cane offered to the most popular member. After an exciting run Frank Haurand finally captured the prize by a narrow margin of votes. Last evening the other two contestants were each presented with a singing society badge. The emblem, which is a wreath surrounding a lyre, is made of solid gold.

ENDEAVOR OFFICERS.

Elected at Meeting of Christian Endeavor Society of Warren Chapel Last Night.

The election of officers for the ensuing year and the admission of new members constituted the important business transacted at the regular monthly meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel last evening.

The officers elected are: President, George Zimmer; vice-president, Mrs. W. A. Wilson; recording secretary, Miss May Christofferson; corresponding secretary, Miss Margaret Shepherd, re-elected; treasurer, Arthur Beekman.

All the applications for membership in the society were acted upon favorably. The list comprises eleven active and two associate members.

FUNERAL OF MRS. RANDOLPH.

Impressive Service Conducted at the Home on Duer Street Yesterday.

The funeral services of Mrs. Malinda Randolph, widow of the late Robert Randolph, were held at her late residence, 138 Duer street, yesterday afternoon and were very largely attended by many sorrowing friends and relatives.

The parlor, in which the casket was placed during the service, was filled with many beautiful floral tributes from those to whom she was dear in life. Her pastor, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, conducted the services. He took for his subject, "Faith," and spoke feelingly on the loving Christian character of her for whom they mourned. Faith was one of the chief characteristics of her life, said he, and her friends could take much comfort in their assurance that by her faith she had received the reward of eternal life.

A short burial service was said at the grave. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery. The pallbearers were L W. Randolph, A. L. Force, M. C. Dobbins and Chas. M. Hummer.

Fraternal Visit.

Grand Foreman V. W. Nash and Edward Mosher, together with a delegation of local A. O. U. W. members, will pay a fraternal visit to Bernards Lodge, A. O. U. W., at Basking Ridge, Tuesday, May 14. They will make the trip in stages.

"Ladies' Night."

Demand For Trained Nurses.

There is a great demand for trained nurses in this city and the physicians are experiencing no little difficulty in getting nurses to assist them in their work.

After spending a few days with Brooklyn friends, Miss Alice Woodland, of Craig place, has returned home.

WEST END GYMNASIUM OPENED LAST NIGHT.

Members of Young Men's Association of Hope Chapel Inspected The Place.

OPENING WAS INFORMAL.

BATHS ARE NOT YET READY FOR THE PUBLIC.

Boys Spent Last Evening on The Gymnasium Floor—Something About The New Building and Its Arrangements.

Hope chapel's newest addition, the West End gymnasium and baths, was opened for the first time last evening. The members of Young Men's Association for whose benefit it was mainly built, took possession of the building and for several hours busied themselves inspecting its handsome interior and in exercising about the gymnasium floor.

The gymnasium is forty by thirty-five feet in dimensions, while the height is about twenty-five feet. It will be fitted up later, with all the requirements necessary to a first-class gymnasium. Overlooking the main floor at one end, is a spacious gallery, where seats are placed for members desirous of spending a short time in recreation with games and books. In the front part of the building, just off the chapel and distinct from the gymnasium, are several rooms in the largest of which is located the shower baths. There are several of these, but as yet they are in an incompleted state and will be placed in condition for use as soon as possible. The other rooms are to be used for lockers and for such purposes as may arise later.

While the opening of the gymnasium was not marked by any special ceremony it was none the less a pleasing occasion and the members of the association enjoyed themselves thoroughly. Several impromptu basket ball games were played and the floor was given a thorough initiation.

In the forepart of the evening, the regular monthly business meeting of the association was held at which time a committee, consisting of D. B. Martin, Percival Hand and Ben Evans, was appointed to make arrangements for a reception to be tendered to their late president, Fred Newman It is to be held next month. Three new members were elected and nine propositions were received. At the close it was decided to adjourn until Friday evening.

FINDING COPPER.

Barrel of Ore From Smalley Brothers' Quarry Shipped Away for Examination.

Since the recent blasting at Smalley Brothers' quarry on the mountain side the workmen have removed a quantity of stone containing a considerable amount of copper and a fair proportion of iron ore. The owners have shipped a barrel of this stone to a Staten Island smelting works, where it will be examined by a metallurgist.

It is said that the stone contains a sufficient percentage of iron ore to pay for the smelting.

This vein of copper in the quarry was discovered some time ago, but it is much richer in the recent excavations.

Former Plainfielders to Wed.

Invitations have been sent out by Mr. and Mrs. A. Walter Haviland, of New York, to the marriage of their daughter, Emma, to Charles Edward Case, Tuesday, May 28, at 4:30 o'clock in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street. The newly wedded couple will reside in Rochester, N. Y.

NEW TENANT.

George H. Cook Will Open Vegetable Store in Frazee's Old Stand.

Vincent L. Frazee's former stand, at 151 West Front street, will be occupied by George H. Cook hereafter.

Mr. Cook at present has a fish and vegetable store at 165 East Front street and he intends to use the new store as a vegetable stand exclusively. The fish business will be continued at his old place.

It is Mr. Cook's intention to commence business at the West Front street store during the present week.

GIFTS FOR THE FIRE CHIEFS.

PRESENTED AT MEETING OF WARREN ENGINE COMPANY LAST NIGHT.

Election of Officers Was Also Held—There Were No Contests—The Officers.

Warren Engine Company, at its annual meeting last evening, presented to Julius J. Stahl, the newly-appointed chief of the department, a gold fire chief's badge and to William Debele, the retired chief, a gold ex-chief's badge. These presentations together with the election of officers occupied most of the evening's session.

There was no friction whatever in electing the officers. The new officers are: Foreman, E. J. Smith; first assistant foreman, Lafayette Rosenstiehl; second assistant foreman, L B. Bodine; recording secretary, L. B. Bodine: financial secretary, L. B. Bodine; treasurer, J. M. Higgins; engineer, John Sonenck: first assistant engineer, William Ricketts; second assistant engineer, Albert DeCamp; stoker, James Walker; representative to the North Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association, for three years, George R Schlereth.

A report made by the committee on arrangements for the Bayonne trip, May 15, showed that plans have been perfected for a special train for that occasion. It is scheduled to leave here at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and return at 9 o'clock in the evening. A moderate rate of transportation has been offered by the railroad company and in view of the fact the company will send its full quota of men.

PLAYED EUCHRE.

Miss Piker Entertained Twentieth Century Encore Club Last Evening.

Miss Lizzie Piker, of West Front street, entertained the Twentieth Century Euchre Club last evening at her home, and the members had a delightful time. Miss Lou Young and Miss Lizzie Piker won the first and second prizes for the women, while Harry Connett and Frank Marcley won the first and second prizes for the men.

After play dancing was enjoyed and at a late hour supper was served. The club will be entertained Wednesday evening, May 15, by Miss Lou Young, of East Front street.

ENTERTAINED RASORES CLUB.

Guests at Apartments of Mrs. A. S. Patterson in New York.

Mrs. A. S. Patterson, one of the vice-presidents of the Rasores Club, entertained the club at luncheon in her attractive new apartment at The Raymore, Central Park West, yesterday. A large number enjoyed Mrs. Patterson's delightful hospitality, on that bright May day.

After luncheon a poem written by the hostess, in the early days of the club's existence was read, which resulted in pleasant reminiscences of the first association and work of the Rasores.

PRIZE EXAMINATIONS.

Will be Held in the Borough High School Tuesday.

The prize competitive examination in mathematics open to pupils in the graduating class of the North Plainfield High School will be held Tuesday morning. The pupil passing the most successful examination will receive $15 in gold and the pupil passing the second best examination will be awarded $10 in gold.

Both prizes are offered by John Valiant, of Myrtle avenue, who has always evinced an interest in the welfare of the borough schools.

This year fifty-two members have been received in the Mt. Olive Baptist church. Last Sunday five were given the right-hand-of-fellowship.

COMMUTERS RENEW CONTRACT

TROUBLE OVER CLUB CARS HAS BEEN SATISFACTORILY SETTLED.

Company and Commuters' Club Both Made Concessions in Order to Settle the Affair.

The Commuters' Club has just renewed contracts for another year engaging the club-cars "Netherwood" and "Evona." It will be remembered that the club had differences with the Jersey Central Railroad Company regarding the amount to be paid. This caused a rupture and the club was on the point of giving up the club-cars, when it was decided to hold a meeting to discuss the matter.

At the meeting, a committee was appointed to confer with the officials of the railroad company and make the best terms possible. This was done. The company made concessions as did also the club and all differences were settled with entire satisfaction to both parties.

Although the terms of agreement are not known, it can be stated that the club did not agree to guarantee a certain number of passengers on every trip, as requested by the company. This was conceded to by the company. It is also known that the company will receive about the same amount of money from each as before.

The members of the club-car, "Plainfield," have also renewed their contract for another year on terms of satisfaction to both parties. These members did not have any special grievance and as C J. Fisk and H. G. Runkle have the power to renew the contract, there was no trouble in making a contract for another year.

COMING CONCERT.

Will Be Given in German Reformed Church Under Direction of P. L. Conde.

A vocal and instrumental concert will be given in the German Reformed church tomorrow evening under the direction of P. Ludwig Conde. With the exception of the opening number the music will be entirely classical. It will consist of vocal, 'cello and violin solos, quartettes, octette and orchestral selections.

The performers will be violinist, Miss Virginia H. Ketcham, of Westfield; 'cellist, Fermin Ferrer, of New York; baritone, Louis Schnepel, of Elizabeth; accompanists, Miss Florence Cahoone and Vincent F. Sokol, both of Plainfield.

The Arion Quartette Club, of Elizabeth, will also take part in the entertainment.

IMPROVEMENT PROGRESSING

Work on Somerset Street is Going Forward With Much Rapidity.

Rapid progress has been made in the Somerset street improvement lately.

The curb has been reset on the east side of the street from Jackson avenue to Green brook and the flagging has been relaid on the same side over the same distance. Work on the improvement of the west side is now well under way. All the tree stumps have been removed and some of the curbing and flagging has already been replaced.

To Nominate a Ticket.

The nominating committee of the Christian Endeavor Local Union, consisting of Miss Florence Dodge, chairman; Edward Burroughs, Alvin Burdick, S. Stover, Ephraim Ackor and George Zimmer, will meet Saturday evening at the home of Miss Dodge, 301 West Fourth street, to prepare a ticket to be elected at the meeting to be held May 14.

New Store for Somerset Street.

As soon as the work of removing the building on Somerset street, occupied by A. Wolfe as a tailorshop, is completed, a one story structure will be erected on the present site of the shop. The new building will be used as a fish market. Oscar Elliott, who owns the property, is having Wolfe's building moved along side of Samuel Taub's shoe shop.

Building the New Store.

The work of building a store in the entrance to Music Hall for F. G. Woolworth & Co., is progressing rapidly. The front is nearly completed and a metal ceiling is being put in position. The sides are being covered with hard wood and everything about the place is up-to-date. When completed it will be one of the most attractive stores on the street.

Teachers Will Give Social.

The teachers of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school will give a social to the pupils Thursday evening, May 23.

Opportunity For Baptism.

Parents will have an opportunity to present their children for baptism at the Crescent Avenue church Sunday morning.

FINE CONCERT GIVEN BY LOTUS GLEE CLUB

Large Audience Present to Hear It At First M. E. Church Last Evening.

MRS. MINNIE SMITH RECITED.

HER SELECTIONS WERE VERY CLEVERLY GIVEN.

Fine Work By the Glee Club—Only Disappointment Was That Mr. Strickett Was Unable to Sing a Solo.

It is seldom that Plainfield has an opportunity to listen to a more enjoyable programme than the one which was presented at the First M. E. church last evening by the Lotus Glee Club and Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith. The only disappointment was that G. Morgan Strickett, who is popular in local musical circles, was unable to sing a solo on account of ill health. There was some question as to whether he would be able to sing even in the quartette selections.

There were a number of selections by the glee club, which is composed of George Seymour Lenox, first tenor; G Morgan Strickett, second tenor; Charles L Lewis, first bass; Edward B. Martindell, second bass. Frank J. Smith is the conductor and accompanist. Without doubt, the club is one of the best organizations of its kind. The selections were well chosen and sung with a unity and harmony that made them very delightful to the large audience present. It was easy to see that the four men were accustomed to singing together for they kept perfect time and sing with much expression. There was a wide variety in their selections, but a quartette arrangement of "Lucky Jim" pleased their hearers especially. They were called on for repeated encores.

Solos were given by Mr. Lenox, Mr. Lewis and Mr. Martindell, and each was compelled to respond to the hearty applause. Their solo work was of a high order.

There is no more pleasing entertainer than Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith and her reception was particularly hearty. She was down on the programme for three appearances but each time the audience refused to be satisfied with a single selection. A bright little sketch, "A Pair of Lunatics," was particularly well given but the two short encores, "Katie's Answer," given in rich brogue, and "When My Pa Was a Boy" in the manner of a small boy, were exceedingly clever.

As an accompanist, Frank J. Smith is too well-known to Plainfield people to need any introduction. Besides accompanying the club, he also furnished the musical accompaniment for two of Mrs. Smith's recitations. Chas. L. Lewis, first bass of the club, is a resident of this city and is now choir master of the First M. E. church. Mr. Strickett formerly sang at the Crescent Avenue church.

QUIETLY WEDDED.

Ceremony Performed at German Reformed Parsonage Sunday Evening.

Announcement has just been made of the marriage of Miss Daisy Bruse, of Elizabeth, and Charles Schleif, of Warrenville.

The ceremony was quietly performed at the parsonage of the German Reformed church, Sunday evening, by Rev. G. Hauser. The groom is a brother of Stephen Schleif, of Park avenue.

Surprise Party For Louis Mattox.

A surprise party was given to Louis Mattox at his home on Dunellen avenue, Monday evening. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Mattox and Miss Bertha Clum. There were thirty guests present from Elizabeth, Newark and this city. The evening was passed in dancing, playing games, etc. At midnight a collation was served.

Double House for West Third Street.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

The frequent violations of the postal laws, which prohibit the transmission of intoxicating liquors through the mails, has caused the Postmaster General to issue a rigid order lately. Under the regulations now in force no explosive or inflammable materials, poisons, live or dead animals or any other articles emitting a bad order will be permitted to be sent through the mails. The only exceptions seems to be samples of communion wine and liquids which are not ardent, vinous, spirituous or malt and which are not liable to explosion, combustion or ignition by shock or jar.

. . . . .

In a recent number of the Youths Companion Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, the daughter of Julia Ward Howe and the playmate of the Longfellow children in childhood, tel's many stories of the poet. Among others she gives the contents of a letter writter by Mr. Longfellow to her father, Dr. Samuel G. Howe, telling how "Excelsior" came to be written.

It was a cold winter night, and the poet had gone to bed when the idea of the poem popped into his mind. He tried to put it aside, but the idea kept haunting him until he arose and jotted down the verses as they came quickly to him.

"The result," he added, "is that I have a severe cold and an attack of rheumatism, but my best friends find less in the poem to criticise than usual."

GETTYSBURG, LURAY, WASHINGTON.

Personally-Conducted Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The battlefield of Gettysbury, the unique Luray Caverns, and the National Capitol in all the glory of its Spring freshness, are attractions so alluring that few would feel like refusing to visit them. It is to place these three attractions within easy reach of every one that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces a tour over the battlefield, through the picturesque Blue Mountains, down the historic Shenandoah Valley, visiting the famous caverns, and an entertaining stay at Washington.

The tour will leave New York 8:00 a. m., and Philadelphia 12:20 p. m., Saturday, May 18, in charge of one of the Company's tourist agents, and will cover a period of five days. An experienced chaperon, whose especial charge will be unescorted ladies, will accompany the trip throughout. Round-trip tickets, covering transportation, carriage drives, and hotel accommodations, will be sold at the extremely low rates of $25 from New York, $24 from Trenton, $22 from Philadelphia, and proportionate rates from other points.

Pale Weak, Run-down Overworked Women half sick, nervous, tired out with household and maternal cares, constipated, liver torpid, with blotched, muddy, sallow complexions, blood thin and impure, need building up and a thorough renovation of their systems. This is the time you need such a great nerve and stomach builder as the great tonic laxative. It gently moves the bowels and thus removes the cause, and acts directly upon the liver and kidneys, keeping them active and strong, while its marvellous tonic properties clears the complexion, stimulates the liver, quickens the circulation, increases the flesh, brightens the eye; the nervousness speedily disappears, and the entire system recuperates and tones up to a condition of perfect and permanent health.

Laxakola, the great tonic laxative, is not only the most efficient of family remedies, but the most economical, because it combines two medicines, viz: laxative and tonic, and at one price. No other remedy gives so much for the money. At druggists, 25c and 50c., or free sample of THE LAXAKOLA CO., 132 Nassau Street, N. Y., or 356 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

LAXAKOLA FOR CHILDREN

Give the children Laxakola. It is absolutely safe, being purely vegetable, containing nothing of a harmful character. It builds the little ones up instead of debilitating them. It reaches every organ, cleanses and strengthens the liver and kidneys, purifies the blood and makes them hearty and strong. It tastes good. ☞ Children like it and ask for it.

CUBANS WILL ACCEPT

Convention Expected to Take Definite Action Today.

COMMISSION'S REPORT FAVORABLE

Only a Few Radicals Will Now Oppose the Platt Amendment—Senor Villuenda Declares In Favor of Acceptance.

HAVANA, May 8.—The commission at the secret session of the constitutional convention presented an extensive report of their conferences with President McKinley and Secretary Root and a glowing account of the banquets and receptions tendered them. Senor Gibergs objected to incorporating an account of the social programme in the report, but the commission insisted upon this point.

In reference to the third clause of the Platt amendment the report stated that the United States would not intervene unless Cuba were attacked by a foreign power or unless there existed in Cuba a condition of affairs similar to that which existed under Spain at the time of American intervention.

Regarding coaling stations, the report set forth that the places so desired by the United States were Capes Maisi and San Antonio and another point commanding the entrance to the gulf of Mexico. These would be definitely determined upon when drawing up the treaty, and the object of these stations would be the maintenance of the independence of Cuba as well as the protection of the United States. The report also said that the United States would in no way interfere in the local government and that President McKinley had promised to appoint a commission to meet a Cuban commission to discuss the economic question and to draw up a commercial treaty as soon as the republic is established and that he advised the Cubans in the meantime to study the situation in this respect. The report announced that Secretary Root had said that there was nothing in the Platt amendment to prevent Cuba having diplomatic representatives in foreign countries.

The report has evidently made a good impression, and only a few radicals will continue to oppose the acceptance of the amendment. Senor Villuenda, in an open letter declaring his intention to accept the amendment, said he first thought that if the convention rejected the amendment Washington might change its policy, as he then believed the amendment was the work of party.

"I now believe," said Senor Villuenda, "that the amendment is the work of the nation. There is no use in objecting to the inevitable. It is either annexation or a republic with the amendment, and I prefer the latter. The United States government by insisting upon the amendment shows that the Americans have changed from their policy before the war and that they no longer rely upon the Monroe doctrine to protect the interests of American republics."

The convention will meet tomorrow and is expected to take definite action.

The "Terrible Turk" Won.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Nouroulah, the big Turkish wrestler, made short work of Tom Jenkins of Cleveland, the champion wrestler of America, at Madison Square Garden last night. He downed Jenkins twice in a catch as catch can match, the first time in 4m. 35s. and the second time in 5m. 2s. The match was decided on the best two out of three falls, and Jenkins, while showing a remarkable amount of cleverness, was unable to compete against the enormous weight of his big opponent. There were about 4,000 people in the Garden, and George Bothner, the wrestling instructor of the Knickerbocker Athletic club, acted as referee for all the bouts of the night.

Cullinan Named to Succeed Lyman.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Patrick W. Cullinan of Oswego will be appointed to succeed the late Henry H. Lyman of the same city as commissioner of excise. His appointment was determined upon at a conference at which Governor Odell, Senator Platt and Chairman Dunn of the state committee were present. Mr. Cullinan is the general counsel of the state department of excise. He was a member of the assembly when Messrs. Conkling and Platt resigned from the United States senate because of President Garfield's nomination of William H. Robertson of Westchester as collector of customs at New York.

Lee Returns to Virginia.

OMAHA, May 8.—General Fitz-Hugh Lee and his family, including his son, Lieutenant George F. Lee, have left Omaha to return to their old Virginia home, where they have resided but little since General Lee 15 years ago became governor of Virginia and moved to Richmond. Lieutenant Lee was mustered out of the service yesterday, he having been an officer of the Thirty-ninth infantry, which ceased to exist yesterday at San Francisco. Since his father came to Omaha he has been on detached service at these headquarters.

Steeple Climber's Narrow Escape.

MARLBORO, Mass., May 8.—J. E. Towne of Worcester, a steeple climber, fell from the steeple of the Immaculate Conception Catholic church while climbing to a window 100 feet above the ground. He struck the roof and slid down it until caught by a snow guard on the edge, where he hung for his life for 15 minutes and was finally rescued by a hook and ladder company. His injuries were slight.

The Carnegie Gift to New York.

NEW YORK, May 8.—A conference was held in the mayor's office to discuss the best means of apportioning among the respective boroughs Andrew Carnegie's gift of $5,200,000 for 65 libraries. It was decided to give 45 libraries to Manhattan and the Bronx and 20 to the other boroughs, leaving the question of location to the borough boards, subject to the approval of the board of estimate.

EASTMAN TESTIFIES.

Alleged Slayer of Grogan on Witness Stand.

UNSHAKEN BY CROSS EXAMINATION

Declares That the Shooting Was Accidental and That His Relations With Brother-in-law Had Always Been Pleasant.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 8.—The climax in the Eastman murder trial was reached yesterday when the defendant himself took the stand to tell his own story and to exchange blow for blow in the cross examination combat with the attorney general. A courtroom crowded to suffocation with attorneys and interested Cambridge citizens, both women and men, saw Eastman's leading counsel carefully direct the accused man to the minor events of his life and that dreadful tragedy which will ever be its chiefest feature. The spectators saw Eastman calmly relate his acquaintance with Grogan, which he declared was always pleasant; saw his horror and emotion as he told of the tragedy and his great grief when he related the deathbed scene on the evening of the last Fourth of July.

Eastman's story was clear and concise, and he wandered but little. He went into no elaborate details, but answered only the questions put to him by his lawyer. For two hours he was on the stand giving his testimony as to his relations with Grogan and the incidents of the fatal day. He declared that the shooting was an accident and that up to last October he had always believed that it was the old rim fire pistol that discharged the bullet which killed his brother-in-law. The struggle which followed, he said, was for the possession of the center fire pistol which Grogan had in his hand. Eastman said that he went to Grogan first to assist him and then, because of the expression on his face, to get the weapon away from him. He said that there was so much noise and confusion in that struggle that he could not recall how many times Grogan's revolver went off, but that it did go off was almost certain. He did not know how he received his own wound, but that he did everything possible after the affair to assist Grogan to the house and was prostrated with grief when he found that he was dying. Up to last October he had always thought that it was the rim fire bullet which had killed his brother-in-law, but the production of a center fire bullet by the state at the grand jury hearing had shaken his belief, until now he was not prepared to say whether it was the rim fire or the center fire from Grogan's pistol which was discharged during the struggle that did the killing.

The day closed with an interesting sparring match between the accused and Attorney General Knowlton. The latter planned his leads in the most subtle manner and executed them with great brilliancy, but he found all his well intentioned blows parried with but few exceptions, and then they drew but little blood.

United States Shipbuilding Company

NEW YORK, May 8.—A circular has been issued by H. W. Poor & Co. regarding the organization of the United States Shipbuilding company under the laws of New Jersey to acquire the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company, the Union Iron works of San Francisco, the Bath Iron works, limited, and the Hude Windlass company of Bath, Me., the Crescent shipyard and the Samuel C. Moore & Sons company of Elizabethport, N. J., and the Canada Manufacturing company of Carterer, N. J. The aggregate of orders now in hand of the constituent companies is said to exceed $63,000,000, covering an average of 18 months for completion, on which the estimated profit is over $7,000,000. The company will be authorized under its charter to issue capital stock as follows: Preferred stock (7 per cent noncumulative), $32,500,000; common stock, $32,500,000.

Foreign Mail Seized In Turkey.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 8.—In consequence of the Ottoman postal authorities having seized foreign mail bags the embassadors of the foreign powers met on Monday to decide what steps should be taken in the matter. It is said that the Russian embassador, M. Zinoview, is prepared to take strong measures against any further attempt at the violation of Russian mail bags. The porte has addressed another note to the embassadors demanding the abolition of the foreign postoffices in Constantinople. It is believed that the sole aim of the porte is to gain control of correspondence from abroad on account of the "Young Turkey" agitation.

Out of Jail at Last.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 8.—James Gannon, the aged man who has been in the Lackawanna county jail for six years for contempt of court, was dismissed from the jail yesterday. Gannon could have had his liberty at any time by simply signing some papers in relation to a sale of real estate, the signing of which would not have injured him in the least. In order to get the old man out of jail it was necessary to have a bill passed through the legislature authorizing an officer of the court to sign the papers.

Verdict For Ethel Bartholomew.

NEW HAVEN, May 8.—A decision awarding the plaintiff $1,000 was rendered in the superior court in the somewhat famous case in which Miss Ethel Bartholomew and her father, James D. Bartholomew, sued Charles J. Parmelee, a Wallingford farmer, for $10,000 for alleged injury to her nervous system by chasing her after dark and crying "Boo!" It is announced that the defendant, who claims that his act was intended as a practical joke, will appeal.

Balloonists Land Safely.

COLOGNE, May 8.—The military captive balloon, with two men in the car, which ascended here Sunday afternoon, broke loose in a gale and was lost to sight in the clouds has descended safely. The occupants of the car were not injured.

Republicans Win In Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, May 8.—The Republicans have elected 18 out of 24 members for the first branch of the city council and all three members for the second branch.

Three Killed by Lightning.

CORDELE, Ga., May 8.—During a thunderstorm here the lightning for a short time was terrific, and three persons were struck and killed.

BRITISH BEEF RULING.

The Foreign Article Excluded From Army Use For Six Months.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Upon being advised about three weeks ago through the press dispatches from London of the exclusion of foreign beef from British army use the state department instructed Embassador Choate to report upon the matter. Information has been received at the department which would indicate that the notice issued by the army contract office of the British war department on April 9 last excluded from army use for six months from June 1 next all foreign beef of every description, whether imported dead or slaughtered in Great Britain.

Dr. Wray, inspector of American cattle, appointed by the department of agriculture, who has investigated the subject, is of opinion that the order when carried into effect will not result in a great or any considerable direct loss to American exporters of beef and cattle for the reason that the domestic supply of beef for all purposes in Great Britain and Ireland is so limited that whatever beef by the new ruling and notice may be shut out from army use necessarily will be absorbed by the general market. There is no oversupply now.

Lackawanna Strike Spreads.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 8.—All the machinist, boiler makers, blacksmiths, engine wipers and roundhouse men and all laborers about the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western machine shops here went on strike at noon yesterday. They demand a nine hour day. Their grievance committee waited upon Superintendent of Motive Power Lloyd during the morning. The answer was a positive refusal. The decision to strike was made at an open air meeting at noon. Word was sent all along the line from Hoboken to Buffalo of the action taken here, and the answer back was that the men at all other points would join them. The number who went out yesterday was about 900, and these with the shopmen who struck on Saturday make fully 2,000 Lackawanna men on strike here.

Fight Over a Paper Mill.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., May 8.—Dr. James Campbell of New York and a Watertown lawyer went to Dexter and demanded possession of the St. Lawrence paper mill, leased by Campbell's father and E. G. Bermingham, who is manager. Bermingham was absent, but the books and money were held in the safe by his superintendent and bookkeeper. The lawyer threatened to blow open the safe with dynamite. The Bermingham faction still hold the premises. They dare not open the safe to pay off the hundreds of employees for fear the books will be seized.

Northern Pacific Soars.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Northern Pacific common was again the sensational figure of the stock market yesterday. In the afternoon it was bid up to 149¾. It closed Monday at 127½, which was a gain of 17½ points over Saturday. The opening yesterday morning was at 127½, but the price quickly shot up and within ten minutes was above 130. By 1 o'clock the shares were selling at 140. At about 1:30 o'clock the stock took a spurt and on comparatively small sales soared to 149¾.

The Australian Celebration.

THE STRICKEN CITY.

Jacksonville Fire Sufferers Receiving Food and Shelter.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 8.—The almost superhuman work of the different committees has somewhat relieved the situation, and it is now believed that in every instance those without proper food and clothing have in a measure been provided for and that last night there was vastly fewer people who were compelled to sleep upon the streets.

Two hundred additional tents were erected, and while they were very crowded last night and while several churches and schoolhouses in the suburbs also were crowded with sleepers this condition also will be relieved today by the arrival of 2,000 tents from the general government at Washington, which Chairman Bours of the housing committee will have erected at once. The military companies have been of great assistance to Mr. Bours with their experience in rapidly erecting tents, and before tonight there will be several tented villages in the city with cots and blankets and a water supply in almost every village for the sufferers. Today there also will be provided several extra commissary stations in various parts of the city to relieve the situation at the two already established, and no doubt there will be one in each village of tents. There has been no outbreak of sickness in the city, and the several cases of nervous prostration which have been reported are now well on the way to recovery.

Thousands of people have left the city. Those remaining will be able to receive some kind of labor at the bureaus which have been established.

Clouds of smoke still envelop the city from the smoldering embers of the conflagration, but many of the buildings have been sufficiently cooled off to allow the safes to be opened, and the books and papers of a great many concerns have been found only slightly scorched. In other cases so intense was the heat that iron safes failed to protect the money or papers. The city and county government officers are all at work again in temporary offices, and a great many of the county papers have been saved.

Twelve carloads of provisions have arrived from New York and are being delivered today.

LEYLAND DEAL CLOSED.

An Englishman's Views of Transatlantic Trade Conditions.

LONDON, May 8.—The Leyland line shareholders at a meeting held here have unanimously confirmed the Morgan-Ellerman agreement.

After Mr. Mattinson, who presided at the meeting, had explained the terms of the contract Mr. Ellerman, chairman of the line, set forth his views on the transatlantic trade.

He said the outlook was not promising for British shipowners, in view of the large American tonnage building, the prospects of the return to that trade of vessels now diverted to South Africa and the probability of an American subsidy.

He did not believe parliament would inflict countervailing duties on subsidized American vessels. Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan's railroad and manufacturing interests would enable him to make the purchase of the Leyland line profitable. Mr. Ellerman said:

"The American shipowner has the advantage of being free from the income tax, which now presses heavily upon the British shipowner. This will be an incentive to any American owning British ships to place them under the American flag when opportunity arises."

To Furnish Coal to French Railway.

BALTIMORE, May 8.—It is learned here from reliable sources that the United States Iron and Steel company of this city has entered into a contract with the Orleans Railway company of Bordeaux, France, by which it is to furnish to the railway company several thousand tons of coal per month. It is understood that this coal was formerly bought in England, but the new export duties to be levied in that country on coal makes it possible for the local company to compete abroad. The United States Iron and Steel company has recently opened up extensive coalfields in Kentucky and large iron mines in South Carolina and will make an active effort for foreign trade.

An Engagement In Luzon.

MANILA, May 8.—Lieutenant John D. L. Hartman, with 63 men of Troop K of the First cavalry, encountered 250 insurgents near the village of Balayan, in Batangas province, Luzon. The enemy made three stands and were each time defeated by the American cavalrymen. There were no American casualties. A navy court of inquiry is investigating the alleged conduct of Lieutenant Richard H. Townley with the case of Captain Reed, who has been tried for official misconduct in connection with the commissary department.

Boston to Aid Jacksonville.

BOSTON, May 8.—Mayor Hart has made public a call for contributions for the relief of the citizens of Jacksonville, Fla. The call was based on a reply received from Jacksonville to a message sent by Mayor Hart. The reply said: "Our people need clothing, money and food; money preferable. No man can conceive of our terrible calamity. Thousands of our most prosperous people have lost everything by the fire."

Standard Oil Dividend.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The Standard Oil company has declared a dividend of $12, payable to stock of record June 15. Standard Oil held steady at 837, the dividend reduction having no effect on the stock. The report has been that a $20 dividend would be declared. The stock has already paid $20 a share this year, and yesterday's dividend makes the total to date $32.

Rations For Fire Sufferers.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The revenue cutter Hamilton, now at Jacksonville, Fla., has been authorized to distribute 1,000 rations to the fire sufferers. The revenue cutter Forward has been ordered from Charleston to Jacksonville and also will distribute rations.

No Treaty, Says Hay.

WICKENBURG, A. T., May 8.—The statement that the state department had delivered a new isthmian canal treaty to the British embassador is officially denied by Secretary Hay.

Electric Light Plants Sold.

OSWEGO, N. Y., May 8.—The Fulton and Oswego electric light and power plants have been sold for $65,000 to Street, Wykes & Co., brokers, of New York city.

KITCHENER GAINING.

General Reports Progress of the African Campaign.

ANOTHER HUNDRED BOERS TAKEN.

Also Guns and Ammunition—Mrs Botha Said to Be Broken In Health by Her Efforts to Secure Peace.

LONDON, May 8.—Lord Kitchener's first long review of the South African operations, dealing chiefly with the invasion of Cape Colony and dated March 8, is published in The Gazette. He says it has been his constant endeavor since taking over the command to improve the fortification works along the lines of communication, thus reducing the guards; also evacuating the garrisons remote from the railroads, thereby obviating convoy escorts. He commandeered upward of 25,000 horses in Cape Colony since December. Lord Kitchener favorably mentions 200 officers, noncommissioned officers and men.

Lord Kitchener reports the capture of another hundred Boers, one 12 pounder, one 9 pounder, one Maxim and a quantity of ammunition.

A dispatch from Pretoria says that Dutch refugees who have arrived there from Pietersburg say the reason that there have been so many Boer surrenders recently is because Commander in Chief Botha wishes to get rid of his weak fighters, who, instead of helping him, are an incumbrance. These refugees say that General Botha recently made an address to the burghers in which he declared that he wished to retain only those who were willing to fight to the finish. The fact remains, however, that the best of the Boer fighters steal away and surrender whenever they have a chance, as they are heartily sick of undergoing hardships without any object in view.

The Daily Chronicle says it learns that the health of Mrs. Botha, wife of Commandant General Botha, has broken down owing to worry and her constant journeys between her husband and Lord Kitchener and that she is about to sail from Delagoa Bay to visit Mr. Kruger and to appeal to him to persuade the Boers to surrender.

It is asserted that Utrecht, Vryheid and probably Wakkerstroom districts will be annexed to Natal.

Milner Sails Today.

CAPE TOWN, May 8.—Sir Alfred Milner will sail today for home on board the British steamer Saxon.

Street Car Lines Tied Up.

ALBANY, May 8.—The lines of the Union Traction company operated in this city, Watervleit and Rensselaer and those extending from this city to those cities and to Troy and Cohoes have been tied up since daybreak yesterday. One of the greatest railroad strikes that have taken place in this section of the state in years is on and threatens to extend. Up to midnight the lines of the company operated in Troy and Cohoes had not been affected, but a strike on those lines is expected. The employees of the company are organized in two unions of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees of America. The strike as ordered by the union is composed of the employees of the Albany, Rensselaer and Watervleit branches of the system.

Canadian Pacific Not In the Market.

MONTREAL, May 8.—Sir William Van Horne, chairman of the board of directors of the Canadian Pacific railway, speaking about a rumor that Morgan and Hill had completed a deal to secure control of the Canadian line, said: "I have no time to answer imaginations of speculators in stocks. Canadian Pacific stock is held by 15,000 or more individuals, and there are not 100 holders who combined could sell control. I do not believe that a dozen are to be found who would if they could. Many think as I do, that the property is good enough to keep. I know very little of the ups and downs of the stock market. I only know that Canadian Pacific is worth more than many other stocks now selling above par."

Russian Agitation Continues.

LONDON, May 8.—A Reuter dispatch from St. Petersburg says the agitation against the government continues, especially among literary and educational circles, some of whose representatives are said to be secretly agitating among the laboring classes. Many arrests and domiciliary visits have been made in this and other cities, and the police are extraordinarily active. The correspondence of several foreign newspaper correspondents and of members of the diplomatic body has been secretly examined, many letters never reaching their destinations."

Half Holiday With Full Pay.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 8.—The General Electric company has made the announcement that it had decided to give its employees a half holiday, with full pay, beginning on Saturday, May 11. A petition asking for this boon has been in circulation for some time, and it is expected that the Schenectady Locomotive works will take similar action.

China Will Need a Loan.

PEKING, May 8.—China will request the powers to obtain for her a loan sufficient to pay the indemnity as soon as the amount thereof is made known. She will also ask for an extra 20,000,000 taels to be provided annually according to the proposition of the foreign ministers.

Another Fight In China.

BERLIN, May 8.—Field Marshal von Waldersee, in a dispatch from Peking, dated Monday, says that Lieutenant Kummer and a cavalry patrol attacked and defeated the enemy's cavalry 200 kilometers west of Kalgan, in Pe-chi-li province.

Ochs Buys Philadelphia Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—Mr. A. S. Ochs of the Chattanooga Times and the New York Times has purchased the Philadelphia Times. His brother, Mr. George W. Ochs, will take the management of the paper.

Comet Will Be Seen In the North.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 8.—A cablegram to the Harvard observatory from Professor Krantz at Kiel observatory says that the comet seen at Cape of Good Hope will appear soon in the northern hemisphere.

Weather Probabilities.

Partly cloudy; probably showers; fresh to brisk southeasterly winds.

A Warning.

The deplorable accident, which resulted fatally for Peter Miller yesterday morning, brings prominently to mind the need of great care on the part of all wheelmen in riding about the city streets. It will probably never be known exactly who was to blame for yesterday's accident. Miller's side can never be heard, and it all happened so quickly that Peter Blaich, who was driving the baker wagon, did not realize what had occurred until the man lay lifeless on the roadway.

It serves, however, as a solemn warning to all bicyclists to pursue their course at a moderate pace, and be content to go a trifle slower, but with safety. So many wheelmen, in Plainfield as well as in other cities, seem to feel it necessary to whirl through the streets at a breakneck pace, without regard for themselves or anyone else. According to the statements of the eye witnesses of the accident, Miller was not "scorching" but was riding at a fairly rapid pace. That hundreds of wheelmen, who do ride very fast, do not meet with similar accidents, is indeed wonderful.

There is a city ordinance which forbids wheelmen from riding on the city streets at a faster pace than eight miles an hour. That ordinance is violated constantly. While it would be impossible to enforce it all over the city without an army of policemen, there are many instances, however, when a local wheelman could be cautioned to pursue a less reckless course through the streets of the business section of the city. The "scorcher" is one of the most dangerous of the results of the general use of bicycles and the public should be protected from him.

Now that Music Hall is no longer available for the commencement exercises of both city and borough High Schools, the Boards of Education on both sides of the brook have made other arrangements. The North Plainfield Board decided that the Y. M. C. A. Hall was the best place for its graduation exercises. Last night the Plainfield Board selected the First Baptist church as the proper place for holding its commencement. The seating capacity of Music Hall was slightly more than 900, while the First Baptist church will seat 1,000 The change will therefore not affect the size of the audience at the exercises. The boroughites will have to reduce the number of their guests considerably in order to suit the number to the capacity of the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

The city street department is making a strong effort to secure the proper numbering of houses all over the city. There is a city ordinance which makes it compulsary for house and store owners to place the number of the building in some conspicuous place where it can be seen from the sidewalk. The street department has announced its intention of enforcing that ordinance after due notice has been given. It is to be hoped that every householder will see that the number of his home is placed where it belongs before the officials of the street department come around.

An interesting election took place at Somerville Monday when the Town Commissioners were chosen. It was particularly interesting from the fact that the officials of the Somerset and Middlesex Traction Company had set about to defeat one of the old Commissioners because he had been particularly active in keeping the company up to the letter of its agreement with the town. His course was justified by his final election over the candidate of the trolley company.

The remarkable popularity which Rev. Theodore S. Henderson won during his stay here has largely influenced the Local Union of Christian Endeavor Societies to secure him as one of the speakers at the annual meeting of that union which will be held shortly. It was also with the idea of keeping alive the enthusiasm which resulted from the Twentieth Century Gospel campaign in Plainfield that Mr. Henderson was selected.

Elizabeth's new water plant will be put into operation this week The plant is located at Summit where thirty wells have been driven. Before the plant is completed, it is expected to increase that number to a hundred. At present, Elizabeth receives part of its water supply from the pumping station of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. This new plant will tend to relieve the drain on the local works.

President J. B. Dumont had some nice things to say about the work of City Collector Smith at the Council meeting Monday evening. There is no doubt but that Mr. Smith is thoroughly in earnest in his attempt to bring into the city's coffers all the funds that rightfully belong there and that his efforts in that direction have been remarkably successful.

Plainfield possesses one of the strongest Exempt Firemen's Associations in the State. The members of that association are now planning to attend the annual gathering of the Exempts from all over the State at Bayonne, May 15, and there is no doubt but that Plainfield will be most worthily represented by them.

Councilman George P. Mellick returned home from Europe just in time to find the new street signs in position. He was highly pleased with them.

According to the terms of the trolley ordinance, it will be just a week before the trolley company will be compelled to sprinkle the city streets.

In the case of Willie Gleason, City Judge Runyon has properly decided that there is a limit to everything.

Colonial Dames Met.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, May 8—The annual meeting of the New Jersey Society of the Colonial Dames of America was held yesterday in the Trenton House in this city. Among the members of the Board of Managers of the society was Mrs. Rowland Cox, of Plainfield. Mrs. Cox has resigned. Mrs. E. G. Putnam, of Elizabeth, has been named to succeed her.

Old Soldier's Experience.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence.)

Dunellen, May 8.—The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Frederick Wilcox were held from her late residence on Front street this afternoon at 2 o'clock. They were conducted by Rev. N. J. Sproul, the pastor of the Presbyterian church, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. He gave a brief and impressive discourse, in which he told of the Christian character and patience of the deceased during a long period of illness. At the close of the service the remains were taken to Plainfield and interred in Hillside cemetery. Those who acted as pallbearers were Charles Vail, of Plainfield, James Bell, of Brooklyn, Ernest Wilcox, of Westfield, and Henry Vail, of the borough.

At the regular meeting of the Borough Council held Monday evening, in addition to the members of that body, the following were appointed special policemen: Adam Dealaman, Charles Wyhusky, A. N. Randolph and John Smalley. They will serve one year. Alex. Vars was appointed borough engineer for the same period.

During the absence of Conductor Charles Dodwell, who is under treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital, Charles Teel has been assigned to the commuters' train which leaves Plainfield at 8:30. The former is improving very slowly.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Trade, which is to be held tomorrow evening, several important matters will be brought up for discussion. All citizens, whether members or not, are invited to be present.

Mrs. Emma Baldwin, who recently passed through a very severe illness, has almost entirely recovered. She is now able to be out of doors a short time each day.

There are letters remaining uncalled for at the postoffice addressed to Smith Jones, Henry Martin and T. A. McCarthy.

Mrs. F. T. Dickerson has returned from a brief visit with relatives at Flemington.

Bert Smith spent yesterday with his grandparents, Mayor and Mrs. R. J. Swackhamer.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence.)

New Market, May 8—The "duck dance," given in Friendship Hall last evening, was a great success. There was a very good attendance, among whom there were a large number from out of town. The affair was conducted under the auspices of a number of young men. It will probably be the last dance in New Market this season.

At the meeting of the Township Committee held in the Hotel Nelson yesterday, Robert L. Pierce was appointed constable for one year. In addition to the payment of a number of bills, no other business of importance was transacted.

J. E. Meeker was in Newark yesterday. While there he visited the Richardson Saw Works and was taken through the entire large plant.

Mrs. Frederick Pangborn, of Plainfield, spent yesterday with her sister, Mrs. Ann Logan.

Mrs. John Slover, of Plainfield, is visiting her sister, Miss Kate VanNest.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence.)

Scotch Plains, May 8—All Saints' P. E. church has never been in better condition than at present. The rector, Rev. Mr Mulford, is very popular with the members of his parish and he is doing a fine work. The services of the church are well attended and there is an increasing interest that is encouraging to both rector and people.

The young people of the Baptist church will give a free social and entertainment in the parlor of the church this evening.

Children's Day, June 9, will be appropriately celebrated in the local churches by the Sunday-schools.

Several local cyclists are in training for a bicycle race to be held in the near future on the county road.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Nicholl, of Mountain avenue, are entertaining friends from out of town.

Mr. Petersen, of Montclair, has returned home after a visit with B. Clark, of Front street.

William Buckley is slowly recovering his strength after a long illness with pneumonia.

The Epworth League Literary Society will meet in the Methodist church this evening.

Horace Pangborn has been entertaining relatives from Plainfield for a short time.

Constable Robert Walpool is now on duty at Elizabeth at the May term of court.

Miss Florence Kyte, who has been quite ill, is slowly recovering her strength.

Miss Ethel Marsh, of Front street, is the guest of Plainfield friends for a time.

Dr. Parks, of Park avenue, has been visiting Plainfield friends for a short time.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

(Special Correspondence.)

South Plainfield, May 8—Harry Weaver, who was appointed as manager and captain of a proposed baseball team for the Middlesex Athletic Club, of South Plainfield, has been unable to find sufficient material for a team. The club is not in the financial condition necessary to hire outside talent, and therefore the outlook for baseball in this town is not very good. The club, although organized chiefly for the support of baseball, may not disband.

At the business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society last night, reports were heard from the different committees. Miss Lizzie Dayton resigned her position as treasurer, and Harry J. Manning was elected to fill the vacancy.

Seventy-five new books have been purchased to replenish the Baptist Sunday-school library. These, together with a large number now on hand, will make a good sized collection.

John McGuire will retain his old position as lampman at the Lehigh Valley Railroad yards, and will not at present accept one as trainman, as formerly expected.

Mrs. William Manning was in attendance yesterday at the auction of her brother's household goods in Jersey City.

Georgia Brantingham has secured a position with the glove manufacturing concern in the Babcock building, Plainfield.

Bethume Dunham is employed at carpentering and repairing on William E. Manning's place.

WELCOMED NEW TEACHER.

Reception Given to William Symons at Hope Chapel Last Evening.

The two adult Bible classes of Hope chapel tendered a reception last evening to William Symons, the newly-appointed teacher of the women's class. During the fore part of the evening a pleasing programme was given, consisting of a piano duet by Miss Jessie Chamberlain and Miss Lillie Duckworth; vocal solos by Miss Chamberlain and William N. Runyon; recitations by Mrs. William Symons; addresses by Rev. G. K. Newell, Silas Yerkes, the retiring teacher, and Mr. Symons. The different numbers were greatly enjoyed by the large number present.

At the close refreshments were served and an hour was spent by the teacher and pupils in becoming better acquainted. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. Hattie Sweeney, chairman; Mrs. J. B. Higgins, Mrs. Robert Hangliter, Mrs. Robert Gow, Mrs. August Weber, Mrs. George Radford and Mrs. Elizabeth Firstbrook.

PUPILS' RECITAL.

Charming Affair Given in Studio of E. Arthur Janke Last Evening.

The younger pupils of E. Arthur Janke's class gave a delightful piano recital at his studio, 931 West Sixth street, last evening. There was a very large attendance from among the best families in the city and the borough, and all thoroughly enjoyed the programme as rendered. The various numbers were given with true expression reflecting much credit on Mr. Janke, whose faithful efforts and careful instruction produced such favorable results. One thing that was noticed by all was the uniform instruction evidenced by all the pupils. Some of the selections were very difficult, yet they were given in a masterly manner.

The pupils who presented the programme were the Misses Evelyn Wells, Amy Sampson, Queena Tillotson, Linda Cave, Eva Browne, Rose Woltmann, Maysie Day and Florence Beebe, Walter Foster and Effingham A. Pinto. They were all generously applauded in their efforts and at the close of the recital much praise was accorded them by their friends. The third pupil recital will be given Tuesday evening, May 14, at Mr. Janke's studio.

To Arrange for Summer Services.

There will be an official board meeting this evening at the First M. E. church, at which time arrangements will be made for the summer schedule of services. The pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, will take his vacation earlier this year as he takes charge of A. V. D. Honeyman's tourist party in a trip abroad. The party will start in June.

Insured in the Prudential.

Peter Miller, of Cottage place, who was accidentally killed yesterday morning, had only just taken out an insurance policy in the Prudential Company through C. E. Ball, the local agent. The amount of the policy was $150 but Mrs. Miller will only receive $61 as the policy was but six months old.

More Aid Received.

Contributions still continue to arrive for the destitute family in the borough for whom an appeal was made recently. Those who are interested in the family appreciate the response and will see that relief is promptly given.

JUVENILE ORCHESTRA.

Organized to Play at Local Church and Society Entertainments.

A juvenile orchestra is being organized in this city in connection with several different churches and societies. A competent band master has been engaged to teach them. E. C. Howard will play the piano and Herbert Smith, of West Fifth street, will lead them. It is expected by Harvey S. Lewis, the manager, that there will be ten different instruments and sixteen players. The object of the orchestra is to furnish music at the different church and society entertainments throughout the summer and next fall. Already some prominent ministers and church leaders are interested and are ready to back the organization. All communications should be addressed to H. S. Lewis, this city.

—The teachers of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. E Vail, 1002 Putnam Avenue.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., May 6, 1901.

A Supplement to an Ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance to License Inns and Taverns and to Regulate and Prohibit the Sale of Spirituous and Fermented Liquors," approved February 10, 1892, and amended April 1, 1894, and February 7, 1901,

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That license, to be known as special hotel license, may be granted to any person duly licensed to keep an inn and tavern in said City, to sell spirituous and fermented liquors to guests at their meals served between the hours of 6 o'clock a m., and 11 o'clock p. m., in the regular dining room of said inn and tavern, in connection with and as part of such meals and in no other manner and at no other time or place. All applications for such license shall be in writing, addressed to the Common Council, signed by the applicant, setting forth the purpose for which such license is asked and the location of the dining room wherein said spirituous and fermented liquors are proposed to be furnished to guests as aforesaid, and the hours for regular meals, and such application shall have annexed thereto a certificate similar to that required by section 4 or section 25 of the ordinance to which this is a supplement. Said license shall expire on the first day of March following the granting of such license, and the fee to be paid therefor shall be the sum of One Hundred Dollars, in addition to the fee of One Dollar to the Mayor and One Dollar to the City Clerk.

Section 2. That no person or persons licensed under section 1 of this ordinance, shall keep a bar-room, or bar, or expose for sale, sell or dispose, or permit to be exposed for sale, sold or disposed of, directly or indirectly, any spirituous or fermented liquors, or any composition of which spirituous or fermented liquors shall form a part, at any place other than the regular dining room of his inn and tavern specified in the application for such license, or at any time other than the hours for regular meals specified in said application, or to any person or persons other than those then and there partaking of such meal or meals, or otherwise than as part of such meal or meals, and any person or persons who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance shall, on conviction, be fined in a sum not exceeding One Hundred Dollars, or imprisoned for a term not exceeding sixty days, or either or both at the discretion of the Court.

"Ever since that awful day when you introduced me to her in the drawing-room. I had never dreamed that God intended you for anyone but me. You had been my whole life, and even afterwards, when I saw the hold she had on you, I could not keep from suffering. The pain, the loss was with me night and day. I hated her; I despised myself. I planned a thousand times to leave, but I could not tear myself away, because I saw your soul in danger. I saw her day by day leading you downward instead of upward, as I had dreamt of doing. I knew how charitable you had been before your marriage—how many poor people you had helped, and I saw her drawing you away from such impulses by her sharp, heartless ridicule."

"And now that she is no longer—no longer—here?" Goddard could not pronounce the word which lay on his tongue like a weight.

"Now that she is out of our way I shall pray God to help me exercise a better influence over you."

"You have always done that," he said. "Do with me as you will. I am a very bad man, Blanche; a very wicked man. If you knew me as I am you would despise me for my wickedness, as you despised her for hers."

"You never had a fault till she crossed your path, dear guardian, and nothing you have done since is going to count." She spoke lightly, and smiled as she laid her head on his shoulder.

The next day was Sunday, and as Miss Dean had gone home, they drove alone to the village, about two miles distant, to attend church. Blanche had never looked so well. The crisp air brought the blood into her cheeks and blew her hair into a froth of gold about her eyes and brow.

"Perhaps we ought not to drive so far," he said, solicitously, as they were entering the carriage. "Do you think Dr. Fleming would approve of it?"

"He said outdoor exercise was what I needed most," answered Blanche. "Don't worry about me; the medicine he prescribed is making me strong again. Did you notice the breakfast I ate? I was ashamed of my appetite."

He was silent a moment as they drove along, then he gravely said:

"I want you to go to a good physician to-morrow and ask his advice.

HE SAT STARING AT THE WORDS FOR SEVERAL MINUTES.

It has been some time since you saw Dr. Fleming."

"Oh, don't begin that," said Blanche, pretending to pout. "I am getting along beautifully."

"But I—I want—you must see a doctor," he stammered. "I shall feel better now to know that everything is being done that should be done for you."

"You talk as if I were going to die," said the girl. "Why, I've just begun to live."

For a moment he looked confused. He could not reveal his real fears, and yet he was now deeply troubled about her condition.

"Of course, it isn't anything serious," he said; "but still to please me you will let me send for Dr. Fralich."

"No, I don't know him, and I don't like to make new acquaintances. Besides, Dr. Fleming is coming to New York in about ten days. I promised faithfully to see him when he returned."

"How do you know he is coming?" asked the major, in surprise.

"I had a note from him yesterday. He explained that he was coming to New York earlier than he expected, owing to a sudden change in his plans. I will go to see him, if you insist on it, but I know he will tell me I have taken enough of his tonics."

"Well, that will do," said Goddard, reluctantly. He thought of the crimson pictures in the medical book he had consulted, and his heart sank. After all, his new-found happiness was only to end in her death, and then—

Goddard's meditations about Blanche always stopped there. He had shut his real wife out of his thoughts as men who are striving for better things shut out the memory of past evil deeds and associations.

That night when the house was still and he found himself alone in his study he forced himself to the task of communicating with Jeanne. And as I can in no better way reveal the workings of his heart, I shall reproduce the letter word for word.

In beginning it he wrote "Dear Jeanne," but there he stopped abruptly, and sat staring at the words for several minutes, then he tore the sheet into small bits and let them filter through his fingers. His letter began simply as follows:

"Well, I have at last done your bidding. I was a madman. I confess that—the very flames of hell had scorched my brain. I have committed an unspeakable crime against the purest, loveliest creature that God ever gave life to. You will be surprised perhaps to find that I have changed so quickly, and really I have changed completely. The scales have fallen from my sight. I feel like a man who has been hypnotized and wakes to find he has murdered his best friend. I despise myself as no mortal ever despised himself before. I now know that my passion for you was the blindest, most insane infatuation that ever dragged the soul of a man from an atmosphere of hope down into the mire of hellish despondency. I now know that my love for my ward was the only pure love I have ever experienced. Yes, I loved her when I met you, and I love her now with all the tortured soul within me. I have wronged her as no man ever wronged a pure, unsuspecting woman, but as her life will be of such short duration, if I can prevent it she shall never know of the stain I have put upon her fair name. While she lives I shall lavish all the tenderness of my soul on her, praying to God that I may in that way atone a little—a very little—for my crime against her. She married me to comfort me in my loneliness; I married her at the bidding of an intriguer of the most unpardonable type. I would confess all at this moment but for the fear that the shock would kill her. How could I tell her that you are alive, and that I am not her legal husband?

"I would not write to you now, but for the fact that it is due you to know the stand I have taken, and that we must now thoroughly understand each other in regard to Blanche's fortune. As God is my judge I do not want her money, and as God is my judge you shall never lay your covetous hands upon it. I shall at once take precautions to see that, at her death, the money shall go to her blood relatives. As to you, I shall never willingly see you again, nor write you another line from this day forth. I see my duty and I shall do it. Any letter you write me will be returned to you unopened. Do your worst. If you wish to publish to the world that you and I have played on its credulity, do so, I shall then confess to the part I took in your scheme. As much as I now hate you, I would not let you bear all the blame. I am as guilty as you because I am a man. I herewith enclose a draft payable to Mrs. Nolan; it is all the money I can send you now. I am about to enter into a speculation in railway stock and if it turns out well I shall send you more money. You are my wife and I shall provide for you as well as my own means will allow, but of Blanche's money you nor I shall ever have one penny. I shall try to get means out of my own resources to keep you quiet at least as long as Blanche lives, but you need not look to me for large remittances. I am not exactly under your thumb; your threats of exposure will not frighten me. I am desperate. I want Blanche to know what I am. I cannot face her pure eyes and know that I am as vile as the deepest dyed convict. The sooner you make the whole thing known the better I shall be pleased.

"ROWLAND GODDARD."

Mrs. Nolan was standing in the door of the little gray brick cottage when the postman handed this communication to her. Recognizing the handwriting she took it unopened to Mrs. Goddard, who was restlessly walking in the little, high-walled garden in the rear of the house.

"Ah," she exclaimed, "he has written!"

"Yes, it is from him," said the angular woman, approaching slowly.

Mrs. Goddard tore open the envelope. She had hardly read a dozen lines before she uttered a little scream, and then, with quivering hands and expanding eyes, she continued to read.

"What is the matter?" asked Mrs. Nolan.

"Matter enough," answered Mrs. Goddard, clenching her hands and grating her teeth together. "Matter enough. He has married the girl, but has already—already fallen in love with her, and now he wants to throw me over."

"Didn't you expect that?" asked Mrs. Nolan, whose innate dislike for her mistress often fostered opposition to her plans.

"It was the last thing I did expect—the very last."

"Your egotism has undone you, Jeanne," said Mrs. Nolan with no little cautious unction. "I had no sooner laid my eyes on that beautiful young creature than I knew if he ever was in love with her once he would be again."

"For mercy's sake, dry up!" commanded the furious woman. "This is no time for you to lecture me. Do you know that we shall be stranded here without money enough to keep us? Do you know that he defies me to expose the matter and that he swears I shall never touch the girl's money."

The Aeroscope.

Among the scientific toys at the Paris exposition was an instrument named the "aeroscope." It consisted of a wooden paddle about 6½ feet long and three inches broad, whitened with chalk, and turning about its middle at the rate of 1,500 turns in a minute. When in motion the paddle resembled a thin, circular screen through which objects could be seen. At a distance of nearly four feet behind the whirling paddle and parallel to its plane of rotation was fixed a black screen. The apparatus being placed in a dark chamber, a brilliant photographic image of some object was projected upon the moving paddle, and immediately the image seemed to stand forth with all the solidity of a real object. The perspective was supplied by the reflection of the image from the black screen behind as well as from the semitransparent screen formed by the rotating paddle.—Scientific American.

"Jingo" Is Persian.

"If you turn up the Persian dictionary," writes a correspondent in India, "you will find the word 'jang-jo (pronounced 'jung-jo'), from 'jang,' war or strife, and 'jo,' one who follows after; the meaning of the full word being 'aggressive, offensive, litigious, contentious, quarrelsome.'" Unfortunately I have not got a Persian dictionary; but if I may take this information on trust, it throws valuable light on a mooted point of etymology. The word written "jang-jo," and pronounced "jung-jo" in Persian, has obviously become "jingo" in English, in which form it still means "aggressive, offensive, contentious, quarrelsome." The fact that the last syllable was in the original "jo" (sometimes, no doubt, written "Joe"), and that this Jo, or Joe, in the sense of a follower of war or strife, has become merged in the English "Jingo," is a curious and interesting scientific discovery.—London Truth.

Irrigation for Indian Benefit.

The fact that the government is taking a hand in providing adequate irrigation systems for the Indian tribes is a step in the right direction, demonstrating what can be accomplished in the arid region by the storage of water. Private enterprise has already shown this, but the government is generally slow to see and to act upon proof furnished by private parties, and it is well that it is making a few experiments in the same line that will enable it to draw conclusions and comparisons. If that much is being done for the Indians, a good deal more should be done for reclaiming the public land and thus making it of value to the homeseeker.—Santa Fe New Mexican.

Postal Franchise for Soldiers.

France has enacted a new law which will permit a soldier and sailor of France to send two simple letters per month post free. To carry out this project and in order that the stamps may not be utilized by others a series of new stamps is to be produced. They will bear across the vignette the two letters E. M., "franchise militaire," and in order to prevent the sale of these stamps a regulation has been issued to the effect that the soldier and sailor must deliver his stamped letter to the baggagemaster—vaguemestre—who will see that they are duly posted.—N. Y. Herald.

A Second Androclus.

A newspaper at Kastamuni states that while a peasant was shooting in a forest near that place he heard the growling of a bear, which he found under a tree suffering great pain from a large thorn in his paw. The animal permitted the sportsman to extract the thorn, and showed its gratitude by taking the man, by means of waving its paw, to a tree in which was a honeycomb 20 pounds in weight.—Ceylon Muhammadan.

Not the Same.

Tess—I understand Mr. Krusty actually paid me a compliment.

Jess—Really?

"Why, yes. May Garbell, who told me, said you heard it, too. He said he thought I'd find enough men in the world who'd be just crazy to marry me."

"May got it twisted a bit. He said he thought you'd find men in the world who'd be just crazy enough to marry you."—Philadelphia Press.

MAKING TAPESTRY SOCIETY'S LATEST FAD

Tent-worke, Raised worke, Laid-worke, Frost-worke, Net worke,
Most curious Purls and rare Italian Cut-worke,
Fine Ferne stitch, Finny stitch, New stitch and Chainstitch,
Brave Bred stitch, Fisher stitch, Irish stitch and Queen stitch,
The Smarting Whip stitch, Back stitch, and Cross stitch,
All these are good, and these we must allow,
And these are everywhere in practice now.
—"The Needle's Excellency," John Taylor.

This quaint old verse is equally appropriate now that society people have taken up the fad of making tapestry. To collect tapestries was always a hobby of the very rich, but to make them was a different matter. The gentle art seemed to have died with our ancestors. Now, however, all is changed. Antique frames are dragged from their hiding places, faded silks and wools are brought to light, and yellowed samplers are eagerly studied for the secrets of their fairylike stitches. As for the woman who has no great-grandmother's work to go by, there is only one course open to her—she joins the tapestry class which is held in somebody or other's studio and where the obliging instructor receives prices as fabulous as those of bridge whist teachers.

"Yes," said one of these instructors when I called at his studio. "Some of our pupils turn out really beautiful work. Look at this chair back for instance. When the square for the seat is finished, both pieces will be sent to a fashionable upholsterer, and then my pupil will possess a unique chair in her boudoir. She will have the satisfaction also of exhibiting it to her friends as her own work. Look at this screen," he continued, pointing to a delicate affair in a pompadour design of big baskets of flowers. "This is all done on the finest of canvas with heavy tapestry silk. Yes, it took a long time to make; but, then, Mrs. M. is going to give it to her daughter as a wedding present. It is a gift any one ought to be proud of."

"Can you use tapestry for smaller articles?" I inquired.

"Why, certainly. Look at this Elizabethan design. It is for a book cover. The medallion representing the queen playing her lute will occupy the center of the front cover. Then these two squares in pomegranate pattern are for glove boxes, and this silk Persian design will make a dainty cardcase. That is the latest thing, you know. Then, we make any number of cushions, coverlets and jewel boxes."

"Can you tell me some of the stitches most used?

"They are very simple and date from the earliest times. For backgrounds there is the cushion stitch, so called because it was used in the middle ages for the praying cushion which ladies of the nobility carried to church with them; the tent stitch, which is half of the familiar cross stitch; the Gobelin stitch, which resembles the tent stitch save that it is two threads in height and only one in breadth. Then, too, there is the openwork background, in which the threads of the canvas are covered with buttonhole work. As for the figures, they are often worked separately and then appliqued with a fine cross stitch. The faces are done in silk split stitch, which gives a surface like satin. The knot stitch is used for the hair and for sheep and long haired animals. The plush stitch is used as a decoration for the garments of the figures, and for this the ends of several loops are cut and allowed to fray out. In the old tapestries peacocks' feathers were frequently employed and also beads and hand painting. Yes, tapestry is a wonderful art, and the more you study it the more interesting it becomes. Why, some of the fashionable women who come here are so fascinated by it that they have their portraits taken seated at their frames. Tapestry work gives a woman a graceful pose and makes her look attractive, so I suppose that is half the secret of the fad."

MAUD ROBINSON.

MAN TREED BY LIONS

Cyclist in Central Africa Had Hair-Raising Experience.

Made Quick Climb Up a Small Mapondа—Lost Sample of His Trousers as He Reached a Safe Place —Cub Liked Bicycle.

It falls to the lot of but few men to come so near to a violent death and yet escape unharmed as was the case with J. A. Smith, who had been working as a mechanical engineer at the Inez mine, in central Africa. Having finished the work for which he had been engaged, he left the Inez intending to cycle into Salisbury, stopping for a couple of days at the Great Bear. He left the latter place for Gadzima, traveling along the line of railway extension. On his way Mr. Smith received a shock which he will not forget for many a long day. About 50 yards away and slightly to the right were three lions, so intent on stalking a herd of zebus that they were not looking in the direction where he was resting.

It was an awkward position, to say the least, and for a brief space he stood like one petrified, but, although his limbs for a moment were dumb, his mind was active enough. The largest of the three was a huge black-maned lion, the second was a lioness while the third was an almost full grown cub. The cub was the first to observe Mr. Smith, and, uttering a low growl, he made for the unhappy man, who, dropping his bicycle stayed not on the order of his going but went for a friendly tree at top speed. He had just time to notice that the parent lions had started in the wake of their young hopeful, the sight, as may be imagined, only serving to accelerate his pace.

The tree was but a short distance away, but to the hunter it appeared a mile. It was destitute of branches for about ten feet up, and how he managed to climb it at all will forever remain a mystery to him. Just as he thought himself safe, however, there was a terrific roar behind him and he had an uncanny feeling that he was being dragged off the tree. The lion, outstripping his mate in the chase, had made his spring, missing his quarry by a few inches only. Even as it was his claws tore away the greater part of Mr. Smith's trousers and inflicted several fairly deep scratches—a narrow escape, indeed. Exhausted and panting, with the perspiration streaming out of him, he managed to draw himself up into comparative security, and here for nearly an hour he remained, while the baffled lion, now joined by the lioness, raged below.

At first Mr. Smith could not understand what had become of the young lion which went for him first, and for the fact that he was not in a position to appreciate the humor of the thing, he witnessed a sight which must have been comical in the extreme, although to it alone he is firmly convinced his life was due.

It seems that Leo Jr. stopped halfway to examine the bicycle, which had been flung down hastily, with the result that the front wheel was still revolving. This arrested the young lion's attention, and, like a child with a new toy, he turned aside to examine this curious phenomenon. Cautiously giving it a pat with one of his huge paws, which only made it go round faster, his wonder increased, and he sat down on his haunches, regarding it with a puzzled air, and not for some time did he join the parent couple at the foot of the tree, but not until he had "mouthed" the machine considerably and twisted the handlebar.

During the tenure of his unpleasant perch Mr. Smith cast many wistful glances in the direction of his double-barreled gun, which was strapped to his bicycle, but it might as well have been a hundred miles away. He cast his eyes about in order to discover some place of retreat as soon as the lions should retire, and, to his great joy, saw a hut some 300 yards away. Just before dark his captors began to pay less attention to him, and, scenting the zebu again, they finally left, to the extreme relief of their unfortunate prisoner.

After waiting for about half an hour, until everything was quiet, Mr. Smith cautiously descended, and, not daring to go back for his gun, fearfully made his way to the hut referred to, making quick sprints from tree to tree. There was no roof, and the hut was but a flimsy structure, but, after making the entrance as secure as possible, and kindling a big fire, he soon dropped off to sleep. At daybreak he was able to resume his journey, eventually reaching Gadzime and Salisbury in safety.

A DAY IN ARIZONA.

President Has Many Pleasant Experiences and Awakes In California.

PHENIX, A. T., May 8.—The presidential party spent an interesting day in Arizona. The beautiful turquoise sky, bright sunshine and invigorating air afforded the party much relief after the hot and dusty ride of the previous day. The two hours in the morning at the Congress gold mine up in the clouds of the Blue Tank mountains were replete with incidents and were thoroughly enjoyed. A large American flag was draped across the tunnel through which the president passed, and after he emerged he told the little group of miners who congregated about the train that he had seen Old Glory floating from tower and statehouse and arsenal in many different places, but that never before during his life had he seen the American flag 1,500 feet underground. Leaving the rich mining section in the mountains 4,000 feet above sea level, the train dropped down into the green Salt River valley, with its waving alfalfa meadows and big herds of cattle. This valley is called the Garden Spot of Arizona and was reclaimed by irrigation. Monday, passing through New Mexico, and yesterday, in Arizona, the cow punchers at the stopping places along the route inquired vociferously where "Teddy" was. Many of the vice president's rough riders during the Spanish war were recruited in this section, and there was much disappointment that he was not in the party.

At Wickenburg, the scene of the recent gold mine strike, the train was halted long enough to permit the president to receive a visit from the school children. The children presented Mrs. McKinley with a cabinet of specimens. The president thanked the children in Mrs. McKinley's behalf and addressed them briefly.

An accident to the locomotive tender delayed the arrival at Phenix two hours and somewhat disarranged the programme there. Nevertheless the party received a rousing welcome. Governor Murphy and the territorial officers had met the party at the Congress mine and accompanied them back to Phenix. At the station the territorial militia, a company of cowboys on bronchos and some of the friendly Pima and Maricopa Indians joined in a wildly enthusiastic reception. The party was driven to the Adams' hotel for luncheon and afterward was escorted to the territorial capitol, where the formal exercises took place.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the presidential party resumed its journey. The departure was so timed that the Colorado desert and old basin of the gulf of California, below sea level and barren of all vegetation, would be traversed during the night. The Colorado river, which is the boundary of Arizona, was crossed at Yuma, and the party awoke this morning in California. Redlands, the first stop, was reached at 9 a. m.

Female Strikers Riot.

DERBY, Conn., May 8.—Two serious demonstrations occurred in the strike of the textile workers at the Paugasset mills. At noon yesterday Mrs. Ambrose Griffiths, who has been teaching the girls who have taken the places of the strikers, was set upon by several hundred women, led by two of Mrs. Griffiths' sisters, and was followed to her home amid cries of "Scab!" and the tooting of horns. At 6 o'clock a more serious disturbance took place, when the strikers attempted to mob Amy Briggs, one of the recently employed women. The police anticipated the action of the women and formed a cordon about Miss Briggs at the factory gate. So accompanied and followed by a throng, which was augmented until it numbered 3,000, she made her way to the Shelton bridge, where the Derby police had to leave her. Here she was surrounded more closely, and threats of violence were made, but she ultimately escaped when persons in the crowd became engaged in a fight among themselves.

Drugged and Robbed.

NEW YORK, May 8.—One of the most daring crimes perpetrated in this city in a long time was reported to the police yesterday afternoon. The man who committed it is at liberty, without leaving a trace for the police, and one of his victims is said to be dying in Bellevue hospital. Tony Sangeorge, a shoemaker, and a man supposed to be Sylvester Getto were working in Sangeorge's shop, when a man who was unknown to them called and had a pair of shoes fixed. He offered in payment a bill of large denomination. Sangeorge pulled out $200 in small bills, whereupon the man said he would get his bill changed and buy a pint of beer. He returned with the beer in a few minutes, and when the shoemakers drank it they were almost at once made unconscious. The man fled with Sangeorge's $200. Getto recovered, but Sangeorge was taken to Bellevue hospital in a dying condition.

Gage Buys More Bonds.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Secretary Gage continues to buy short term government bonds as fast as they are offered at his price. He purchased three lots yesterday aggregating $502,050. It is thought at the treasury that as money becomes tighter in New York offers to sell bonds will be more free and that eventually $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 will be expended by the treasury, as was contemplated when the bond purchases commenced.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Leal's School nine and the Rutgers Preparatory School nine will cross bats at New Brunswick this afternoon.

The third class of the Plainfield High School defeated the class of 1905 in a loosely played game of baseball on Martine Common yesterday afternoon. The score was 14 to 10.

The high winds Saturday afternoon were accountable in a measure for the large scores made in the several games. It was extremely difficult for a fielder to catch a fly under the conditions presented.

Fred Armstrong, the handy third baseman of the North Plainfield High School team, has been detained at his home during the past few days by an injured ankle. In the game against the Hope chapel team Saturday Armstrong sprained his ankle in sliding to second base. He finished the game out, but since then he has been unable to bear his weight on the injured member until yesterday when he returned to school.

A large crowd is expected to witness the game of baseball to be played this afternoon between the teams representing the city and the borough High School athletic associations. VanAuken and Moynahan will be the Plainfield High School team's battery while Crite and George will act in a like capacity for the nine from over the brook. These are the only High School teams in this vicinity. This together with the fact that the improvement recently made by each team forbids any prediction of the outcome, will serve to draw many spectators.

GOLF.

Edward Ericksen, of Netherwood, has taken the position of expert at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. He will also look after the caddie boys.

W. L. Glenney, a member of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and a student at Columbia College, is a member of the golf team representing Columbia in the intercollegiate play at Atlantic City this week.

End of Martine Common.

The contest between the baseball nines of the city and borough High Schools this afternoon will mark the last game to be played on Martine Common. Friday the diamond will be ploughed through in constructing a street from Park to Hillside avenues, to be known as Evergreen avenue.

—Skin affections will readily disappear by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Look out for counterfeits. If you get DeWitt's you get good results. It is the quick and positive cure for piles. L. W. Randolph.

NO INQUEST.

County Physician Westcott Decided None Was Necessary in Case of Peter Miller.

County Physician Westcott, of Fanwood, came to this city yesterday afternoon and viewed the remains of Peter Miller, who was killed by colliding with a bakery wagon early yesterday morning. After making an examination he declared no inquest was necessary and granted a burial permit.

Peter Blaich, the driver of the wagon, told a straightforward story of the affair showing it was purely accidental. He was exonerated from any blame.

The examination revealed the fact that death was caused by an inward hemorrhage. One of the ribs on the right side had been forced in to the lung. Several other ribs were broken and these constituted the entire injuries.

SOCIAL TEA.

Given by Miss Dunham in Honor of Her Guest, Miss Allen.

Miss Daisy Dunham, of 218 Richmond street, gave a social tea last evening in honor of Miss Maude Allen, of Brooklyn. The evening was pleasantly passed and an excellent programme of vocal and instrumental music was presented.

Among those present were Miss Mildred Billings, of New York; Geo. Wickoff, of Bayonne; Miss May Syphax, of Newark; Miss May Kline, Miss Grace Bowser, Miss Nome Reed, Miss Courtney Brooks, Wm. Kline, Jr., Jackson Hedgeman, Thomas Bowser, Jr., and Walter Peterson, of this city.

Pastor Has Disappeared.

The Fillmore Avenue Baptist church is at present without a pastor. The minister formerly holding the position, Rev. W. H. McLean, has not been seen since two weeks ago Sunday evening, when he preached as usual. None of his congregation or any of his friends know of his whereabouts, and unless he returns shortly a new pastor will have to be appointed.

Ready to Put Wires Underground.

The wooden conduits to be used on Somerset street by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company have arrived. Hand & Son, the local truckmen, have conveyed them to the lot adjoining the firm's stables on East Second street, where the conduits will be stored temporarily.

Charged With Theft.

Arthur VanNest, of Monroe avenue, was arrested this morning on complaint of Paul Tabbert, of West Eighth street. The latter claims the boy stole a watch and chain from his residence a few days ago. VanNest will be tried before Justice Nash this afternoon.

Arrested For Being Drunk.

John Giles was arrested at noon today by Patrolman McCarthy for drunkenness. He will be given a hearing tomorrow morning.

The twenty-ninth annual session of the A. M. E. conference, of New Jersey, which was held at the Spring Street church at Morristown, was concluded Monday. Among the appointments made by Bishop Derrick, was that of Rev. Mr. Smith, of New Brunswick, to Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, of this city. The present pastor, Rev. J. W. Cooper, was transferred to Atlantic Highlands. The change will take effect Sunday.

Among those who attended the session from this city were Mrs. Henrietta Grobes and daughter, Mrs. Charles Henry, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Maynard, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dunham and William Downs.

DRAGGED IN RUNAWAY.

J. Adrain Waterbury Had Narrow Escape From Serious Injury.

J. Adrain Waterybury, the junior partner of the firm of Kirstin & Company, had a narrow escape from serious injury while driving on the road near New Market last evening.

Mr. Waterbury's horse became unmanageable and collided with a hay wagon, upsetting his vehicle and throwing him heavily on the road. He was dragged a distance of sixty feet before he could release himself. The wagon was somewhat scratched and one tire torn. Mr. Waterbury sustained no injury except a few bruises.

Nearly a Fire.

A hanging lamp left burning last evening in the bootblack parlors of John Webber, of North avenue, nearly caused a serious conflagration about 1 o'clock this morning. The lamp was burning fiercely when Frank Lawrence, of the Hotel Imperial, discovered it. He summoned Patrolman Myers, but the lamp burned out before an entrance to the place was effected. The ceiling and walls were badly scorched.

Dr. Lewis Will Deliver Address.

Another meeting of the committees, in charge of the arrangements for the Memorial Day celebration, was held last evening in Comrade Moffett's office. It was announced that Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis would deliver the address at the afternoon exercises to be held at Reform Hall. All the committees reported progress in the various details. The next and last meeting will be held Tuesday evening, May 21.

STRANGE MYSTERY SOLVTD

CHILD BURIED IN PUBLIC DUMP CAME FROM ORANGE.

Supposed That Undertaker Buried it There to Save Expense—Nothing Wrong About Death.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, May 8—It is not at all likely that any official action will be taken regarding the burial of an infant in the public dump at this place a few days ago. The case was put in the hands of County Detective John Keron and an investigation by him disclosed the names of the parents who live at Orange.

Mr. Keron, in conversation with a Daily Press reporter, said today that he had promised not to give out the names of the parents or the undertaker. He had found everything regular up to the time of burial. The infant was prematurely born dead. The proper certificate was furnished by the physician as well as by the city clerk of Orange, where the parents live, but why the undertaker should select a public dumping ground at this place to bury the child is something that cannot be understood.

He was given a burial certificate and the parents believed that the child would be given a decent burial. The supposition is that he did so to save expenses. Since the disclosures the child has been removed and buried in the proper place at Orange. It is understood that the undertaker's name was R. Newton French.

HE FORGOT.

Jacob Goodmyer Walked Away From the Bakery Without Paying For His Purchases.

It is an unfortunate thing for Jacob Goodmyer that he is absent minded, for it sometimes leads him into trouble. This was the case yesterday afternoon when he selected a number of articles at Warnock's bakery and after having them wrapped up, walked away without paying for them. The attendant naturally objected, but Goodmyer insisted that he had paid although he did not know how much owing to his forgetfulness.

Patrolman Flynn took him into custody and this morning he was arraigned before City Judge Bunyon. His story of the occurrence was very conflicting and he was given the preference of $5 or twenty days. He took the latter.

Bryan Congratulated Him.

J. E. Martine received today a letter from William J. Bryan congratulating him on his suggested nomination for governor of New Jersey and expressing the hope that he may succeed, also expressing his wishes for the success of the Democracy.

MR. BERGEN'S LETTER TO CHAIRMAN TOLLES.

Full Text of the Communication From President of Plainfield Water Supply Company.

READ AT COUNCIL MEETING.

WAS ORDERED PUBLISHED IN FULL BY THE COUNCIL.

Contains Some Subjects of Great Interest to All Citizens of Plainfield—Lengthy History of the Water Works.

Every Plainfielder will be interested to read what Frank Bergen, president of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, has to say about the local water works and the question of municipal ownership. This communication or statement was prepared at the request of Councilman R. I. Tolles, chairman of the committee on streets and sewers. It was read at Monday evening's Council meeting and ordered published in full.

It is as follows:

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE PLAINFIELD WATER SUPPLY COMPANY

TO THE

CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON STREETS AND SEWERS OF THE COMMON COUNCIL OF PLAINFIELD.

Elizabeth, N. J., April 24, 1901.

Ralph I Tolles, Esq., Chairman Committee on Streets and Sewers, Plainfield, N J:

Dear Sir—In compliance with your request for a statement of the position of the Plainfield Water Supply Company in regard to rates charged for water, I beg to say:

In December, 1889, the city of Plainfield entered into a contract with the Plainfield Water Works Company, a corporation organized under a general law of this State, whereby the company agreed to construct and operate a system of water works in the city. The construction of works was commenced by that company, but owing to certain provisions in the contract, and before much work had been done, it was found to be impossible to secure capital for the enterprise, and the company failed.

Thereupon, the Plainfield Water Supply Company, a corporation created by a special act of the Legislature passed in 1869, purchased the property of the Water Works Company and proceeded to construct a plant to supply the city with water. The works were completed in the summer of 1891, and then negotiations were opened with the city for a contract to supply water for the purpose of extinguishing fires. As the contract with the Water Works Company contained provisions fixing the rates and regulating the method for supplying water for domestic use, it was insisted by the city that the contract with the Water Supply Company should also cover the same subjects. The negotiations ended in a contract between the city and the company, dated May 2, 1892, for a period of one year, with the privilege of two renewals, one for one year and the other for eight years. The contract has been renewed accordingly. By that contract the city agreed to pay an annual rental of $15 each for hydrants, and rates for water for domestic use were also prescribed. The hydrant rental and rates for water for domestic use were almost identical with the rental and rates prescribed in the contract with the Water Works Company.

During the negotiations which led to the contract now in force, two committees were appointed by the Council to consider the subject. One committee consisting of Messrs. E. N. Erickson, E. H. Bird, F. E. Marsh, R. K. Case and W. G. E. See, was appointed to ascertain the legal status of the company. The other, consisting of Messrs. Erickson, Bird and Marsh, was appointed to conduct the negotiations with the Company for a contract. Both committees made reports to the Council, dated March 21, 1892.

The committee of three gentlemen (all of whom were members of the other committee), submitted a draft of a contract with their report, and stated: "Your committee, believing that this proposition, as embodied in the accompanying contract, is a fair and advantageous one for the city, herewith present the same to the Common Council, and recommended its acceptance and adoption by them;" and the contract was accordingly signed. The other committee, referring to the

CAPTAIN BROWNING.

Commanding Officer For Company K Was Chosen at Last Night's Meeting of Company.

At the meeting of Company K, held in Washington Hall last evening, Dr. W. K. Browning was unanimously elected captain, being advanced from first lieutenant. John Lewis, who has held the position of second lieutenant, was raised to first without a dissenting vote. First Sergeant J. P. Mosher and Fourth Sergeant H. B. Kitchell were nominated for second lieutenant. Mosher defeated his opponent by six votes. Major G. V. Packer was in charge of the proceedings.

The election of non-commissioned officers will be held Thursday evening, May 16. The company expects an invitation from the G. A. R. to participate in the morning parade of the Memorial Day celebration. Preparations are being made to accept.

COMING Y. M. C. A. JUBILEE.

PLAINFIELD WILL BE WELL REPRESENTED THERE.

Jubilee Will Be Held in Boston From June 11 to 16—Many Associations Will Send Delegates.

The Young Men's Christian Association of this city will be well represented at the coming jubilee of the organization, which will be held in Boston from June 11 to 16. The fourteen hundred associations in North America will send delegates to the great meeting which marks the fiftieth anniversary of the association's existence on this continent. According to arrangements made, the meeting will be held in the Mechanics building in that city.

The first session will be set apart for the reception of the President of the United States and the Lord High Commissioner for Canada, as well as for the representatives of foreign governments.

On Jubilee Day a tablet will be unveiled in the Old South church meeting house, which is the birthplace of the American organization. Other features of the convention will be a reception at the State House tendered by the Governor of Massachusetts, and an excursion to Plymouth Rock, where a suitable oration will be delivered.

Among the speakers, who will address the convention, are President McKinley and Lord Strathcona and the presidents of Clark University, University of Minnesota, Colorado College, Brown University, Union Theological Seminary and Tuskegee Institute.

Bishop Potter and Rev. Drs. Theo. L. Cuyler, Buckley, Chapman, C. C. Hall and others will also speak.

HOW 'TWAS LEARNED.

Clever Detective Work Finally Found the Man Who Buried Child in Westfield Dump.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, May 9.—Through the detective work of Officer O'Neill, of this borough, the mystery surrounding the finding of the body of an infant child in the public dump, has been unravelled. R. Newton French, an undertaker, of East Orange, it is alleged, has confessed to County Detective Keron and Officer O'Neill that he made the unlawful interment because he needed money and believed the parents of the infant did not care.

The discovery of the body was made Saturday by two young boys, John and George Herder, who reported the fact to the police. French is said to have emphatically denied the charge at first, but afterwards made a full confession. It is believed that he will be ordered to appear before the Grand Jury. The people here, as well as French's friends in East Orange, are shocked over the matter.

ORGANIZED A BAND

Columbian Band Formed by Number of Local Colored Musicians.

The Columbian Band is a recently formed colored organization of this city, which is making preparations to give concerts this summer.

The musicians are: Cornetists, Harry Mitchell and James Miller; altos, William Smith and Claude Kingslow; tenor, John Hedgeman; bass, Mahlon Hurling; trombones, Harry Kingslow and Robert Pierson; piccalo, Albert Green; flute, Garfield Perkins; snare drum, George Hill; bass drum, Frank Kline and cymbals, Joseph Robinson.

James Miller is the leader of the band.

Address by Dr. Payson.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel will celebrate its anniversary Thursday evening, May 16, at which time Rev. Mr. Payson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Rahway, will make an address. There will be other interesting exercises. At the close refreshments will be served.

PLAN TO FIND GREEN'S BODY.

ALL FORMER EFFORTS HAVE BEEN WITHOUT AVAIL.

Will Search Bottom of River With Submarine Light—River is Now Normal Again.

Notwithstanding the constant search that has been maintained for the body of the late Volney F. Green, who was drowned in the Des Moines river, not a trace of the body has been discovered. F. S. Green, father of the dead young man, has just received a letter from Des Moines, telling him of a plan now on foot to find the body.

It is proposed by those in charge of the matter to build a large box entirely of glass and to place a strong light inside. This box will be so arranged that a person can row it about near the bottom of the river. It is then proposed to make a trip under water and thoroughly investigate every part of the river. It is believed that in this way the body may be found.

The river has now assumed its normal condition, making such a scheme as mentioned feasible. Of course, Mr. and Mrs. Green are willing to do anything possible to recover the body of their son, and they hope that the plan proposed may be successful.

END OF MARTINE COMMON.

EVERGREEN AVENUE WILL BE EXTENDED THROUGH IT.

James E. Martine Will Begin Work Tomorrow Opening Up That Part of His Property.

Much to the disappointment of Plainfielders who are interested in out of door games, Martine Common as an athletic ground is a thing of the past.

Tomorrow a road will be cut through the entire length of the field. It is understood that the steady march of improvements in that vicinity demands that a thoroughfare be made through this plot of ground, which has been the scene of many an exciting athletic battle of the past.

James E. Martine, who owns the tract, has permitted the field to be used, by whoever desired it, as a general play ground during the last six or seven years. Baseball, football and other games have there been witnessed time and time again by large crowds of Plainfielders.

This spring it has been used as the home grounds by the Plainfield High School baseball team. The last event on the field was the game played between the city and borough High School lads yesterday afternoon.

Evergreen avenue will be the name of the new thoroughfare, which is intended to connect Park avenue with Hillside avenue.

INVITED TO SOMERVILLE.

Company K Asked to Attend Memorial Day Parade and Sham Battle.

The first invitation received by the newly organized Company K, of this city, has been tendered by Company M, of Somerville, which forms part of the same battalion, the third, of the Second Regiment. Company K is invited to attend the Memorial Day exercises at Somerville.

There will be a parade in the morning and a sham battle in the afternoon. The local company has not as yet answered the invitation but in all probability it will accept.

TO MEET AT TRINITY.

Arrangements Made For Local Endeavor Union Annual Meeting.

The officers of the Local Union Christian Endeavor Society have decided to hold the annual meeting in Trinity Reformed church Tuesday evening, May 14. Rev. Theo. S. Henderson and F. H. Jacobs will be present. It was intended to hold the meeting in the First Baptist church, but the Union did not feel able to pay $25, the amount asked for the use of the church for the meeting. The nominating committee will meet Monday evening next instead of Saturday evening, to prepare a list of officers. The meeting will be held at the home of Miss Florence Dodge, 301 West Fourth street.

Returned From New Mexico.

Mrs. Sarah Vermeule, who has spent the last six months at Los Vegos, New Mexico, and her daughter, Mrs. Pearson, whose husband, Lieutenant Samuel B. Pearson, of the Ninth U. S. Cavalry, has been ordered to the Philippines, have returned to their home on Watchung avenue. Mrs. Pearson, who has been with her husband while stationed at Fort Du Chesne, Utah, will join him later and is planning to go to Manila after a few months.

DEATH HAS COME TO JOSEPH A. ROBINSON.

One of Plainfield's Most Popular and Respected Citizens Passed Away Yesterday.

HE LIVED AN UPRIGHT LIFE.

WAS HELD IN HIGH ESTEEM BY ALL WHO KNEW HIM.

Mr. Robinson Was Ill From First Of Year—The Best Medical Treatment Was Secured—Private Secretary To E. R. Ackerman.

One of the most popular and respected residents of Plainfield, Joseph Alexander Robinson, passed away at noon yesterday, at his home, 116 Madison avenue. Death was due to nephritis. Mr. Robinson had been ill since the first of the year, and in February went to Bermuda for a short time for the benefit of his health, but he continued to grow worse, and in spite of his physicians, Dr. Boone and Dr. Endicott, of this city, and Dr. Thompson, a New York specialist, death occurred yesterday noon.

Mr Robinson was a little over forty-one years of age. He was born in Hoboken but has been a resident of this city for a number of years.

He began his business career at an early age, and finally entered the railway mail service, where he rose steadily to private secretary to the superintendent. As there was no prospect of advancement he resigned, receiving the best possible recommendation and the promise of reinstatement, should he desire to return. He was subsequently made private secretary to Ernest R. Ackerman, president of the Lawrence Cement Company, which position he held up to the time of his death. He was a valued employe, and was sent on many missions of trust by his employers. He will be greatly missed by his business associates, by whom he was always held in the highest esteem.

Two years ago last October, Mr. Robinson married Miss Adeline B. Parsons, of Watchung avenue, and they have for some time had a pleasant home on Madison avenue, in the Jackson building. Besides a wife, Mr. Robinson leaves a mother, Mrs. Eleanor S. Robinson, a sister, Miss Mary E. Robinson, and an aunt, Miss M. J. Seeds, all of East Fifth street, and three brothers, Samuel and William, of this city, and Robert, of New York.

Mr. Robinson was an active member of the Congregational church, where he was superintendent of the Sunday-school, a worker in the Christian Endeavor Society, and an enthusiastic helper in every good work undertaken by the church. He was secretary of the Plainfield Sunday-school Union, and interested in the work of the Union County Sunday-school Union and in the Y. M. C. A. He was also a member of the Royal Arcanum.

In his personal life Mr. Robinson was warm-hearted, high-principled, and of an earnest and devoted Christian character. He had a remarkably large circle of friends in this city and New York with all of whom he was deservedly popular. He never lost an opportunity to say a pleasant word or do a kindly deed. There are many who will remember his kindnesses and mourn at the news of his death. The purity and integrity of his life has made him one looked up to and respected by the whole community.

Arrangements for the funeral service have not been completed, and announcement concerning it will be made tomorrow.

RETAIL CLERKS MET.

Did But Little Business — Who The Officers of the Association Are.

The Retail Clerks' Association met last evening in their rooms in West Front street, and discussed plans for perfecting the organization. There was a great deal of discussion, but little accomplished. It was expected that the charter would be received, but for some reason it was not. Hereafter the association will meet on the first and third Thursdays in each month.

The officers at present are: President, Louis Bennett; vice-presidents, Chas. Fritts, H. P. Greenwood; secretary, A. C. Hoagland; treasurer, Caspar Waglow; guide, Richard Warnick. The trustees are yet to be elected.

A Fine Concert.

William E. MacClymont's concert will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall this evening. An excellent programme has been provided, and an enjoyable evening is promised.

DIRECTOR HUBBARD AGAIN.

J. FRANK HUBBARD AGAIN CHOSEN AS HEAD OF FREEHOLDERS.

First Meeting of New Union County Board Was Held Yesterday—Little Business Transacted.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, May 9—The Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders met yesterday and organized for the coming year by re-electing J. Frank Hubbard, of Plainfield, director; S. Rusling Ryno, of Rahway, clerk, and James W. Fink, of Westfield, county road inspector. The clerk's salary is $500 a year and that of the county road inspector $60 a month.

After Director Hubbard was escorted to the chair he returned his sincere thanks to the members, assuring them that as in the past he would in the future endeavor to work for the best interest of the county, and by his rulings, etc., continue to have the esteem of every member.

On a motion of Mr. Westphal, The Daily Press and News, of Plainfield, were designated among other papers to publish the proceedings of the Board. A resolution by Mr King provided for an application for appointment of commissioners to assess the benefits for road improvements in New Providence and Fanwood.

WERE LOOKING FOR WORK.

PLAINFIELD POLICEMEN GATHERED THEM IN LAST NIGHT.

After Hearing Their Hard Luck Stories City Judge Runyon Suspended Sentence On Them.

Joseph Howard, of New Haven, Henry VanLiew, of Bridgeport, and Henry VanDyke, of Paterson, were arrested early last evening by Patrolmen Watson and Mattox for trespassing on the Central Railroad. In the city court this morning they told a hard luck story of being out of employment. When arrested they were on their way to Easton.

VanDyke claimed to have met the other two at Paterson, and in order to make the friendship more binding he spent all his money in "growlers." He then decided to cast his lots with them. City Judge Runyon was not disposed to be hard on them, and released all three on promise that they proceed at once to Easton.

Two other unfortunates, William Kreger and William Dollidan, of Weatherly, Pa., were picked up at the corner of Clinton avenue and Front street at an early hour this morning by Patrolman Lunger. They could give no satisfactory account of themselves and he arrested them. Like their predecessors they claimed to be out of work and on the way to Newark. Their appearances bore out their statements and they were discharged.

WEST END'S OFFICERS.

Chosen at Annual Meeting of That Hose Company Monday Evening.

The West End Hose Company, at its annual election held Monday evening in the organization's house, chose a new set of officers for the ensuing year and transacted a large amount of routine business.

The ticket elected is composed as follows: Foreman, Lawrence Peterson; first assistant foreman, Gustave Feiring; second assistant foreman, Charles Greder; corresponding secretary, William Demarest; financial secretary, George Giddis; treasurer, Herman Hansen. Louis Bimble, Jr., was elected representative to the Firemen's Relief Association.

The company decided to present a gold badge to the retiring assistant chief of the fire department, William Demarest. According to the secretary's report the company is composed of twenty men, which is the full number allowed.

After the meeting the fire laddies were entertained by the newly-elected foreman, Lawrence Peterson.

Charged The Crowd And Caught One.

Patrolman Myers noticed a crowd of young men in Exchange alley at a late hour last night and on going closer became convinced they were shooting crap. He charged the crowd but all escaped in the darkness with the exception of Albert Sutterlein, whom he took into custody. After spending the night in a cell, he was arraigned before City Judge Runyon this morning. Sentence was suspended.

Went to Party at Bound Brook.

A number of North Plainfielders attended a party given by Miss Sarah Vanderhuff, of Bound Brook, last evening. The guests from the borough were the Misses Ada VanHorn, Marie Hoagland, Tina Voehl and Ada Carney, and Harry Rogers and Benjamin Schuck.

CONTRACT AWARDED.

For Widening North Avenue From Elizabeth to Cranford Township Line.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, May 9—The old Union County Board of Freeholders closed the year's work Tuesday afternoon by awarding the contract for widening Westfield or North avenue, to carry out the projected boulevard. The distance to be improved is from Orchard street in this city to the Cranford township line.

The contract was awarded to William H. Weldon, of Rahway, the lowest bidder. He will do the work for $8,874.34. His bid for excavating was 31 cents per cubic yard and for resetting curb stones 12 cents per lineal foot. Arrangements were also made to alter the bridges along the proposed boulevard to conform to the new width.

WORK AMONG THE NEGROES.

INTERESTING ADDRESS BY REV. W. H. WEAVER, OF BALTIMORE.

Represents Presbyterian Board of Missions For Freedmen—Spoke at Crescent Avenue Church Chapel.

A large assemblage gathered in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last evening and listened to an instructive talk on mission work among the colored people of the south by Rev. W. H. Weaver, of Baltimore. The latter is a representative of the Presbyterian Board of Missions for Freedmen, which is doing much to alleviate the condition of the colored people in the southern States. At the present time, according to Mr. Weaver, the board maintains 360 churches with a total membership of 20,000 communicants and eighty eight educational institutions in which there are 10,000 students. In many of the latter the pupils are given a manual as well as a mental training, fitting them for important positions.

The negro, the speaker said, was brought to this country through God's providence and man's act. The few scattered thousands living in the States at the close of the Revolutionary War have increased to ten million. They have been closely identified with the country's growth, watering its soil with their tears and enriching it with their blood. To attempt to send them back across the Atlantic from whence they came, at this time, would be worse than a crime. They are looked upon in the wrong way by most the northern and in fact all white people and, so long as they are denied education, they will always remain in a lowly condition.

FREEHOLDERS ORGANIZED.

First Meeting of New Board of Freeholders of Somerset County Yesterday.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, May 9.—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met at the Court House yesterday, all the members being present, and was organized by the re-election of Wm. J. Logan as director and A. P. Sutphen as clerk.

John A. Frech and Nelson Y. Dungan were placed in nomination for counsel and nine ballots were taken, each ballot being a tie. The election of counsel was then deferred one month. Joshua Doughty was re-elected county engineer. Director Logan appointed his committees for the year.

Hon. Alvah A. Clark appeared before the board and made a plea for a new Court House. No action was taken.

The board will meet at Hub Hollow, Saturday, to view a bridge, and at Boycefield on the 16th to look at a bridge near that place.

TAKEN TO HIGHER COURT.

Suit Against Shimer Transferred From Nash's Court to Circuit Court.

On motion of W. S. Angleman, counsel for the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company, the landlord and tenant case of the company against Laura B. Shimer has been transferred from Justice Nash's court to the Circuit Court, where it will be tried before Judge VanSyckel. This is in accordance with a new law, and may result in a number of similar cases being taken to the higher court. This case has already been tried twice, and at the next trial an attempt will be made to prove certain constructions in the lease involved.

Another Man.

William Debele, and not L. B. Bodine, was elected financial secretary of the Warren Engine Company at the annual meeting Tuesday evening.

Initiation of Members.

There will be initiation at the meeting of Friendship Lodge, Daughters of Rebecca, this evening.

FOUR BAD INNINGS DECIDED THE GAME.

Borough High School Team Won by a Score of 16 to 11, Yesterday Afternoon.

DEFEATED CITY SCHOOL.

CITY SCHOOL TEAM WAS VERY BAD FOR FOUR INNINGS.

VanAuken Pitched a Clever Game But Had no Support—Crite Was in Good Form—His Support Was Good at First But Didn't Improve.

The happenings of the first four innings in the game between the city and borough High School boys on Martine Common yesterday afternoon proved the determining factor in the game. During those innings, the Plainfield High School boys gave as poor an exhibition of baseball as could be expected of them. It cost them the game for the borroughites finally won out by a score of 16 to 11, despite the hard fight made by the city team to recover the advantage gained in those four dreadful innings.

After the first four innings were over, the game grew interesting. Van Auken pitched a clever game, but, at the start particularly, he had no support at all. He was hit rather freely for several innings, but retained good control of the ball. Several hits and two bases on balls landed four runs for the borough school boys in the first two innings. Clean hitting and clumsy errors by the Plainfield infield netted five in the third and four in the fourth. That practically ended the run-getting of the North Plainfielders, who only scored three times in the succeeding five innings.

The Plainfield High School boys began to wake up to the necessity of getting in the game at the third inning, and began to bat Crite's delivery. The borough pitcher retained his nerve, however, and struck out several men at critical moments. As the game progressed, however, his support began to grow weaker and runs for the city school team began to pile up.

The work of the Plainfield infield was very poor while Meeker dropped two nice flies in right and was subsequently succeeded by Foster. VanAuken played well and Moynahan caught his delivery well. Wild throws and inexcusable fumbles marked the playing of the other Plainfielders. There were twenty-three errors tallied against them in all while seventeen were marked up against North Plainfield. The batting of the boroughites was slightly better than that of their opponents.

Several close decisions by Benjamin Schuck came at a moment when the city High School would have otherwise scored and there were frequent objections to Schuck's rulings by that team. Bert Moore's work as umpire was very satisfactory to both sides.

The teams batted as follows:

N. P. H.	P. H.
George, c.	F. Mason, 2b.
Townsend, rf.	VanAuken, p.
Overton, cf.	T. Mason, 2b.
Conover, 2b	Pond, lf.

Crite, p.	Davis, 1b.
Hamilton, ss.	Moynahan, c.
Jacot 1b.	Meeker, rf.
	Foster, rf.
Emmons, cf	Monroe, 3b.

Score by innings:

N P H.S..	2	2	5	4	0	1	0	1	1	—16
P. H. S..	0	0	4	1	0	1	2	3	0	—11

Base hits—N. P. H. S, 10; P. H. S., 8. Two-base hits—N. P. H. S., 2; P. H. S., 2. Home run—N. P. H. S., 1. Struck out—By Crite, 9; by VanAuken, 4. Bases on balls—By Crite, 2; by VanAuken, 2. Errors—N. P. H. S., 17; P. H. S., 23. Umpires—Bert Moore and Benj. Schuck. Scorers—K. Knox and A. E. Moore.

Danced in Honor of W. S. S.

In honor of the W. S. S., the Misses Leichtentritt, of Central avenue, entertained forty friends at their home last evening. Dancing was the feature and with the music by Naylor's orchestra as an incentive, was kept up until an early hour this morning. At midnight refreshments were served. The affair was greatly enjoyed by all and its success was due to the efforts of the Misses Nettie and Sadie Leichtentritt and Miss Nellie Apgar, who arranged it.

Wants to Sell Factory Buildings.

It is the purpose, if possible, to improve the property upon which the Coriell hat factory now stands on Clinton avenue. The building is advertised for sale to be removed from the premises. For some time past the building has not been used and the owner is anxious to have it removed so that the property can be improved.

rates for water set out in the contract. said: "In regard to the matter touching the scale of charges proposed to be made to citizens for water to be furnished them, your committee find, upon investigation, that the proposed rates compare favorably with the charges in other cities of the same size."

This statement of the committee was based on an examination of about a dozen schedules of water rates in force in Newark, Rahway and New Brunswick, where the water works are owned by the cities, and in Somerville, East Orange, Montclair, Summit, and other places where the water works are owned by private corporations. I have recently examined the rates in force in several of the municipalities in this vicinity, and also the rates set out in the contract with the Water Works Company, for the purpose of comparison with the rates charged in Plainfield, and the result is as follows (taking for comparison four of the purposes for which water is commonly used, viz: kitchen sink, closet, bathroom, including washbowl, and laundry.) For these purposes the rates charged by the Plainfield Water Supply Company amount to $18 a year.

In the contract made with the Water Works Company, in December, 1889, the rates for the same purposes amount to $19; in Morristown the charge is $24; in Newark, $15; in New Brunswick, $21; in Somerville, $17; in Summit, $19; in Madison, $18; in Belleville, $18.50; in East Orange, $15; and in Montclair, $18; average, $18.45

In Plainfield the rental paid for hydrants is $15 00 each per year; in Summit, $15 00 until 125 hydrants shall have been installed, then the rental to be $40 00; in Somerville, $28.00 (soon to be reduced to $15 00); in East Orange, $30 00; in Morristown, $25 00, and in Montclair, $26 00.

In Plainfield the charge for a tap and service pipe to the curb is $10 00; in Newark the charge is $14 00; in Summit, $15 00 in Madison $15 00; in Belleville, $14 00 and in East Orange, $20 00

When this company began operations, in 1891, it was thought to be most equitable to supply water through meters, to avoid the dissatisfaction which sometimes arises when charges are made according to the fixtures by which water is supplied. Accordingly, a large number of meters were purchased by the company and installed on the premises of its patrons. The experience was very unsatisfactory. Some of the meters registered much more than had probably been used, and many of them much less, and it soon became manifest that if the company installed meters generally its income would amount to but a small portion of its fixed charges. This result was probably due, in part, to the fact that many dwellings were equipped with tanks which caught rain water, and but little water that came through the meters was used, except for drinking and cooking. The meters, therefore, were taken out of nearly all dwelling-houses, and the company thereafter undertook to supply water according to the schedule of rates set out in the contract of May 21, 1892.

Recently the directors of the company ascertained that the schedule of rates had been deviated from in many instances. Some persons were charged more and others less than the schedule required. In order that all consumers should be treated alike, as nearly as practicable, the following by-law was adopted, and has since been enforced: "No officer or employe of this company shall make any contract to supply water at rates varying from the rates fixed by the company; and whenever it is discovered that any person is being supplied with water on terms differing from those rates, bills will be rendered according to the established rates. A printed list of rates will be furnished on application." The rates referred to are those prescribed in the contract with the city.

The enforcement of this by-law has recently given rise to considerable dissatisfaction and to public discussion of the fairness of the rates so prescribed. No doubt the company was in fault in supplying water to anyone at rates differing from those agreed on with the city—which are certainly reasonable—and it was the company's legal duty, as well as sound business policy, to abolish all discriminations as soon as discovered, and this is all that has been done. The total receipts of the company per annum, by means of the recent equalizing of rates, will not be changed beyond the amount of a few hundred dollars. Those whose bills were raised naturally complain, and are heard from, while those whose bills were lowered have no occasion to comment publicly about the matter.

In view, however, of the general discussion of the company's policy and the comparison of the methods commonly employed to supply cities with water, perhaps it may not be out of order for me to submit a few remarks that may be of interest concerning the experience of other localities in the matter of water supply. I am satisfied that a candid inquiry will discover the fact that Plainfield is more fortunate in this respect that any other city in the vicinity of New York.

Newark has 246,070 inhabitants, according to the last census. The water used in the city is supplied by gravity, and a great deal is used for manufacturing purposes. The works owned by the city were operated in the year 1900 at a loss of $79,965.54. I send herewith a financial statement recently made by the cashier of the water department of the Board of Public Works, showing this and other interesting facts. It was published in the Newark Evening News of March 21st last. Recently the Board prepared a new and higher schedule of rates, to take effect on the first of May, and proposed to adopt it, but objection was made by a number of citizens and it was abandoned.

The water works in Jersey City are also owned by the city, but the water used at present is obtained from the East Jersey Water Company at $36 per million gallons. Reservoirs and an aqueduct are now being built for the city, in order to obtain a supply from an independent source. When finished, the cost of water to the city per million gallons will probably be higher than at present. The works in Jersey City are not self-sustaining, and have not been for several years, although rates are charged whether buildings are occupied or not. The last Legislature passed an act (Chapter 101) providing that whenever the board having control of the water works in any city shall have incurred any indebtedness in connection with the works, which the income derived from the works shall have proved insufficient to meet, it shall be lawful for the board having control of the finances of the city to fund such indebtedness, or any part thereof, by issuing water bonds to an amount not exceeding four hundred thousand dollars. While that bill was pending in the Legislature it was said that it was necessary for Jersey City to issue bonds to the amount of $400,000, to provide for the difference in the cost of maintaining the works and the amount received from consumers in recent years.

I have made some inquiry to ascertain the financial result of the operation of the water-works in Madison, but the only statement in detail that is obtainable was published in 1894, shortly after the works were constructed. The cost of operating the water-works and electric light plant are merged in the accounts of the borough. In the statement of 1894 the borough was charged with 119 hydrants at $25 each per annum, as part of the income of the water-works, although the town owned the works and the cost of operation was arbitrarily divided between the water-works and the electric light plant. I have not been able to obtain a reliable statement since 1894, showing whether the works are a source of revenue or a burden to the borough.

The experience of Rahway in the operation of water-works is set forth in appendix 2 to an address delivered by J. H. Vail, Eeq., at a meeting in Westfield held June 2, 1892, during an agitation of the question whether it would be better for Westfield to construct water works or have water supplied by a company. I send herewith a copy of Mr. Vail's address. The last report of the water commissioners, made December 31 last, shows no material change in the situation.

Besides, the operation of water works in Plainfield is instructive. Shortly after the contract was made with the city, in May, 1892, the management of the company became convinced that the works could not be operated successfully under that contract, with no source of income except Plainfield and North Plainfield, and consequently agreements were made with the Union Water Company and the Elizabethtown Water Company to supply water to the city of Elizabeth and also to the villages between Plainfield and Elizabeth along the Central Railroad. And it is a fact that the revenue derived from those companies is the only means that relieved the Plainfield Company from financial embarrassment. During the ten years that the Plainfield Company has been in operation, more money has been expended in payment of interest on its cost and for operating expenses and in making extensions, than has been derived from the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield and from their inhabitants. It is true the contract with the Union and Elizabeth Companies made it necessary for the Plainfield Company to use more fuel than would otherwise have been necessary, but with this exception the operating expenses of the Plainfield Company have not thereby been increased to any material extent.

In view of the apprehensions sometimes expressed in Plainfield as to the propriety of pumping water in the city to be supplied to other municipalities. I will take occasion to say that the Plainfield company has kept a careful record of the quantity of water pumped, and the effect of the pumping on the wells at Netherwood from the beginning, and the experience of ten years has yielded information as to the capacity of the wells which enables the company to avoid any danger of exhausting the supply. It is clearly to the interest of the company to guard the water supply carefully, as no one would be injured so quickly or so seriously as the water company by an excessive draught on the wells.

As to the fear sometimes expressed that the campany is pumping out the wells in Plainfield, it is probably sufficient to say that the surface of the water in the wells at Netherwood has never, during the past ten years, been lower than the surface of Front street in Plainfield, at the corner of Somerset street.

This Company has not adopted any rule for the management of its business that has not been approved by experience and considered necessary elsewhere. To operate a system of water works to the entire satisfaction of all consumers is of course impossible. Many consumers are situated differently from others, and some desire to make special agreements for water to meet temporary or peculiar conditions.

A water company or city supplying water for domestic use can only act properly by proceeding according to general rules applicable to all. Now and then the application of such rules seems inequitable, but entire equality between consumers in not attainable, because no perfect method of supplying water for domestic use has yet been devised.

I shall be glad to confer with your committee at any time concerning any matter that may tend to render the service of the company more satisfactory.

Very respectfully,
Frank Bergen,
President.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by L. W. Randolph. Only 50 cents.

Mrs. Fitch, of Westfield, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Darling, of Prospect place.

—If people only knew what we know about Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, it would be used in nearly every household, as there are few people who do not suffer from a feeling of fullness after eating, belching, flatulence, sour stomach or water-brash, caused by indigestion or dyspepsia. A preparation, such as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which, with no aid from the stomach, will digest your food, certainly can't help but do you good. L. W. Randolph.

IN THE FLOWER LAND

Presidential Party In Southern California.

A CONTINUOUS OVATION RECEIVED.

The Train Bombarded With Flowers—Los Angeles In Gala Dress to Celebrate the Chief Magistrate's Coming.

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—The president and his party had their first taste of the hospitality of California yesterday. The introduction to the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers was like a dream of paradise after three days spent in the alkali deserts of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona. It was like passing into fairy land. No words can picture the beauty of the rich sun flooded valleys between snow capped peaks, the orange groves of the Santa Ana and the trees and flowers which the president saw. Nature seemed to have adorned herself for the occasion in her brightest colors.

Governor Gage and the California congressional delegation met the president at Redlands, in the San Bernardino valley, at 9 o'clock in the morning and welcomed him to the state. It was here that the president got his first idea of the wonderful treat that awaited him. Through an avenue lined with palms and Venetian masts he drove over beds of roses, beneath a triumphal arch of flowers and fruit to the Casa Loma hotel, on the balcony of which the exercises took place. A drive through the orange groves and parks followed. All along the route of the drive ladies showered the president and Mrs. McKinley with flowers, and through the streets they bombarded him from the windows with confetti until the air was a perfect maze of color.

From Redlands down to Los Angeles it was a continual ovation. Every station was crowded by children with wreaths of flowers in their hands and by cheering men and women. Minute stops were made at Colton, Ontario, Pomona, and at 2:30 o'clock the train drew into Los Angeles.

The approach to the city of Los Angeles was heralded by a terrific din which could be heard for miles. Steam whistles screamed, cannon boomed, and as the train passed through the Chinese quarter of the city long strings of firecrackers, hung from awnings, exploded like the continuous rattle of musketry. The city had been beautifully decorated in honor of the president's coming. The fiesta is in progress here, and the town was dressed like a queen to receive the coming of her lord. The colors of the carnival, red, yellow and green, representing the wine, orange and olive, predominated. The streets were avenues of masts, festooned with yellow bunting and crowned with palm leaves and wreaths of laurel. At the station the party was met by the citizens' committee and many distinguished people from all over California. General Shafter, commander of the department of the Pacific, with his entire staff, in full uniform, had come down from the Presidio to greet his chief. Secretary of the Navy Long, who was to have met the party at San Francisco, also came here to meet the president and was at the station. The party was driven in carriages to the Vannuyes hotel. An escort of artillery and several companies of militia had been provided to escort them, but both the military and police had to fight their way through the enormous crowds that had swarmed into the city, drawn by the double attraction of the president's visit and the carnival. At the hotel the police were obliged to literally force a way to the entrance. There the president met Governor Nash of Ohio and the Ohio congressional delegation, which had arrived by different routes an hour before. In the rotunda of the hotel the mayor of Los Angeles formally greeted the chief executive and extended to him the freedom of the city. The president responded.

The president then held a short public reception in the parlors of the hotel. Meantime Mrs. McKinley and the ladies of the party had been driven to the woman's club in Figure street, where they met the ladies of Los Angeles.

Last evening the president and Mrs. McKinley dined at Bivouac, the handsome residence of General Harrison Grey Otis, and after a dinner a private reception was held there in their honor. They spent the night at the Bivouac.

Governor Nash held a public reception at the Chamber of Commerce. Late in the afternoon some of the members of the president's party ascended Mount Low, 6,000 feet high, whence they had a bird's eye view for 70 miles of southern California and the Pacific ocean 20 miles out to sea. Last night the members of the cabinet and other members of the party witnessed the brilliant illumination in the streets. The train will leave Los Angeles early tomorrow morning.

Falling Seats Injure Many.

OIL CITY, Pa., May 9.—Over a dozen people were injured last night by the seats of the Merchants' Railroad show collapsing while the exhibition was being given. The whole reserve seat section fell with a crash, precipitating more than 100 people to the ground. The most seriously injured were Crate Wadsworth, a boy, both legs broken; Mrs. Lynch, leg broken; Charles Stronge, leg and arm broken. Others sustained severe bruises and sprains.

Smallpox In Indian Territory.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—A dispatch received here from the mayor of Colbert, Indian Territory, announces that smallpox is raging there. No official advices of the outbreak there have reached the Indian bureau. A report just received at the Indian bureau, dated a week age, says that in the smallpox outbreak in the Salem (Or.) Indian school there had been so far ten cases and three deaths.

Harvard Wins at Golf.

ATLANTIC CITY, May 9.—Harvard won the intercollegiate golf tournament on the Northfield links, contesting in the finals with the sons of Eli for the cup. Princeton held the trophy, which it now yields to the wearers of the crimson. The score of the victory stood 13 to 3½, reckoning by the college system recently adopted.

Jurors Fined For Contempt.

NEW YORK, May 9.—A special panel of 24 men was ordered for the Kennedy trial yesterday. Only three jurors appeared in court. Justice Newburger ordered that each of the jurors who had failed to appear be fined the sum of $100 for contempt.

BROKERS IN A FRENZY

Wildest Day Yet In Wall Street.

BIG FORTUNES MADE AND LOST.

The Fluctuations of Northern Pacific Were Phenomenal—Nearly All Stocks Suffered a Marked Decline In Price.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Wall street yesterday experienced the greatest excitement it has known in years, and while prices were soaring up and down in the wildest manner brokers and speculators became almost frenzied. In the mad manipulation of the market shorts were squeezed until the financial life was crushed out of many of them.

Northern Pacific was head and shoulders above the other issues as a cause of excitement, but fortunes were made and lost on other stocks as well.

Before the close the entire market became terribly demoralized, and the flood of long stock swept prices downward many points. Brokers loaded down with commissions to buy and sell lost their heads, many of them, in the great excitement, and a panic resulted.

The stock market in the afternoon underwent enormous liquidation, and as a result there was a break in prices of greater proportions than has been seen since the beginning of the recent bull movement. In the leading high priced stocks there were declines of from 12 to 17 per cent from the morning quotations, and losses of from 6 to 8 per cent were general. Hardly an issue escaped serious loss. There were some sensational movements on the bull side in the morning, the most startling being the jump of Northern Pacific common from an opening at 155 to 180, with a quick drop to 145 and a recovery to 170. The break in the general list came after 1 o'clock. There was a demoralizing closing as the outcome of the great Northern Pacific corner that will always command a unique place in Wall street history.

The most sensational developments of the day came 15 minutes after 3 o'clock with the stock ticker still grinding out its sales, a longer period after the formal close than the records make note of. It was then stated that 50 per cent, or $5,000 a day, was bid for the use of Northern Pacific in 100 share lots and that $1,000,000 had been loaned at 25 per cent, the highest rate in a very long time. An unconfirmed story was in circulation that a prominent speculative interest had been seriously embarrassed by the desperate fight in Northern Pacific.

A Quick Turn.

NEW YORK, May 9.—An incident illustrating the quick turns in stocks occurred yesterday on the floor of the exchange. J. J. Manning, who was in the center of the crowd, when 180 was bid for 1,000 shares of Northern Pacific sold the lot and, turning only half around, bought 500 at 170 and 500 at 160. This netted a profit of $15,000. Other traders made equally quick turns.

Strike Begun In San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 9.—A strike has begun which threatens to involve all the large industries of the city and to throw out of work over 20,000 people. Four hundred carriage workers and 200 bakers went out. The bakers struck because they refused to work with nonunion cooks in resturants which resisted the recent demands of waiters and which are now boycotted by the union. The carriage workers struck because their employers refused to sign the agreement to unionize their shops. The Employers' association, formed last week, which includes all heads of big commercial and manufacturing concerns, is determined to resist the efforts to unionize their places, and the moment the demand for it is made shops will close.

Ex-Governor Foster Bankrupt.

TOLEDO, May 9.—Charles Foster, ex-congressman, ex-governor of Ohio and secretary of the United States treasury during President Harrison's time, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the United States district court here at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Foster has absolutely no assets, and the schedule of debts is as follows: Secured claims, $236,574.20; unsecured claims, $197,451.58; notes and bills which ought to be paid by other parties thereto, $142,608.42; accommodation paper, $170,374.14; total, $747,008.34.

Carpenters Win Their Point.

WATERBURY, Conn., May 9.—The carpenters' strike which began a week ago ended yesterday, when the demands of the workmen for shorter hours without a reduction of wages and that only union men be employed were granted by the contractors. The carpenters, numbering 225, will return to work at once. Under the agreement a day's work is to consist of nine hours from May 1 to Nov. 1 and of eight hours after the last named date, the minimum wage being $2.50.

Missionaries Killed and Eaten.

LONDON, May 9.—A dispatch from Brisbane says a steamship which was dispatched by the Queensland government to the scene of the murder of the Rev. James Chalmers and the Rev. Oliver Tomkins of the London Missionary society in New Guinea returned yesterday. The captain reports that the missionaries and their party were killed and eaten. The unrecognizable remains of several members of the party were discovered.

The Lamp Exploded.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 9.—Mrs. Frank A. Holden of Giles street, this city, was fatally burned by the explosion of a lamp in a chicken brooder. She turned down the lamp and was about to leave the brooder when an explosion occurred. The head and upper part of her body were badly burned.

After a Mexican Railway.

CITY OF MEXICO, May 9.—William Astor Chanler and C. D. Wetmore of New York are in this city to purchase, it is said, the Hidalgo and Northeastern railway. It is understood that they have made a deposit of $200,000. The price of the road is $6,000,000. It runs from this city to Pachuca.

A Boston Blaze.

BOSTON, May 9.—A three alarm fire occurred at 2 o'clock this morning in the granite blocks 523 and 525 Washington street. The total loss is over $50,000. The firms suffering are Hardy, photographer; J. G. Small & Co., cloaks, and the White Dental company.

BANKER SHOOTS HIMSELF.

President Pollock of Cleveland a Suicide In Seattle.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 9.—A man believed to be R. N. Pollock, the missing bank president from Cleveland, ended his life here yesterday in the Hotel York by sending a bullet through his brain. A razor, a two ounce box of rough on rats and a vial containing 100 tablets of aconite were found at hand.

All papers belonging to the man had been burned before committing the deed.

Pollock arrived here Monday and registered as James Fisher. He failed to appear during the next day, and his room was finally broken into. Lying in a reclining position was found the body. The coroner was called in. The deceased had not apparently stirred after firing the fatal shot. No clew could be obtained in the room, and the name of R. N. Pollock was found sewed on the inside of his coat, placed there by a Cleveland tailor. Pollock appeared well dressed and had $30 in money in his pocket. He appeared to have been 30 years of age, with a light complexion and wearing a small brown mustache.

Pollock's Identity Assured.

CLEVELAND, May 9.—R. N. Pollock, who killed himself in Seattle, Wash., was the president of the Cuyahoga Savings Bank and Building company of this city. He was 38 years of age, married and had three children. He was the promoter of the bank, which closed its doors last Monday. Pollock disappeared ten days ago and had not been definitely placed until news of his act of self destruction reached this city last evening. The condition of the bank is as yet a matter of conjecture, its books being in the hands of a receiver, who is making an examination and whose report is expected in a day or two. The bank had deposits to the extent of $340,000. This sum of money was not in the bank's possession at the time.

Fatal Railway Wreck.

PADUCAH, Ky., May 9.—An Illinois Central fast passenger train from Memphis to Louisville was wrecked at Kuttawa. The engine jumped the track, and all but one car was turned over. Engineer Barney Keegan and Fireman Robert Stift of this city were fatally hurt, the engineer living but a short time. Baggageman D. H. Taylor of Louisville and Mail Agent Charles Young of Kuttawa were badly hurt, and several passengers received painful injuries. The wreckage caught fire, and a cafe car and coach were completely destroyed. Fast running to make up time is supposed to have caused the wreck.

Porto Rico Doing Well.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Admiral Luce was at the navy department yesterday, having just returned from an extended tour of inspection about Porto Rico. He reports a most satisfactory condition of affairs and pays a high tribute to the administration of Governor Allen and of Judge Hunt, who is in charge during the absence of the governor. The admiral says that the American administration is proving most beneficial and that if ill advised agitation is avoided there is nothing to interfere with the splendid development of the rich natural resources of the island.

A Pledge Signing Campaign.

BOSTON, May 9.—The Massachusetts Total Abstinence society has decided that there should be a pledge signing campaign in Massachusetts. The final argument of Benjamin R. Jewell that a meeting should be called of representatives of all the churches and temperance societies to inaugurate the movement and that endeavors should be made to place the pledge in every Sunday school for signature was indorsed.

Rats Spread the Plague.

CAPE TOWN, May 9.—Mr. Gregory, the principal medical officer of Cape Colony, says he cannot eradicate the bubonic plague until the rats in the colony are extinct. Hundreds of rats are still dying daily. Three colored persons and three Europeans were reported with the plague yesterday. One colored person and one European have died.

A GREEN GOODS MAN.

One of a Gang Arrested After a Sharp Fight.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—William Hall, alias B. Marvin, of New York, was given a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Lewis on the charge of being a member of a gang of green goods men who have been operating throughout the country. Bail was fixed at $7,500 for Hall's appearance before the New York district court.

Hall was arrested at Fullerton, this state, Tuesday, by Detective Sergeant Patrick F. Gargan of New York, after an exciting fight. Two other members of the gang made their escape. A green goods circular signed "B. Marvin" was received by a resident of Augusta, Me., who notified Postmaster W. D. Stinson. Mr. Stinson arranged to meet Marvin in New York, where he was to secure $3,000 worth of the counterfeit money for $400.

The New York police authorities were notified, and Sergeant Gargan impersonated the "come on." He met one of Marvin's, or Hall's, agents in New York and accompanied him to Fullerton, where Hall awaited him at a hotel.

When Gargan attempted to arrest Hall, two of the latter's companions came to his assistance, and it was only after several shots had been fired that the detective succeeded in arresting his prisoner.

A dispatch from Fullerton says Hall left $5,000 in good money at the hotel.

COTTON WAREHOUSES BURNED.

Augusta, Ga., the Scene of a Costly Fire.

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 9.—What looked to be a fire that would stop only when it had wiped out the cotton storage district of Augusta broke out in one of the storage compartments of the Union Compress company's buildings at 1 o'clock yesterday. When the blaze was discovered, it had gained sufficient headway to cover the roof of the building before the alarm could be responded to.

An alleyway about six feet wide separates the compress and Phinizy & Co.'s warehouse. The high breeze that was blowing in a very short time swept the flames over the heads of the firemen to this building, in which was stored 1,200 bales of cotton. From here it was blown to Whitney & Co's warehouse and seemed beyond the control of the department. In the Whitney warehouse there were 2,500 bales of cotton stored, and soon the whole was a roaring mass of flames. The walls of this structure were the only ones to give way. Had it not been for this the fire department could not have stopped the fire where they did, though they are being highly commended on all sides for their work, the mayor personally thanking the chief of the department.

The losses on cotton are as follows: Whitney & Co., $105,000; Phinizy & Co., $50,400; Compress company, $4,000.

The loss on buildings is estimated at $3,500. The cotton was fully insured.

THE TROLLEY STRIKE.

Fifty Miles of Track Tied Up—Business Paralyzed.

ALBANY, May 9.—The situation here in the strike of the street railway employees is unchanged. Neither the men nor the company have as yet yielded a point, and in fact no conference has been held. The men are jubilant over the fact that the employees of the company in nearby cities have joined with them. They claim that no effort will be made to get the men on the Mechanicville and Stillwater or the Hudson line to strike unless the two companies attempt to run on the United Traction company tracks.

Over 50 miles of track lies idle, and 1,000 men are out of work. In Albany, the largest city affected by the strike, business is at a standstill. The theaters are badly affected, and people living in the suburbs are not coming into town at all. To ride five or six blocks costs from 15 to 20 cents, and hackmen and owners of carryalls are reaping a harvest.

From Ithaca to Columbia.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 9.—Professor H. S. Redfield of the law department of Cornell university has tendered his resignation to the faculty. He has accepted the position of professor of procedure in Columbia College of Law, official notification of which has been received here from President Seth Low. He will leave Cornell at the end of the present college year. Professor Redfield is a graduate of Amherst. After graduating he studied and practiced law in Elmira. He came to Cornell in 1898 to fill the chair of procedure, which was established then for the first time. His position here has not as yet been filled.

The Strike Spreads at Reading.

READING, Pa., May 9.—The strike among the employees of the Reading Iron company's tube mill spread with such rapidity that the entire plant is closed. Those who originally struck did so because their wages were not restored to what they were previous to the reduction last fall. About 1,600 men are now out, and it is possible that if the trouble is not amicably adjusted within a day or two the 1,200 men employed at the Oley street and Ninth street mills, Keystone furnaces, Scott works and others will be called out.

New Yorkers Nearing Home.

ST. LOUIS, May 9.—The special train bearing the members of the New York Merchants' association and Chamber of Commerce who have been making a tour of inspection through Texas at the invitation of the state legislature left St. Louis at 6:30 o'clock last night, homeward bound. A special time schedule has been arranged over the Vandalia and New York Central lines by which the party will make a record breaking run, arriving in New York city tonight.

Chippewas to Arm.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., May 9.—It is stated here that more than 300 Chippewas of Pine Point, Twin Lakes and Gull Lake have decided to arm themselves for the purpose of preventing the removal of more than 15,000,000 feet of logs cut under the "dead and down timber act" the past season. The Indians do not accept the government estimate of trespass in cutting green logs and declare they will hold out for a fair settlement."

Surrenders In Northern Luzon.

MANILA, May 9.—Major Batson has received the surrender of 170 rebel riflemen in the vicinity of Binangonan, La Infanta province, northern Luzon. This ends all trace of insurrection in this province.

Australian Parliament Opened.

MELBOURNE, May 9.—The Duke of Cornwall and York opened the Australian federal parliament at noon today. The ceremony was brilliant.

A HEAVY INDEMNITY.

A Claim Against China of $315,000,000.

MUST ANSWER BY JULY 1.

Notice Served on Chinese Envoys and a Plan For Payment Demanded—Legations to Move to the Hills.

PEKING, May 9.—The foreign ministers held an important meeting on Tuesday to consider the question of the payment of indemnities. It was decided to propose no measure by which any of the allied powers would guarantee the payment of the indemnities, but to inform Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching, the Chinese peace envoys, that the bill by July 1 would amount to £65,000,000.

It was further decided to ask the Chinese plenipotentiaries how China proposes to meet this bill. The ministers, after three months' negotiation and consultation with experts, were still unable to agree upon a suitable measure and now request the Chinese to frame a scheme for the payment of the indemnities and allow until July 1 for this to be settled.

The Chinese peace commissioners will certainly consult with Sir Robert Hart, the imperial commissioner of maritime customs, whose views as to how the money should be raised have been frequently explained.

Sir Ernest Satow, the British minister; M. de Giers, the Russian representative, and Mr. Squires, the acting American charge d'affaires, will move their quarters to the western hills on Monday. They will take along a guard of 200 Russians, the same number of British and a few American troops. This shows that the ministers believe there is danger ten miles outside of Peking, and yet they are opposed to extending full protection to the citizens of various nationalities elsewhere.

It is understood that the main force of the French, about 8,000 in number, is about to return home, leaving here only the Tonquin marines. The French, like the Russians, are now in favor of evacuation. They are even considering the transfer of their section of Peking over to the Chinese commissioners. The latter, however, have no military to support them and therefore hesitate to assume the responsibility.

The Demand Deemed Too Heavy.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Advices have been received at the state department from Special Commissioner Rockhill that give a discouraging view of the prospects of harmonious agreement on the indemnity question. He says that the claims of the powers aggregate $337,000,000 and that there is apparently no prospect of securing a reduction below that amount. Mr. Rockhill is making an earnest endeavor to have the foreign representatives reduce the aggregate to $200,000,000, but his dispatch shows that he has not much hope that he will be successful. The figures given in his message are $14,000,000 higher than the aggregate mentioned in press dispatches as having been agreed on by the foreign negotiators.

Tried to Murder and Killed Himself.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Suddenly seized with violent insanity, John C. Mersereau, a salesman who lived in Brooklyn, tried to murder his wife and sister-in-law and then killed himself. Just after he had left his home to come to business in New York he re-entered the house and, seizing a flatiron, tried to brain his wife. Her screams brought her sister, and Mersereau attempted to murder her. The noise brought the sister's husband. He pushed the women out of the room, left it himself, and then Mersereau bolted it on the inside. A suspicious quiet made the relatives force the door, and Mersereau was found dead. He had placed a rubber tube attached to a gas jet in his mouth and inhaled the gas. He at one time was president of the Coronado Rubber company.

Starch Factories to Close.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 9.—Orders have been received at the 12 or 15 factories of the National Starch company, including the factory in this city, to get ready to close down until the corn market shall become settled again. The price of starch, it is said, has not kept pace with the price of corn, and there is no profit in buying corn at the present prices to make into starch. The local company stopped buying corn May 1. William F. Piel, manager, says that he understands that the glucose manufacturers will also close their plants. No date is set for the shut down, but it is believed that it will occur about June 1.

Steamer Schleswig a Total Loss.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, May 9.—The latest and most authentic information received from Port Maria, on the northern coast of Jamaica and the nearest point to the scene of the disaster, is to the effect that the steamer Schleswig is a total wreck. All efforts to float her have been unavailing. She struck a reef at Galina point while trying to enter Port Maria harbor. Her loss is considered a result of gross carelessness on the part of the local pilot. The Schleswig's entire cargo of fruit is lost. This news confirms the first information of the disaster sent from Port Antonio.

Porto Ricans Incensed.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 9.—Handbills that are being circulated here reproduce an interview with Wenceslao Borda, Jr., published in the New York Times April 25, in which he was quoted as saying, "So hopeless is the state of affairs that fathers sell their daughters to keep them from dying of hunger." The people are indignant, and should Mr. Borda arrive in Porto Rico now he would be liable to attack.

Old Man Swindled.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 9.—By means of a card game Maurice Birdsall, a wealthy Binghamtonian, aged 86 years, was robbed of $2,000 by two men in one of the leading hotels here. One of the men represented himself to be the son of an Owego banker, and the other said he was an Albany lawyer.

Currency Shipments.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The treasury department has ordered that the daily shipment of currency from New York to New Orleans be increased from $250,000 to $500,000 on account of the demand for currency by Jacksonville, Fla., made necessary on account of the fire.

President Bergen's Letter.

On the first and second pages of this issue of The Daily Press will be found the full text of the letter from Frank Bergen, president of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, to Councilman R. I. Tolles, chairman of the street committee of the Common Council. While of considerable length, the communication is one that is worthy of the careful attention of every citizen not only of the city but the borough as well. It places before the people the definite position taken by the Plainfield Water Supply Company and its reasons for that position.

The history of a water supply plant for Plainfield is exhaustively reviewed. President Bergen declares that the local plant is not a paying institution and that it is only by alliance with the Union and Elizabethtown Water Companies that it is enabled to continue successfully. The reasons for the recent changes in the water bills are set down at length.

There are some interesting comparisons made with the cost of the water supply in other cities which compare in size with Plainfield. Most of these figures show that the water supply here can be obtained at a rate less than that charged in most of the other places. There are some other statements concerning Madison's water plant which infer that the claims made for the success of that plant are not based on cold facts.

Summed up, the communication is practically an address to the people of Plainfield in defence of the local water works and aiming to convince them that they are receiving better treatment than are most of their neighbors and incidentally that municipal ownership, as far as the water works are concerned, could not be run successfully here. While there are many who take a different view of the situation here, this letter will be of particular interest as it outlines the chief reasons which the opponents to municipal ownership have against the proposition to establish city water works in Plainfield.

At the meeting of the Common Council Monday evening, it was decided to publish the communication in full in the local newspapers. In compliance with that action, it appears today.

Joel Brown, of Jersey City, has been unanimously nominated as the Prohibition candidate for governor of New Jersey. He is the first of the candidates for that place to be chosen, and the probabilities are that that is far as he will ever get on that ticket. At the State convention at Trenton, more than the usual enthusiasm was shown and the delegates seemed to be of the opinion that their cause would be stronger this year than ever before. At the convention $2,500 was added to the campaign fund, to which $2,000 had already been subscribed.

Now that the West End gymnasium, one of the adjuncts of Hope chapel, has been opened, the Young Men's Association of that chapel is bound to flourish. The association is not a sectarian club but one open to the boys and young men of the West End, irrespective of religion. The club now offers a meeting place with a variety of attractions where the young men of the West End may spend their evenings enjoyably and surrounded by good, wholesome influences.

It did seem as if the possible rupture between the Jersey Central Railroad officials and the Commuter's Club would be a great subject for general regret. Both sides have conceded enough, however, to allow them to meet on a common stand and the club cars, which have helped to add to Plainfield's many attractions, will continue to make their daily trips to Jersey City and return. All that is now needed is a tunnel or a bridge which will do away with the troublesome ferry between Jersey City and New York.

While the steady march of improvement makes it necessary for the baseball and football enthusiasts to desert Martine Common, it is with great regret that many Plainfielders see that favorite field cut up for building purposes. It has long been the rallying place for the boys and men and many an exciting contest has been held there. When a score of handsome residences dot the common, these regrets will pass away. The closing of Martine Common, however, does away with the most available athletic field in the city.

In the death of Joseph A. Robinson, Plainfield has lost one of its truest and most valued citizens. There were few men in Plainfield who were more deservedly and universally beloved than Mr. Robinson. His death will be a great loss to the community where his influence has long been felt.

Tomorrow will be the birthday of The Daily Press. It will then be fourteen years old. During those fourteen years, The Daily Press has grown steadily until it is now one of the leading papers of the county. We hope for equal success in the years to come.

It seems rather strange that the city street department should allow the repairs made to the roadway on Watchung avenue and East Front street by the trolley company to be done in such clumsy fashion.

No one knows of the choice assortment of spring and summer goods which a merchant has unless he informs the public concerning them through the medium of the newspapers.

One man has found that it is a dangerous thing to forget, especially when it comes to paying bills.

DIOCESAN CONVENTION.

Continued Its Sessions at St. John's Church, Elizabeth, Yesterday.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, May 9—The one hundred and twenty-ninth annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal church in the Diocese of New Jersey, which convened Tuesday, concluded its sessions in St. John's church here yesterday. Over 150 of the clergy are taking part in the deliberations.

Bishop Scarborough's annual report showed that marked advancement has been made in all departments of church work in his diocese The various standing committees have been announced. John B. Dumont, of Plainfield, is on the committee on finance and Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman is a member of the committee on constitution and canons.

After the usual spirited contest for diocesan delegates to the General Convention, which will be held at San Francisco, the following were elected: Clerical, Rev. A. D. Baker, of Princeton, and Rev. Drs. O. A. Glazebrook and H. H. Oberly, of Elizabeth; lay, R. S. Conover, Lewis Perrine, John S. Carpenter and C. E. Merritt.

The convention will meet next year in St. Michael's church, Trenton.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Photo Jewelry.

The grand display of gold brooches and photo jewelry at 133 North avenue, is certainly the most complete line of this style of jewelry in this State. Any photo or tintype may be copied and made into one of those beautiful brooches at a very reasonable price and without injury to the photo. Harvey S. Lewis is the manufacturer.

New Business Arrangement.

C. A. Brown, formerly of Westfield, has connected himself with the office of Kirstein & Company, of Front street. Mr. Brown will have charge of the rental department of the concern.

Concert By First Baptist Choir.

Beside rendering Gaul's "Israel in the Wilderness," the choir of the First Baptist church will give other selections of a popular character. The concert will be given the last of May.

CHOSE WRONG HOUR.

Robert Hart's Midnight Serenade Was Suddenly Ended by Unappreciative Policeman.

Robert Hart, famed throughout the West End as the "midnight balladist," was arraigned in the City Court this morning, charged by an unappreciative patrolman with a too healthy exercise of his vocal organs at the unseemly hour which forms part of his title.

Hart is blessed with a fine baritone voice, at times rich and mellow, especially when diverse drinks have wet his throat. But although the West End people are, as a rule, music lovers, they prefer to be entertained at some other time beside the middle of the night and when Hart broke forth in song his notes caused discord. He persisted in singing until Patrolman Gamo placed him under arrest.

On being questioned by City Judge Runyon, Hart said as far as he remembered he was arrested four times for the same offense. He thought there might be more, but he wasn't sure. The court thought it was time his singing aspirations were checked and he was fined $3.

VanNest Released.

Willie VanNest, of Monroe avenue, who was accused by Paul Tabbert, of West Eighth street, with entering his home and stealing a watch and chain, appeared before Justice Nash this morning. The boy entered a general denial of the charge, in which he was backed by his mother. In view of his youth, as the lad is but nine years old, he was discharged with the warning that if he got into trouble of any kind again he would be sent to the Reform School on the old charge.

It Saved His Leg.

Entertainment Postponed.

The Young Friends' Association was to have held an entertainment Thursday evening last, but it was postponed for an indefinite time.

PLAYED GOOD BASEBALL.

RUTGERS PREP. SCHOOL DEFEATED LEAL'S SCHOOL BY ONE RUN.

Game Played at New Brunswick Yesterday Afternoon—Great Pitching By Dupee.

The Rutgers Preparatory School nine, after a hard fought battle, defeated the Leal's School team in a game of baseball filled with exciting features, at New Brunswick, yesterday afternoon. Both teams were in fine fettle and at every stage of the contest until the ninth inning it was anybody's game. Brilliant plays by both the rival nines were frequent and the players struggled hard to land the game for their respective teams.

Dupee, the swift pitcher of Leal's School team, was in great form and made a remarkable record in striking out thirteen men. As an all around player in this contest he loomed up to be a star of the first magnitude. Only two got their base on balls with him in the box. On the other hand, credit is due Hay, who was in the box for the opposing team. He handled the ball well and kept down the batting proclivities of the Leal's boys at momentous parts of the game.

In the field the Rutgers' lads excelled. In the first inning three outs were made in quick succession and they kept up their good work throughout the game. A double play was made by them in the sixth inning. In this inning the Leal's boys also made a double play through the good work of Tilney.

Two disputes occurred during the game. In the first inning Keuhule hit to second base, and D. McGee threw wild to first. The bill was lost in an obstruction, it is claimed, and before it was found Keuhule crossed the home plate. The Plainfield boys declared that Keuhule should not be allowed to take more than one base under these circumstances. The claim, however, was not allowed. The umpire made a similar ruling under almost similar conditions in the fourth inning.

The batting order follows:

Leal's School.	Rutgers Prep.
Tilney, c.	Keuhule, 2b.
V. McGee, cf.	Nafey, ss.
Dupee, p.	Green, 1b.
R. Sch'nma'r, ss.	Cole, rf.
Brown, 1b.	VanVechten, c.
W. Sch'nma'r, 3b.	Hay, p.
D. McGee, 2b.	Mittie, 3b.
Griggs, lf.	Devan, lf.
Corwin, rf.	Wipper, cf.

The score by innings:

Leal's School	0 0 0 1 1 0 1 2 0—5
Rutgers Prep	1 0 0 2 0 1 0 0 2—6

Base hits—Leal's, 11; Rutgers Prep., 4. Two-base hits—Leal's, 1; Rutgers Prep., 0. Three-base hits—Leal's, 0; Rutgers Prep., 1. Errors—Leal's, 6; Rutgers Prep., 4. Struck out—By Dupee, 13; by Hay, 7. Base on balls—Off Dupee, 2; off Hay, 2.

REPORTS GIVEN.

Special Meeting Held To Receive Annual Reports of Epworth League.

The Epworth League of Grace M. E. church held a special meeting last evening for the purpose of considering the yearly reports of the retiring officers, which were not read at the annual meeting last week.

Miss Nellie Vermeule's report as treasurer showed that $162 had been raised for various purposes during the fiscal year just closed. According to the report of the retiring recording secretary, Miss Charlotte Huff, the society is in a flourishing condition, and much interest is being taken by the members in the deliberations of the organization.

The meeting was largely devoted to a discussion as to the means of raising the amount pledged by the society towards the liquidation of the church debt, but no definite plans were made.

NO EVENING SERVICE.

In First M. E. Church During the Month of August

At the meeting of the Official Board of the First M. E. church last evening it was decided not to hold any evening preaching services during the month of August. The Epworth League meetings will be held as usual. The pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, will sail for Europe June 29, and will return Saturday, August 31. Announcement of those who are to preach during his absence will be made within a short time.

"Not after her death?" asked Mrs. Nolan, her own face growing suddenly grave.

"Death, you idiot? The girl is as sound as a dollar."

"I thought you said—"

"It makes no difference what I said," broke in Mrs. Goddard. "She'll never die till I get back to America, and—"

Mrs. Nolan caught the excited woman by her shoulders and forced her to look at her.

"Do you mean that—that you intended to commit murder, Jeanne?"

"If he did not give me the greater part of the girl's money—yes," was the sullen answer.

"Well, you must not draw me into that, Jeanne!"

"I shall draw you into nothing, but I shall expect you to hold your tongue."

"Would he hold his if—if you resorted to—if you killed her?" asked Mrs. Nolan in a low, quivering voice.

They had now returned to the little sitting-room in the cottage. Mrs. Goddard was looking through a box of writing-paper, with nervous, fumbling fingers. Mrs. Nolan stood over her and ventured cautiously to repeat her question.

Mrs. Goddard hesitated as she found a telegraph blank, and dipped a pen.

"He'd have to, or be implicated with me in—in the whole business," she answered, doggedly. "If she died suddenly or was shot, the law of self-preservation would be too strong for him."

"And what then?" Mrs. Nolan seemed scarcely to breathe.

"Then I could win him back to me—if I wanted him."

"Are you sure?"

"With her out of the way, yes."

There was a dead silence in the room. The outer circle of the underground railway ran beneath the garden, and a passing train shook the room like an earthquake.

"What are you going to do now?" asked Mrs. Nolan, curiously, eyeing the telegraph blank.

Mrs. Goddard was writing, and when she had finished and laid down her pen she held the sheet to her companion. It was addressed to Maj. Rowland Goddard, Lyndhurst-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., U. S. A. The message was but a single word and no signature went with it. The word was: "America."

"It will pass most eyes as a word from some telegraphic code," said Mrs. Goddard; "but the major will understand it in full. Now, Lucy, we must pack. We are going back on the first steamer. I shall run out and send this and inquire about the passage. Go to work. We have no time to lose."

"But what if you were recognized on the steamer going over?" faltered Mrs. Nolan.

"There is no likelihood of that. I know so few people."

"But Henry Dugdale is in New York."

"He may not be now; but we have to run even that risk. We are playing a big game, Lucy."

"You mean you are," said Mrs. Nolan. "I shall never take a hand in the—the other."

"I shall not ask you to," answered Mrs. Goddard. She put on her cloak and hastened away down the road to the telegraph station.

CHAPTER XIV.

The major happened to be alone when that telegram reached him. Seeing that it was foreign, he let it lie unopened on his desk till the servant had gone, then with many misgivings as to its import he opened it. That single word conveyed more to his disturbed consciousness of impending disaster than a dozen bold threats could have done. He told himself that Jeanne had had just sufficient time to have received his letter, and that she was on her way home.

But what could she be coming back for—running such great risks of detection? Perhaps it was that she might confront Blanche suddenly and cause the girl's death from the shock of the true situation. Perhaps—Goddard put the telegram into the fire and watched it burn. A big lump of despair was in his throat. At that moment, if, by a death of long lingering torture, he could have purchased Blanche's happiness he would have submitted without a murmur. The better side of his nature was now uppermost and he had become actually a strong man. Suddenly he wondered if he might not with a round sum of money buy Jeanne off from her evident murderous plans, but Blanche's means were not to be thought of. Hearing the clicking of Talley's typewriting machine, and fired with a certain resolve, he crossed the hall and entered the study.

"Talley," said he, "have you still faith in that stock?"

"More than ever, major," said Talley, with a smile. "I wish I had more money to invest in it."

Goddard sat down near the young man.

"Talley, I need money awfully. By placing a mortgage on all my effects I could raise a hundred thousand. If I go into this deal it will be to lose all or win heavily. I am half a mind to plunge. What do you think?"

The young man raised his eyes slowly.

"But surely you are not so far gone as that," he ventured. "I think you said Mrs. Goddard's fortune was in good shape."

"It is in the best condition," said the major, firmly; "but I should never draw one penny of it for my own use. I wouldn't touch it to save my life."

"Oh, pardon me," said Talley, admiringly, "I understand that, major. As to the G. N. & W., of course I have boundless faith in it, but don't want to be the cause of your running such a big risk as to put all you have in it."

"Well, I am going to do it," answered Goddard. "And I want you to go right away into Wall street and see Thornton & Wilde. Tell them I agree to the mortgage we were speaking about, get their check and then go at once to Wilson & Burnham and secure the stock they offered me yesterday."

Talley drew himself up and took a deep breath.

"I am almost sorry that I mentioned it to you, major. For God's sake don't be hasty!"

"I am glad you called my attention to it," returned the major. "It is lose all or win all with me. I am willing to take the risk."

Half an hour later the major met Blanche in the long glass-roofed conservatory. She held a small watering-pot and was sprinkling some rare roses. As he came in she put down the pot and kissed him.

"Isn't the perfume in here delicious?" she exclaimed. "I feel as if I were eating it like an impalpable ice made for the delectation of the gods."

"Why did you not go to see Dr. Fleming, as you promised?" Goddard asked, as he stroked her beautiful hair, which hung loose down her back, after the manner she had worn it during her school days.

"Because he won't be in New York till Thursday," she laughed. "I really feel as if I am going to survive till then. I noticed in the Herald that he has again been delayed a few days. I assure you I shall go then."

They turned and walked from the conservatory into the drawing-room.

"There is one other matter I have been wanting to speak to you about, dear," he said.

"Well, what is it, guardian?" she asked, with a smile.

"Human life is very uncertain, dear," he said. "The longer I live the more I am convinced that we ought to make every preparation for the future. You know you have a considerable fortune. In case of your death—and you are as apt to die as I or anyone else—in case of your death you ought to leave a will. Now, you have an aunt and cousins—"

Blanche put her white hand over his mouth and looked up into his face gravely.

"Dear, dear guardian, what is the matter with you? Why are you constantly talking about my health, and now it has actually come to uneasiness about my will. If I should die and anyone—anyone but you should get my money I should not rest in my grave. I am thoroughly in earnest."

His features were set with disappointment.

"But, dear little girl, that is exactly what I want to avoid. I must not—in case of your death, mind, I say, in case of such an unexpected thing as your death—I must not profit by it financially."

"And why?"

"Simply because I cannot have it so," he answered, vaguely. "I cannot. You must make a will, Blanche, and leave your fortune to your aunt and cousins."

"But I shall never do such an absurd thing," said Blanche, with firmness; "never!"

"Not if I beg you to—not if my peace of mind and satisfaction depend on it?"

"No, not even then, for if I had willed my money to people I do not love and not to you I should never be happy again. No, you must not ask that."

"But—"

"Please stop, dear; you make me feel so unhappy." Her lower lip was quivering and he saw her eyes fill. He drew her into his arms and tried to comfort her. Her agony was too deep for utterance.

Presently she looked up, and with a hand on each side of his face she gazed at him from her big candid eyes. Her features were set, as if with an unpleasant thought.

"Don't—don't keep a thing from me, darling," she said, using that term of endearment for the first time. "Something is wrong. What is it? Is it more financial difficulties? If so, use all I have in the world if you wish. I would be happy with you on bread and water."

"It is not that," he declared, breathing rapidly.

"Well, what is it?"

"Nothing that you can help," he sighed, and he left her where she stood at the window.

The threat contained in that cabled message from London hung over him like a weight suspended by the hand of destiny. That the woman he had once blindly worshiped would be guilty of deliberate murder he did not doubt, and as the time which Jeanne would take to recross the ocean went by his fears increased until his waking and sleeping thoughts contained but one mental picture, and that was the sudden meeting between the two women and the awful consequences to Blanche.

In the deadly still hours of night he would wake with a start, imagining he heard a sound in Blanche's room, and thither he would creep, holding his revolver ready for use, only to be greeted by the sight of his beautiful treasure peacefully asleep in the light of the low burning night lamp.

After one of these frights he went back to his chamber, and for the first time for years he knelt and tried to pray. His prayer was short, but he repeated it over and over with suppressed groans.

"Oh, God, in Thy vast goodness heap the punishment of the vilest of the damned upon me, but spare her—my child wife. Spare her, oh, God! Let not the consequence of my weakness fall on her. This is all I ask, pleading for just punishment for myself, but that she be spared from pain or unhappiness."

MORE EVIDENCE.

It Is Coming In Rapidly In Plainfield.

Evidence on the following subject will prove of interest to every Plainfield reader. So many people go through the same experience daily. This public statement should be proof positive to every wavering doubter. Read it carefully.

Mr. Geo. S. McGinnis, of No. 212 Somerset street, foreman of R. H. McCullough's Sash and Door Mfg. Co., says: "I never was sick a day in my life until a pain struck me across my back and a lameness over the kidneys. I did not pay much attention to it at first, thinking it would soon pass away, but instead of this it grew worse. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills so highly recommended by those who had used them for such troubles that I went to L. W Randolph's drug store and got a box. I used them according to instructions and felt somewhat relieved. Continuing the treatment, by the time I had finished the third box, the pain in my back and lameness disappeared."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Assignee's Sale of --Valuable Real Estate--

The undersigned, assignee of Curtis M. Thorpe, will, on Thursday, the 6th day of June,

at two o'clock, on the premises, at No. 31 Mariner's avenue, in the City of Plainfield, expose for sale at public auction the following described property, to wit:

Beginning at a point in the southwesterly side of Mariner's avenue, distant southeasterly along said side of Mariner's avenue two hundred and ninety and sixty-two one hundredths (290.62) feet from the southerly corner of said Mariner's avenue and Dunellen avenue being a corner of lots 7 and 8 in Block B on "Map of Building Lots owned by George M. Phillips situate at Evona, City of Plainfield, N. J.," thence running southwesterly along line of said lots and at right angles with Mariner's avenue one hundred and twenty-five (125) feet, to a point for a corner in line of E. P. Thorn, formerly; thence southeasterly along line of said Thorn fifty (50) feet to a point for a corner of lots Nos. 6 and 7 in said Block B; thence northeasterly at right angles with Mariner's avenue and along line of said lots 6 and 7 one hundred and twenty-five (125) feet to the southwesterly side of Mariner's avenue; thence northwesterly along said side of Mariner's avenue fifty (50) feet to the place of beginning.

The above described property consists of a lot fifty feet front and rear by 125 feet deep, containing a DWELLING HOUSE about 24 feet by 34 feet with 7 rooms, all in good repair and containing all improvements.

This is a rare opportunity for any person desiring a cheap residential property, and must be sold to close up the estate

Do not forget the day, hour and place as somebody will secure a bargain. Terms of payment will be easy and made known on day of sale. EUGENE M. LAING, BOLEROS.

They Are Universally Seen In One or Another Form.

The bolero is modified in so many ways that there is no danger that its continued use will produce an effect of monotony. Sometimes it is amplified into a little coat descending somewhat below the waist line at the back and becoming decidedly longer in front; again it is so short that it shows the top of the wide corselet belt. In silk or satin the material is tucked, finely or widely, in groups or continuously, plain silk or satin not being employed.

A picture is given of a girl's costume of lettuce green voile. The skirt is ornamented with five bands of green velvet and a line of puffings of lettuce green mousseline de soie. The bodice is of green mousseline de soie puffed horizontally all over, and there is a short, open bolero of voile trimmed with green velvet and having a collar of guipure. The high collar and the belt are of green velvet. The sleeves have a short puff of voile at the top, below which they are plaited, forming another puff at the elbow. The lower part is of puffed green mousseline de soie, and there are cuffs of green velvet. The hat is of yellow straw and is trimmed with a knot of green velvet and two argus feathers.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

TRIMMINGS.

Variations on Familiar Styles Chiefly Seen.

Very narrow velvet ribbon run through the interstices of guipure is a favorite decoration. It is not by any means new, but is a great deal used.

Little ruches of mousseline de soie, used for outlining designs and enriching lace, are now being replaced by similar ruches of narrow gauze ribbon, which are much more durable and more easily managed.

Plaid, striped and figured silks are employed for separate bodices, and although plain taffeta is not abandoned it has become commonplace and is relegated to an inferior place in the wardrobe. There are many pretty new designs for silk waists, some extremely elaborate. One of the simpler styles is shown in the cut. It is of solid colored taffeta, but is tucked and stitched in such a way as to give a plaid effect. It has a large square collar, which is continued to the waist in front to form a plastron, which closes at the left side and is decorated with three artistic buttons. The sleeves are gathered with large cuffs. The straight collar, cuffs, square collar and plastrons are all of white liberty satin bordered with gold cord, and the plaited belt of satin has a gold buckle.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

UNCLE SILAS WASS.

Evolves Scheme for Doubling the Production of Eggs.

He Fooled the Hens All Right, But When It Came to Deceiving Old Nature Bottom Dropped Out of His Clever Conceit.

From Beddington, Me., a correspondent writes to the New York Sun that until three weeks ago Silas Wass believed he had made the greatest discovery of the age. Mr. Wass draws a pension. As his quarterly allowance does not supply all he needs he tries to make a little money by raising eggs for the Boston market. His expenses are so great that he finds little profit in the eggs.

He calculated that if every one of his hens laid 100 eggs a year he would come out even, and that every egg more than 100 was clear profit. He had read a great deal about the 200-egg-producing hen in the poultry papers that he took and had spent more money than he could afford to get the right breed, but the best hen he had been able to procure would not yield more than 125 eggs a year.

But his studies and experiments had not been in vain. He observed, among other things, that the really good hens always went to their nests to lay as soon as they hopped from the roosts in the morning. Here was an idea worth following up. If a hen laid every morning when the days were 24 hours long, she would no doubt keep up the practice if she lived on a planet where the days were one-half so long. Therefore he went to work to change the length of the day.

A hen is a stupid creature that mistakes any kind of darkness for night. A flock has been known to go to roost at midday during a total eclipse of the sun. Hence he reasoned that if he could have a short night made to order along about noon the hens would take it for the real thing and would conduct business to conform to the new conditions.

The next time Wass went to Bangor to ship his eggs he brought home

a great roll of curtain stuff, which was made up into heavy shades and hung on patent rollers in front of the windows in the roosting pens of his fowls. After the hens had their breakfast one morning and most of the active ones had laid their eggs, Wass began to pull down the shades, letting them drop by degrees. In 15 minutes the hens were crooning to themselves and going to roost. As soon as all was quiet Wass drew the curtains to the floor and let them remain for half an hour.

Then he walked along the pens and let in a ray of light that set the roosters to crowing. As the curtains went up by degrees and the bright light filled the pens the hens flew down and ran to their feeding troughs for breakfast. When they had been fed and watered most of them mounted aloft to the nest boxes and squatted down to lay.

"I was making money hand over fist," said Wass, "and was getting ready to sell county and state rights for the use of my great discovery, when my hens began to shed their feathers and stopped laying. It was cold weather, and a lot of them died before new feathers could grow, because hens do not shed their feathers in the winter when left in a state of nature. The ones that lived grew stiff and dumpy, so they could hardly move about. They seemed to have caught the rheumatism.

"When I killed one to cook for the minister the meat was so tough that nobody could eat it. Then I woke up to the fact that my hens were dying from old age. They had been living two days to my one, and were worn out and old by the time they had ceased to be pullets. I was sorry things turned out that way, because I had made the greatest discovery the world has ever seen. It fooled the hens, sure enough, but when I tried to honeyfogle old Nature I met my match and had to give in."

Quickest Analysis on Record.

It is the custom of the University of Rochester for the professors to give various compounds to the students to analyze without telling them what they are. George Van Vrooman received a bottle containing a dark substance. He heated a platinum wire red-hot, and plunged it in the bottle. In an instant, when an explosion occurred, he found that the shattered bottle had contained gunpowder. As he lay in the hospital nursing his wounds, it was little comfort to him to know that he had made an unusually rapid analysis.

SUFFERING IN JACKSONVILLE.

Many Apply For Aid, Which Is Freely Pouring In.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. May 9.—The full meaning of the widespread suffering in Jacksonville is realized when it is announced that a great number of men who have never been used to manual labor are clamoring for work. Among them are clerks, collectors, bookkeepers and even professional men, three young physicians especially declaring their condition destitute, as they have lost wardrobes, libraries, office fixtures and everything in the fire. The department of labor has undertaken to give clerical employment to all of these applicants.

The executive committee of the Relief association has arranged to establish a sewing team, and 25 sewing machines were ordered and other appurtenances which will enable the seamstresses who have lost everything to get to work again, and they will relieve the condition of the fire sufferers who have lost all clothing but the clothes they are wearing.

Two carloads of clothing and provisions and one carload of potatoes arrived yesterday morning from New York on the New York Journal's special relief train. The arrival of the goods greatly relieved the situation.

Good work is being done by the Ladies' Relief association, and many ladies of the better class who had been hiding their desperate condition were relieved.

The sewers have become clogged up owing to the broken pipes throughout the city, and a force of 100 men were put to work yesterday cleaning the pipes and flushing the sewers. In the several tented villages a sanitary force was put to work, and it is believed with an exercise of great care that all danger from typhoid fever will be eliminated.

The city is still under martial law, and 660 men and 43 officers are in control of the city, under Colonel Lovell.

Over $500,000 worth of insurance already has been paid by the adjusters, and the people are commencing the erection of temporary places of business and dwellings. A new Windsor hotel is to be erected, at a cost of $300,000, and work was commenced yesterday clearing away the debris for the laying of the foundations. The Gardner building also will be erected at once on the old site.

Yesterday one other body was found in the ruins, that of Mrs. Solon Robinson, whose late husband was a member of the staff of the New York Tribune. Nothing remained to tell the story of her death but a cupful of bones, which were found in the debris of her late home on Church street.

Relief is coming in generously on every train, and the subscription list to date amounts to about $85,000, with promises of aid from many places which has not yet arrived.

Exposition Becoming Popular.

BUFFALO, May 9.—Yesterday afternoon's drenching showers had but little effect on the attendance at the Pan-American exposition. The thousands of visitors simply stepped inside the buildings and gave no heed to the rumbling skies. Tens of thousands can be swallowed up in these great exhibit palaces without a sign of crowding. The exposition is gaining in popularity. A matter of thunder, a splutter of lightning and a spatter of rain are no longer enough to keep sightseers away. The dust and clay, that turn to mud, are fast disappearing under the bricks and asphalt. The rapidity with which this work is being done is one of the wonders of the exposition. Long stretches of asphalt fairly grow before the visitor's eyes, and one week more will see the last of the pavement makers. A system of sprinkling the promenades has been inaugurated, adding greatly to the comfort of the sightseers.

A Perilous Fall.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Dangling 60 feet in the air, with one ankle caught in a knotted rope, Charles Brockholtz, a steeplejack, hung for half an hour yesterday awaiting instant death. Brockholtz had been regilding the ball on top of the 70 foot flagstaff at the corner of Second avenue and Adams street, Hoboken. His foot slipped, and he would have been dashed to the ground had not the rope to which his paint pot was attached knotted about his left ankle and held him. His screams attracted attention. Some one rang a fire alarm. When the engines reached the scene, they found no flames, but a huge crowd pointing upward at the steeplejack. A 70 foot extension ladder was run up the pole, and Brockholtz was carried in safety to the ground.

Strikers Renew Demonstrations.

DERBY, Conn., May 9.—The demonstrations of strikers from the Alling mills were renewed last night. Lewis Scarpa, the father of two of the newly hired girls, at 6 o'clock attempted, with the aid of several policemen, to escort his daughters across the Shelton bridge to their home. A mob outside the gates immediately closed around the party, throwing stones, eggs and sticks and jostling them about the street. Two other officers escorting employees were roughly handled, but no arrests were made. A hack, supposed to contain the superintendent of the Alling works, was stoned by the crowd, and an attempt was made to overturn it, but without success.

Volunteers Mustered Out.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 9.—The Thirty-second infantry, United States volunteers, was formally mustered out of the service at the Presidio yesterday.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Hope second and the St. Mary's Second baseball teams will cross bats Saturday afternoon on the Hope grounds. The game will be called at 3 o'clock. The Hope team will play the Clinton Avenues on the latter's grounds.

Previous to last Saturday's game between the St. Mary and Clinton Avenue teams, the members of the former were photographed in uniform, together with the officers of the club. The proofs show an excellent picture and there is already a heavy demand for them.

The May schedule for the Westfield Baseball Association is as follows:

May 11—Hudsons, of Hoboken.
" 18—Murray Hills, of New York.
" 25—Hudsons, of Hoboken.
" 30 a. m.—Knickerbocker A. C.
" 30 p. m.—Equitable Life Assurance Company.

In a baseball game played on the Watchung avenue grounds yesterday afternoon, the Winners defeated the Twentieth Centuries by a score of 16 to 10. The battery for the Winners was Stewart and Linke and for the Twentieth Centuries, Phillips and Bingaman. The Winners would like to arrange a game with any team averaging twelve years, for May 13. Address George Cole, Jr., manager, 200 West Second street.

GOLF.

In the intercollegiate team matches at golf at Atlantic City this week, W. L. Glenney, of Columbia, was beaten 2 down by Brown, of Harvard.

Steward Ivamy is now prepared to serve meals at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club house. Since the opening there have been several small dinner parties.

The members of the Westfield Golf Club are now beginning to enjoy their fine course, which is nearing completion. In a short time the regular schedule of events will be started.

The opening of the regular schedule of events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course will take place Saturday, May 18, when there will be play at 10 a. m., for the Fisk handicap cup. The first team match will be played between Hillside and Princeton on the home course, May 25.

Culverts Nearly Completed.

The work of placing culverts at the corner of West Second street and Liberty street, to assist in carrying off the surface water from New street, is nearly completed.

—Skin affections will readily disappear by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Look out for counterfeits. If you get DeWitt's you get good results. It is the quick and positive cure for piles. L. W. Randolph.

FUNERAL OF PETER MILLER.

Service Held Yesterday Afternoon—Mass Will Be Said Tomorrow.

The funeral services over the remains of Peter Miller, who was killed in an accident Tuesday morning, were held from St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon. They were conducted by Rev. Father Smyth. At the close, the remains were interred in St. Mary's cemetery.

According to a custom of the Poles, a funeral service must be held in the afternoon, when it is against the rules of the Catholic church to say mass. For this reason, one will be chanted for the repose of his soul tomorrow.

OPENS MAY 25.

Preparations Being Made For Opening of Recreation Park.

Contract was made yesterday by Maze Edwards, lessee of Recreation Park, with Wilcox & Pope, contractors of Westfield, for the construction of a music hall and pavilion for summer night concerts. The size of the building is to be 80x60 feet. It is to be elaborately finished with a fine dancing floor. George Rogers will be associate manager and direct the orchestra of ten members. Recreation Park will open May 25.

Charged With Illegal Liquor Selling.

James Brown, an Italian who keeps a small grocery store on Cottage place, was arraigned before City Judge Runyon this morning charged by Demetrius Lavorette, with illegal liquor selling. Brown claimed he was not ready for trial and asked for an adjournment. It was set down for Saturday morning and he was released on his own recognizance until that time.

Found Guilty of Charge.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, May 9.—John Andrews, John Nicholas and Charles Valentine, the three young men caught breaking and entering the house of Dr. Sarles, at Stelton, were arraigned in court yesterday and found guilty. Andrews was sent to the Reform School, while the other two were remanded for sentence.

Will Clear Indebtedness.

A rally will be held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church May 26, at which time a grand effort will be made to raise $280, the entire church indebtedness. It is proposed to have one preaching service at the church during August, thus there will be no expense for lighting the church for the month.

Secured Good Position.

Andrew Blair, of West Fourth street, former golf expert of the Park Golf Club, has secured an excellent position as an inspector of golf clubs in a large factory at Westboro, Mass. He will assume his new duties Monday.

—A meeting of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association will be held this evening in its office on Park avenue, for the purpose of amending its by-laws.

CIVIL WAR VETERANS TO MEET AT SHORE.

State Encampment of G. A. R. to be Held at Asbury Park, June 5 and 6.

RECEPTION OF GUESTS.

PLEASANT RESORT WILL EXTEND A HEARTY WELCOME.

Plans for the Two Day's Sessions Are Not Yet Complete—Will Meet in Auditorium—Contest for Department Commander.

As the time draws near much interest is taken by veterans of the Civil War in the annual encampment to be held June 5 and 6 at Asbury Park.

A citizens' committee has been organized at that pleasant seashore town, to look after the comforts of the G. A. R. delegates. The hospitality of people of Asbury Park is too well known to need any mention and it is safe to say that the veterans will be well entertained.

All but one of the 111 posts in the State will be represented. One delegate for every fifty men enrolled in a post is the proportion of representation. In addition, all past post commanders are privileged to act as delegates. Altogether over 500 representatives of the various posts will be in attendance. As heretofore, Hudson and Essex counties are expected to send the most men.

The meetings will be held in the far-famed Auditorium. The programme of the encampment has not been mapped out. The first session, however, will open at 10 o'clock on the morning of June 5. Reports of the department officers, as received by the proper committees, will be read. In the afternoon the reports of the various committees will be read and nominations of officers for the ensuing year will be in order. A camp-fire, held in the evening, will serve to help the old soldiers remember the time spent in the service of their country.

The election of officers will be the exciting feature of the morning session of the second day. Other matters to be considered before the adjournment at 4 o'clock in the afternoon will be the reports and resolutions. A resolution advocating an increase in the proportion of representation will be the most important measure presented. Adjutant-General E. P. Southwick, who has this resolution in tow, believes that one delegate should be appointed for every twenty members in a post, instead of one for every fifty as is now the rule. Owing to various causes the membership has dwindled down to less than 5,550 men. Ten years ago there were over 7,800 members.

A lively contest is expected for the office of department commander. The candidates now in the field for the honor are: Past Senior Vice-Department Commander Oscar F. Gifford, of Newark; John Lawrence of New Brunswick; Charles F. Hopkins, of Boonton, and James F. Connelly, of Newark. The chances of the various men mentioned are thought to be nearly equal, but the advantage, if there be any, is with Mr. Gifford, whose candidacy meets with the hearty approval of his comrades.

The department headquarters during the encampment will be located in the parlors of the West End Hotel.

Y. M. C. A. CONFERENCE.

Association in Fourth District Will Meet at Freehold.

A Y. M. C. A. conference of the associations, comprising the fourth district of New Jersey, will be held at Freehold, May 18 and 19, for the purpose of discussing matters of interest pertaining to work among young men in small towns.

The conference promises to be one of interest. Plainfield's Y. M. C. A., which belongs to the fourth district, will be represented. At the last conference held at Lambertville on April 20, F. H. Andrews, of Central avenue, made an address.

LECTURED ON CONVERSATION.

INTERESTING TALK BY MRS. JULIA KEESE COLLES, OF MORRISTOWN.

Given at Home of Mrs. Reuben Knox, of Washington Avenue, Yesterday Afternoon.

Mrs. Reuben Knox gave her friends a great pleasure yesterday afternoon at her home on Washington avenue, in the lecture given by Mrs. Julia Keese Colles, of Morristown.

The subject of the lecture was "The Art of Conversation," and was treated by Mrs. Colles in a logical manner, being at the same time full of entertainment and helpful suggestions. Observation, reflection, and acquaintance with current events, reading good books of prose and poetry, sincere expression of thought and pleasant description of interesting topics were given as helps in cultivating this most agreeable art. The French Salons, modern receptions and classes for training the voice, thought and power of expression were phases of her subject treated by Mrs. Colles in a manner altogether delightful.

At the close of the lecture, the guests had an opportunity to practice Mrs. Colles' teaching as they met her and enjoyed a social hour over the tea cups. The tea table was presided over by Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer and Miss Ida Yerkes, assisted by Miss Hackett, a sister of Mrs. Knox, Miss Bessie Hackett, her niece, the Misses Shreve, Hull, VanDeventer, Honeyman and Demezier.

Some piano selections were beautifully rendered by Miss Frances Weir, a part of them being of her own composition.

The rooms were artistically decorated with baskets of wild flowers, jonquils and arbutus from Massachusetts.

MOVED BIG PRESSES.

Difficult Work Was Accomplished With Much Expedition By Scott's Press Works Men.

The construction of the rapid transit tunnel in New York city is causing many changes in underground New York among the sub-basements of the large buildings, which sometimes extend some distance underground into the street. The Rapid Transit Company has the "right of way," and demands the removal of anything that stands in its path.

Two of the mammoth Scott fourtiered presses, weighing about forty tons each, installed at the New York Times, which were running under the pedestrians' feet on Park Row, were moved back a distance of ten feet. It was necessary to do this work quickly in order to avoid belating or losing an issue of the paper. After loosening the foundations and removing some of the projecting parts, the machines were moved bodily by means of hydraulic lifts, steel beams, rollers, etc., and then reset on the new foundations.

This work was done by G. Goodwin & Sons, the house shorers, of New York city, and a gang of machinists from the Scott's Printing Machine Works, of this city, the builders of the machines. Each machine was moved and put in running order in twenty-four hours.

CAN ONLY SELL PAPERS.

Ruling Regarding the Union News Company's Agent at the Station.

Alfred Lacey, agent for the Union News Company at the North Avenue station, is now prohibited from using the main window at the new station as a place to put his papers during the morning hours. Superintendent W. W. Wentz, Jr., informed Mr. Lacey a few days ago that he must carry the papers under his arm and would not be allowed to use any part of the station as a stand. He is also prohibited from selling anything but papers. It appears that the news company have no rights about the new station and that they cannot even erect a stand on that side of the tracks.

Miss Willis Will Sing.

Miss Bertha VanN. Willis, of Prospect place, has been engaged as the soprano soloist at the First Presbyterian church, and will sing with the mixed quartette, the other members of which are Miss Grace Teller, Wilson Derby and Fred Tallamy.

Miss Oakley to Wed.

Miss Sadie Oakley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Oakley, Jr., of Lorraine, is to be married to George Ring, of that borough, in the early part of June. Miss Oakley's father is an architect in Elizabeth, and formerly resided in this city.

Will Visit Bernards Lodge.

A delegation of members from Columbia and Central Lodges, A. O. U. W., will go to Basking Ridge Tuesday evening, May 14, to visit Bernards Lodge. The trip will be made in stages.

RARE MUSICAL TREAT AT Y. M. C. A. HALL.

William E. MacClymont's Concert Was Given Before An Appreciative Audience.

RAIN KEPT MANY AWAY.

SOLO QUARTETTE FROM HOLY TRINITY CHURCH WAS PRESENT.

'Cello and 'Cello Playing by W. Paulding DeNike—Piano Solos by Miss Lillian Fancher and Miss Beatrice Miner.

The recital given at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, last evening, under the direction of William E. MacClymont, was a rare musical treat. The unfavorable weather detained many from attending who otherwise would have been present. Those who were there, however, went home with the feeling that they had been well repaid for venturing out in such an inclement atmosphere. From first to last, every number of the well-selected programme was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience, which did not fail to show its appreciation.

The solo quartette of Holy Trinity church, New York, with whom Mr. MacClymont is associated as organist of the church, furnished the vocal music. Miss Lillian Fancher, of Fanwood, and Miss Beatrice Miner, of this city, two pupils of Mr. MacClymont, on this occasion made their first public appearance as pianists. From New York also came William Paulding DeNike, with whom as a 'cellist the musical public of Plainfield is already acquainted.

Mr. DeNike rendered as opening numbers, "Adagio," by Bach; and "Spanish Dance," by Popper. Both of these were well received, and the latter especially brought out much applause. Later in the evening he played the "Hungarian Rhapsodie," by Popper, and was compelled to respond to an encore.

"Springtide," by Becker was sung as a soprano solo by Mrs. Jennie Hall Buckhout and towards the close of the entertainment she also sang "He Loves Me," by Chadwick and two pieces by Zoller, "Nightingale's Song" and "Fly Little Song to My Love." The audience was too well pleased to be satisfied with these, so after persistent applause Mr. Buckhout rendered "The Four Leaf Clover."

Especially good were the bass solos by E. H. Lockhart, entitled "King of the Woods," by David, "My Love Loves Me," by Howson, and "A Song of Sleep," by Somerset. In the latter two Mr. DeNike rendered 'cello obligatos. Mrs. Katherine Hanford sang three contralto solos during the evening. They were "Sans Toi," by Hardilot, "Impatience" by Schubert and "The Quest," by Smith. They were highly appreciated.

"Thou Art Mine All," by Bradsky, and Queen of the Earth," by Pinsuti, were sung by A. B. Patton, who is gifted with a fine tenor voice.

During the forepart of the recital, Miss Lillian Fancher displayed great ability as a pianist in her sympathetic rendition of "La Fileuse," by Raff.

The painstaking care of Mr. MacClymont was again exemplified again in the work of Miss Beatrice Miner who played with much accuracy a very difficult piano solo, "Revolutionary Study," Op. 10, No. 12, by Chopin.

All the vocalists and Mr. DeNike were accompanied by Mr. MacClymont in his usual efficient manner.

Locating Water Mains.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company yesterday put a gang of men to work on Somerset street digging up the roadbed at certain points along the thoroughfare. Its purpose is to ascertain the exact course of the water pipe along the street as the intention of the company is to lay its conduits closely parallel to the water main.

Columbia Lodge Will Entertain.

The members of Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., will entertain their wives and friends Friday evening, May 17. Rev. Dr. Snodgrass will make an address and a programme of interest and pleasure will be presented.

Tea and Musicale.

Preparations are rapidly being made to start the new large engine at the Plainfield Electric Light Company plant.

MOVING PICTURES.

Free Open Air Exhibition Will Be Given On North Avenue Monday Evening.

There will be free open air exhibition of moving pictures Monday evening at 8 o'clock, if clear, on North avenue, opposite The Daily Press office. The entertainment is the same as has been given in the halls and churches of this place, costing an admission of twenty-five cents. There will also be a stereopticon exhibition interspersed with advertisements of local business men.

The moving pictures to shown are Queen Victoria's funeral cortage, pillow fight, bathing scene, Black Diamond Express, Corbett-Jeffries fight, etc. The stereopticon exhibition will consist of a tour of Europe and American dissolving views.

PLAINFIELDERS IN PANIC.

MANY FELT EFFECTS OF TROUBLE IN THE STOCK MARKET.

Most of These Were the Speculators On a Small Scale—Many Brokers Were Kept in Town All Night.

The wild fluctuations of the New York stock market, during the past few days, have won and lost fortunes for hundreds of brokers, among whom were many Plainfielders. But not only have the brokers suffered, but people residing in this city who have placed small amounts on certain stock on speculation, have felt the depression which follow losses or the elation of winning. The former are largely in the majority as most purchases were made early in the week when stocks were forced far beyond their real worth. When fall came yesterday scores of small investors saw the savings of years swept away in a moment.

All yesterday afternoon and evening, the telegraph and telephone wires between this city and New York were kept humming with the messages of brokers and customers, the latter making every effort to escape being squeezed. When the commuters' train drew out of the North Avenue station this morning, many of the familiar faces were missing. The immense transactions of the past few days and the critical condition of the market made it impossible for them to return home last evening. Many of them spent the night in their offices in a wild endeavor to get matters straightened out before another day's business began.

The end of the terrible excitement is in sight, and when it is over there will be a wailing and gnashing of teeth by those who were on the wrong side of the market.

BUILDING TRADES' BALL.

Held in Washington Hall And Was a Great Success.

The first grand ball of the Building Trades' Council was held in Washington Hall last evening and was a grand success. There were over six hundred tickets sold for the affair and there were over four hundred people present. Eugene O'Reilly and his orchestra furnished the music for dancing. There were sixty-three numbers on the programme, everyone of which was enjoyed. The dance was continued until an early hour this morning when the merry crowd left for their homes.

The committee on the dance was Samuel Tunison, chairman; J. H. Wakefield, Fred Sutton, Edward McCann and Frank T. McInerney. The floor manager was John Moran and his assistants were Fred Sutton and M. J. Higgins.

CASTE ANNOUNCED.

Those Who Are To Take Part In "The Shades of Night."

The caste for "The Shades of Night," to be given at the Casino May 25, will be Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, Miss Maud VanBoskerck, George Ring and Frederic W. Goddard.

George S. Houghton, of New York, who so successfully coached "Mr. Bob," is to act in the same capacity for "The Shades of Night."

MANY HEARD A FINE MUSICAL PROGRAMME

Given For The Benefit Of The German Reformed Church Last Evening.

IT WAS MUCH ENJOYED.

AFFAIR WAS GIVEN UNDER DIRECTION OF P. LUDWIG CONDE.

Programme Included Selections By Orchestra Led By Mr. Conde. The Arion Glee Club and Several Soloists.

A vocal and instrumental concert was given last evening in the German Reformed church under the direction of P. Ludwig Conde, for the benefit of the church. The seating capacity of the church was pressed to the limit.

While everyone did well, there were a few who received special consideration. Mr Conde, Miss Virginia H. Ketcham, of Westfield, violinist; Fermin Ferrer, of New York, 'cellist and Louis Schnepel, the blind baritone, of Elizabeth, each were accorded flattering applause and were presented with handsome bouquets.

Mr. Conde was assisted by an orchestra of ten pieces and the soloists, as well as by the Arion Glee Club, of Elizabeth. Miss Florence Cahoone and Vincent Sokol were the efficient accompanists, and Katheryn Langhorne, violinist, also assisted. In part first, the orchestra rendered "Hail to the Spirit of Liberty," by Sousa, and "Spring Song," by Mendelssohn. The glee club sang "At Darling's Door," while Mr. Schnepel sang "Recognition," by H. Proch. The closing number was a 'cello solo, "Gavotte," David Popper, by Mr. Ferrer.

Part second opened with a double number, the first being "Intermezza russe (Vasee), by an octette, and the second was a trio, "Norwegian Dance," by Messrs. Ferrer, Conde and Sokol. The last number received an encore and the selection was repeated. The next number, "Mazurka de Concert," Ovide Musin, a violin solo, by Miss Ketcham, was given in a delightful manner. She received the heartiest applause and responded with a popular selection as an encore.

The rest of the programme consisted of two selections by the orchestra, "Lorely," by Jos. Nesvadba, and "Salome," by Loraine, and the glee club sang "Silent Water Rose," and "My Old Kentucky Home," as an encore. In several instances the numbers were so greatly enjoyed that they were repeated, and the performers responded in a generous and kindly manner.

FRANCHISE GRANTED.

Work Will Now Start on Gas Main From Somerville to Bound Brook.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, May 10.—The Township Committee of Bridewater township has at last granted a satisfactory franchise to the Somerset Lighting Company, and work will soon be commenced on laying the gas pipes from Somerville to Bound Brook.

The Committee desired two per cent. of the company's gross receipts in addition to that already allowed by the State law, and this the company has been fighting against ever since last summer. Finally the Township Committee had it stricken out. The lighting company is required to furnish four street lights between Somerville and Bound Brook free of charge, and to keep them burning every night in the year from sunset until sunrise.

DONE AT CITY'S REQUEST.

Street Railway Tracks Repaired on East Front Street Before Street is Re-surfaced.

The repair of the street railway track on East Front street was done at the request of the street department, as it was desired to have all necessary repairs finished before the work of resurfacing the street was undertaken, it is proposed to begin this improvement as soon as Liberty street is completed, and the street railway company will pay one-third of the cost of macadamizing the whole width of the roadway, forty feet.

The company has also been notified of the unsatisfactory condition of the pavement where the track was repaired in Woodland avenue and elsewhere.

Mantonomo Meets Tonight.

STOLEN MONEY RETURNED.

BUT NOT UNTIL THE POLICE HAD MADE THINGS LIVELY.

Colored Woman Finally Confessed To Taking Pocketbook From Counter in a Store.

Through the prompt action of the police department, a pocketbook taken from I. H. Boehm's store on West Front street yesterday afternoon, was restored with the contents to its owner, Miss Goodman, of Manning avenue. The women implicated in the theft were Minnie Smith and Rebecca Holmes, both colored, and after being placed under arrest the Smith woman confessed to being the guilty party.

Miss Goodman had been shopping in Boehm's store and left her pocketbook on the counter. The colored women, seeing it, claimed ownership and took it from the store. Shortly afterward Patrolman Charles Flynn noticed the Smith woman drop the pocktbook on West Second street and began to investigate the matter. In the meanwhile the theft was reported by Boehm's to the police headquarters.

Patrolman Flynn located Minnie Smith, while Patrolman McCarthy arrested Rebecca Holmes. Both were brought to the station house, and each emphatically denied being guilty of the wrongdoing. Patrolman McCarthy searched the Smith woman's room in a house in West Sixth street, and found two $5 bills, one old and one new, and some odd change, tied in a handkerchief. This tallied with the description given by the owner.

Minnie Smith had told the police that she had a $5 bill of her own and $7 which belonged to her sister. On being confronted with the facts ascertained by Patrolman McCarthy, the woman confessed and claimed she had given $1 to the Holmes woman to keep the matter quiet.

The money was restored to the rightful owner, who refused to prosecute the guilty woman.

WILL PLAY GAME.

No Break in Friendly Relations Between City and Borough School Teams.

There has been some discussion during the past few days among the North Plainfield High School Athletic Association members as to the advisability of cancelling the two remaining baseball games scheduled with the Plainfield High School team.

The Borough High School lads' complaint is based on alleged rough playing by the City High School boys in the game Wednesday. This morning the manager and captain of the North Plainfield High School team laid the matter before Superintendent Wightman for an ultimate decision. Mr. Wightman advised the boys to continue the friendly relations which have always existed between the two associations, and so the game arranged for next Wednesday will be played.

In this connection it should be said that Manager Kinsman and the officials of the City High School Athletic Association deny having roughly treated the opposing team and express good will towards the boys from over the brook.

Fowler's Up-to-date Place.

Fowler's up-to-date candy kitchen and ice cream parlor, on East Front street, is steadily growing in popularity. Mr. Fowler has fitted up handsome ice cream parlors in the rear of his candy store, where patrons will find a cool place to enjoy the delicious ice cream and ices served. A large fountain with long marble counter is a new addition, where lovers of pure soda water with pure fruit syrups can be found at all times. A feature is the five-cent ice cream soda, none better. Mr. Fowler has installed an electric motor for freezing cream. He sells home-made candies fresh every day.

Teachers Association Meeting.

The spring meeting of the Somerset County Teachers' Association will be held at Bound Brook Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The teachers from the borough will attend.

Thirteen Years Old.

The thirteenth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren chapel will be commemorated with appropriate exercises Thursday evening, May 16.

Liberty Street in Fine Condition.

Liberty street, which has just been macadamized, is now in fine condition. The work has been needed for a long time and is now appreciated by the residents.

—A fresh and choice supply of all kinds of vegetables can always be found at Neuman Bros.

WORKING TO SUPPORT THEIR CITY NURSE.

Reports of the Work Heard at the Semi-Annual Meeting of City Union of King's Daughters.

HELD IN THE AFTERNOON.

INTERESTING ADDRESS GIVEN BY REV. C. E. HERRING.

Reports Presented By Different Circles—Election of Officers Was Held And Miss Lillian A. Force Elected President.

Despite the exceedingly disagreeable weather, the semi-annual meeting of the City Union of the King's Daughters, held yesterday afternoon in Vincent chapel, was well attended by the members and friends of the various circles, which are lending their efforts to support a city nurse.

The deliberations of the Union were fraught with much interest, and the encouraging reports read were listened to with gratification by those whose services are enlisted in the noble cause to which the organization is dedicated. An address delivered by Rev. Charles E. Herring and an election of officers for the ensuing year constituted the more important features of the meeting.

A short devotional service, led by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church, preceded the regular business meeting. After a hymn, entitled "Take Time to be Holy," had been sung, Rev. Dr. Snodgrass read a passage of Scripture and offered prayer.

The business session then commenced by the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting by the retiring secretary, Miss Lillian A. Force, of the Whatsoever Circle of Trinity Reformed church. Miss Edith Little, of the Dorcas Circle, as treasurer, read the financial report. It showed that the organization is in a prosperous condition. The total receipts were $1,356.76 and the disbursements $953.08, which leaves the snug sum of $403 68 in the Union's coffers.

The nurse's report, read by Miss Evans, who has been in charge since the departure of Miss Delaney for Montreal, showed that the nurse has been on duty under seventeen physicians and has made 716 visits. Out of sixty cases which the nurse has attended to only two terminated fatally. Following this report, Miss Emelie Tracy, the chairman of the nurse committee, reported in detail the work which had been accomplished. When she had concluded a vote of thanks was extended to the committee.

Choosing as the subject of his discourse, "Help," Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, delivered a timely address. His remarks were on self-sacrifice, thoughtfulness, humility and continuance, forming the four thoughts which suggested themselves to him as appropriate subdivisions of his subject.

With one exception, the reports of the twelve circles, which constitute the City Union, were then read by representatives of the several organizations. They all bore evidence of the earnest work of those who have labored faithfully to advance the worthy cause.

The Benevolent Band report was read by Miss M. L. Stoors, its secretary. This association has raised $106 64 and of the amount contributed $75 towards the support of the nurse. Whatsoever Circle of the Park Avenue Baptist church contributed $13.49. Its report was read by the secretary, Miss Laura Runyon. Mrs. S. H. Hummer's report as secretary of the Advance Circle, showed that $50 was contributed by it towards the nurse's support.

The report of the Daughters of the Cross Circle was read by Miss Lillian A. Force, for the secretary, Mrs. Walter M. McGee, who was absent. This organization raised $181 49 and gave $100 to the fund designated. Miss Force also read the report of Whatsoever Circle of Trinity Reformed church, of which she is secretary. It gave $25 toward the fund. A like amount was contributed by Golden Rule Circle for which Miss Mamie Steiner, its secretary, made the report.

A band of children associated under the name of Cheerful Workers gave as its share $50. This society's president, Miss Effie Strong, read the report. Charity Circle's report was read by Mrs. Lillian Drake. Its total receipts were $305, and its contribution to the nurses support $100.

The total receipts of Brightside

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

Of special interest to the trolley conductors is a decision recently made by Supreme Court in New York. It has been held that a woman, in getting off a street car, must be given time to gather up her skirts, in addition to a reasonable time to get off the car. The conductor, according to a decision, must see that her skirts are clear of any car fittings before he starts the car.

Now that the evenings are bright and balmy many in this locality, interested in astronomy to a more or less degree, are searching for the planets and larger stars, conspicuous in the heavens during the month. Mars, Jupiter, Uranus, Saturn and Venus are evening stars, while Mercury will be also during the latter part of the month. Just at present, however, Mercury is a morning star. Jupiter and Saturn rise in the evening between 11 o'clock and midnight, but together with Uranus, they are too low to be observed in the northern hemisphere. Venus, while an evening star, can not be seen easily because it is not far away from the sun. Mars is nearly in conjunction with Regulus. The interval between this planet and the star is close to three diameters of the moon.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by L. W. Randolph. Only 50 cents.

—Those in charge of the sale of goods at the Plainfield Furniture Company store expect to close out everything within a few days.

—Mr. W. J. Baxter, of North Brook, N. C., says he suffered with piles for fifteen years. He tried many remedies with no results until he used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve and that quickly cured him. L. W. Randolph.

—A well known cure for all poulty diseases is Thanolice. It is sure death to insects of all kinds. This desirable cure can be purchased at Shaw's pharmacy.

—If people only knew what we know about Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, it would be used in nearly every household, as there are few people who do not suffer from a feeling of fullness after eating, belching, flatulence, sour stomach or water-brash, caused by indigestion or dyspepsia. A preparation, such as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which, with no aid from the stomach, will digest your food, certainly can't help but do you good. L. W. Randolph.

Corner In Northern Pacific Creates Terrible Havoc.

FORTUNES SWEPT AWAY

Worst Day Seen In Wall Street For Thirty Years.

NORTHERN PACIFIC SHOT TO 1000.

Market Broke at 11 O'clock, and For an Hour Pandemonium Reigned. Relief Came Through a Suspension of Deliveries and the Loan of Millions by Bankers at a Low Rate. History of the Movement Which Culminated Yesterday.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Bitter stress developed in Wall street by the second hour of trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday. The violence of the commotion had spent much of its force, at least for the time being, when the chairman's gavel fell, announcing the close of the day's proceedings. The casualties were great, and the field of battle was strewn with the wounded and maybe with the dying. But of actual fatalities none were recorded of importance during the day.

During the height of the panic rumors of insolvencies were bandied about more quickly than they could be reported. But no confirmations could be had of the intimations of financial wreck. Those against whom the rumors pointed refused even to show any sign of distress and professed themselves ready to meet all obligations. In more than one instance the answer to these rumors was for a representative of the house to go upon the Stock Exchange and place loans to a large amount, as indicating the abundance of resources at hand. But, notwithstanding these and similar devices for keeping up credit and confidence, the fact was too obvious from the crash of values on the exchange that credits and borrowing power were shrinking at a prodigious rate not to leave the mind of the whole financial world in a condition of intense strain. But the indications at the close of the day were strong that the principal damage had been wrought upon the speculative class or upon holders of securities on margin for whatever purpose.

The banks have been so well protected by recent extensions of the margins exacted in the market value of collateral over the amount of loans placed that they had little to fear short of an absolute wiping out at market values. The shrinkage of collateral made it necessary for the banks in many cases to exact additional collateral during the day, and this added much to the distress for a time. But in the late dealings the principal banks in the financial district agreed to form a pool and raise a fund to loan the money rate down to 6 per cent on Stock Exchange. The bid for money had been run up to 60 per cent and was threatening to keep alive the panic. A dozen banks quickly came to an agreement to raise $16,000,000, with implied willingness to increase the sum if necessary. There were very heavy loans placed also by individual banks, ranging in some cases to $25,000,000 and $30,000,000. Through the early part of the day bankers exacted the market rate for loans, but with the growing need to suppress the panic they offered the rate down to 6 per cent. Old customers of the banks were not charged over 6 per cent at any time, but when outsiders came in asking for loans the law of supply and demand was allowed to run its force.

The state of excitement was very apparent all through the financial district during the period of the panic, but there were few sensational scenes. Now and then a white faced woman would peer from a cab outside a broker's office and would be driven off in a fainting condition after receiving a message from the interior. Wherever any near approach could be made to a ticker or to a board on which quotations were posted there were great throngs of excited spectators scrambling for a view of the course of the market. But the real stress of the occasion came upon men who were shut up in either their private offices or those of brokers or who were struggling and even fighting on the floor of the exchange.

The outside country could obtain little idea of the actual occurrences on the exchange, as the brokers are remote from the public galleries in their temporary quarters in the Produce Exchange and are shut off from view by the 16 foot wall. In the brokers' offices sat many men who were reduced to absolute ruin as a result of 15 minutes' proceedings on the Stock Exchange. Some of these have been made opulent within a few weeks past as a result of the unparalleled rise of prices. With the true gambling spirit they have replaced all their winnings in new ventures on each successful turn. Yesterday's drop therefore wiped them all out. In many cases one could see the gamblers' fortitude with which the chances of gain were accepted. But the glittering attraction of this market has brought into it a constantly increasing assortment of more staid and inexperienced speculators, men and women who have brought long standing hordes from secret places and from savings bank deposits with the determination to make one successful stroke and then retire with the proceeds. The demonstrations from this class, which includes many women speculators, furnished the hysterical scenes and sensations of the day.

There was a strong feeling in the morning before proceedings had commenced on the Stock Exchange that a panic could be averted only by the strongest measures and with the greatest difficulties. The fact was apparent that the corner in Northern Pacific was still unbroken. The excited bidding Wednesday night to secure the stock for delivery yesterday made that very apparent. The first efforts to avert the panic were devoted to circulating reports that the conferences between the contending interests in Northern Pacific, which continued in one form or another throughout the night, had resulted in a compromise which would free the shorts in the stock from their compromised position.

These efforts proved utterly ineffective in face of the first quotations for Northern Pacific on the tape. The price paid for the stock ran up quickly to $200 per share, and then to $300, to $500 and even to $700 per share on regular transactions and $1,000 per share for cash. The cash price paid meant that unfortunate shorts who were unable to borrow the stock for delivery had to pay whatever cash price the engineers of the corner chose to ask for it. The figures indicated in these opening transactions meant ruin for a very large outstanding short interest in the stock. The perception of this fact was the principal impelling cause in producing the demoralization in the stock market.

It was a very notable fact that throughout the most acute period of the disturbance there was nothing heard to indicate doubt of the sound and prosperous conditions of industry and business at large in the country. The stock market collapse was attributed exclusively to overspeculation and an overextension of credits used in holding stocks which it was not designed to keep, but to sell at a higher price.

The struggle of financial giants which broke the most remarkable movement that American stocks has ever had dates back but a fortnight. E. H. Harriman and his associates, so they relate the story in the street, discovered that brokers representing J. P. Morgan & Co. were buying Union Pacific. Harriman at once began increasing his own holdings, buying on a market that rapidly advanced, and when sure of control submitted a proposition for some basis of agreement as to the control of Burlington, just acquired by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. That offer was rejected.

On Monday last there began a sensational movement in Northern Pacific, and the public got the first intimation of the battle for supremacy. Street & Norton took all of the stock they could get, seemingly without regard to price. Much of the stock sold to them was for short account and could not be delivered. It developed finally that there were three large interests in the property, two seeking its management and the third a speculative profit. Both the Harriman syndicate and the Morgan-Hill interests claimed control, and the predicament of the shorts was made worse by the fear of both the Harriman and Morgan syndicates to lend the stock to the shorts. It was this fear that led Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of the Harriman interests to seek an understanding with Morgan & Co. as to the lending of stock to shorts. To have loaned without an understanding was to court the danger of losing the stock and possibly the dearly purchased opportunity to control.

The shorts learned Wednesday that they were severely cornered and made frantic efforts to secure stock. The movement for their relief began that night, but the failure of the leaders to agree left them in desperate straits. There was some consolation in the extension of time for delivery, but that, after all, was merely deferring the reckoning. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. yesterday morning renewed their offer to loan the stock they hold, but it was stated that the Morgans for some reason did not care to enter the compact. The reckoning is to come today.

There have been wild times before this in Wall street, but none where the excitement was so intense and men so paralyzed. Brokers' offices were crowded with customers who, asked for additional margins, could not furnish them and waited dumbly, watching the broker trying to decide what to do. Out in the streets people from up town came riding and running toward the exchange, and a great many incidents, amusing or touching, were noticed by those whose business it was to be there. Just before noon a hansom cab rushed up to the entrance of the exchange, and an elderly woman alighted. Her face was pale, and she leaned on the arm of a colored attendant. Entering the building, she inquired for a certain broker and was told that he was not on the floor.

"How is steel preferred?" she asked of a doorkeeper.

"Eighty-three," was the indifferent response.

"God help me, I'm ruined!" sobbed the woman, burying her face in her handkerchief and blindly staggering back to her carriage.

Some men who were in hard luck themselves were telling of others who were worse off. Said one man:

"I was dining last night with a friend of mine and his wife. I knew that he had gone heavily short on Northern Pacific. The dinner proceeded gayly. Finally his wife said, 'Did you make any money today, John?'

"'No,' he said, laughing.

"'Did you lose any?'

"'No,' he said, laughing again. And the dinner proceeded gayly.

"As a matter of fact, everything he had had been wiped out."

One of the big private banking houses which was reported to have lost heavily was a scene of tears. The principals wept, and so did two old clerks. The "star customer," however, who had lost $700,000, received a reporter with this outburst:

"Say, look here, will you? The nerve! Here's a man up in Maine has sent me a circular, 'Where to spend your summer!' Think of that."

He held out the circular thoughtfully. Then he added:

"I'll spend my vacation up in the park, Central park, on a bench."

Wall street was crowded with the army of men and women who for the last few weeks have been putting all their savings into Wall street. Selling orders were given by the wholesale. The public was in a panic.

One man rushed into Theodore W. Meyer's office and cried:

"Sell my 500 Northern Pacific. Let it go at 300!"

Before the order could be transmitted to the floor of the Stock Exchange Northern Pacific had gone up to over twice that figure. When it was offered on the floor of the exchange, it was gobbled up instantly at 700. Mr. Meyer's customer was $200,000 richer than he would have been if the sale had been made at the figure he had authorized. He bought the stock a few days ago below 150.

Charlie Missing made one of the most sensational trades of the day. Before the opening he was given an order by a customer to buy 5,000 shares of Atchison at 72. The panic hit the stock hard, and by the time Missing got inside the Atchison crowd it was dropping at a terrific clip. He executed the order at from 43 to 50. Within three hours the stock was selling about 70, showing a profit to the lucky investor of nearly $150,000.

Losses Light In Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—The local stock market felt the effect of the panicky condition of the New York maryet yesterday to a more or less extent. Everything suffered in the excitement, and local issues had to be sacrificed to protect margins on the New York holdings, but the net losses were not large, and outside of United Gas Improvement, which broke five points, the market at the end of the day was back within a point or two of Wednesday night's level. One small firm got into difficulties and had to suspend business. There were numerous stories afloat of small fortunes being made in a short time, but few of them could be confirmed. A young man walked into the brokerage office of Norman MacLeod & Co. and offered to sell 100 shares of Northern Pacific which he had purchased some time ago at $25 a share. The offer was instantly accepted, and the seller, whose name is withheld by the firm, received $400 for each share, a net profit of $37,500.

A Panic Abroad.

LONDON, May 10.—Upon receipt of the Wall street quotations a panic seized the Glasgow Stock Exchange, and a wild scene was witnessed, the brokers scrambling to rid themselves of their holdings of stock. In the street Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, which had closed officially at 165, dropped to 145, but afterward rallied. Union Pacific, which opened at 118, declined to 98. There were other falls of less magnitude, and great apprehensions exist as to the outcome of the settlement which commences next Friday.

Jacksonville Picking Up.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 10.—The main streets of Jacksonville are being rapidly cleared of debris. Street cars will be operated by mules until the trolley system can be restored. Plans are being drawn for a large number of business structures. The river probably will be bulkheaded. Temporary structures are going up on all sides, the city requiring their demolition by Dec. 1. Thousands are being fed by the relief committee. No more dead bodies have been found. A large amount of insurance has been paid.

Roosevelt's Engagements.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The cornerstone of the new Methodist Episcopal church at East Norwich, on Long Island, will be laid by Vice President Roosevelt, he having just consented to act. The date is not yet announced. The vice president and Mrs. Roosevelt will be at the Pan-American exposition on May 20. On June 11 the vice president will deliver an address before the Long Island Bible society, which will meet in the Presbyterian church at Oyster Bay.

Brewer's Terrible Death.

TROY, N. Y., May 10.—Samuel Bolton, Jr., a widely known brewer of this city, met a tragic death. He was examining a huge kettle which contained boiling beer, when he fell into the fluid. Life was extinct when he was rescued. The coroner was notified, but deemed an inquest unnecessary. It is believed he was attacked with heart failure.

Cardinal Gibbons Off to Europe.

BALTIMORE, May 10.—Cardinal Gibbons left Baltimore for New York, whence he will sail for Europe tomorrow afternoon on the steamship Trave. The cardinal will spend three months in Europe. He will visit the pope, remaining at Rome for some time. Later he will be the guest of Cardinal Vaughan of London.

Russian Demonstration Suppressed.

LONDON, May 10.—A Reuter dispatch from St. Petersburg says that Russian troops suppressed a demonstration of workmen at Tiflis May 5 and that several persons were wounded on both sides by revolvers and knives. The dispatch asserts also that 41 arrests were made, including several students.

Great Northern's Stock Increased.

ST. PAUL, May 10.—The Great Northern railroad has filed the certificate of the increase of $25,000,000 in its capital stock with the secretary of state. The fee paid to the state was $12,500. The same certificate was filed with the Ramsey country register of deeds.

To Celebrate Seward's Birthday.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., May 10.—Arrangements have been perfected to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of William H. Seward at his birthplace, Florida, Orange county, on May 16.

Cuba Taking Time, but Will Accept the Amendment.

HAVANA, May 10.—There now seems to be no doubt that the Cuban constitutional convention will accept the Platt amendment, but it is expected that there will be some delay before a final vote is reached. Senor Juan Gualberto Gomez is advocating public sessions. It is said that the colored orator wishes to make some interesting statements to the public before the convention dissolves.

It was in the plans to hold a meeting yesterday, but owing to delay in printing the report of the special commission which went to Washington the session was postponed until today.

General Rivera, who is in Honduras on leave of absence, has written to the convention advising the acceptance of the Platt amendment.

CONDENSED DISPATCHES.

Minister Conger arrived in Washington.

First edition of "Pilgrim's Progress" brought 1,475 guineas in London.

More riots occurred in Barcelona. Several people were killed and wounded.

A recount showed decrease in Maryland's population of 2,006 from original figures.

A locomotive trust, capital $50,000,000, will be organized to control two-thirds of the country's capacity.

Collapse of a Dock.

NEW YORK, May 10.—While a large steamer was unloading at the American cotton docks at Tompkinsville lest evening a section 50 feet in length fell out of pier No. 4, and the bags of raw sugar, bales of hemp and cotton stored on the pier went into the water. The crash was anticipated by a number of stevedores, who all got out of the way with the exception of one, an Italian, who was seriously hurt. The damage cannot be estimated, as the dock officials refuse all information. It is believed the accident was occasioned by the work of a dredge which had been operated near by.

Mark Twain at Princeton.

PRINCETON, May 10.—Samuel J. Clemens gave an interesting address before the students and friends of Lawrence Hutton, the author, in Alexander hall last night. Mr. Clemens came to Princeton as the guest of Mr. Hutton. Immediately upon his appearance on the platform the undergraduates greeted him with a long, loud locomotive cheer. The speaker then told a number of witty stories about his early life in the west, a war story and concluded with reading from one of his works on the "German Language."

Holland's Queen In Germany.

BERLIN, May 10.—Queen Wilhelmina and the prince of the Netherlands arrived yesterday at Schwerin, where they were enthusiastically greeted by the populace. The flag of the Netherlands was profusely displayed. Members of the grand ducal family met the royal visitors at the railway station, and all then went in procession through the gayly decorated streets to the town hall, where the burgomaster delivered an address of welcome, to which Prince Henry made a brief response.

The Watch Trust Fails.

BOSTON, May 10.—A director of the American Waltham Watch company says: "The officers of the American Waltham company have informed the promoters of the proposed watch trust that that company will not become a party to any consolidation of watch companies. Other companies have declined to go into any trust movement, so the $75,000,000 combination has been abandoned."

Methodist Church Burned.

ALBANY, May 10.—The Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, one of the largest Methodist churches in his city, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The building ignited from a defective gas jet and was burned to the ground. The loss will be about $75,000. Three firemen were injured, and it is believed that one will die. They were caught beneath a falling ceiling in the Sunday school room.

Population of England and Wales.

LONDON, May 10.—According to the returns of this year's census, the total population of England and Wales is 32,525,716. This is an increase over the population of 1891 of 3,523,191, or, in other words, an increase of 12.15 per cent in the last ten years. The increase for the decade between 1881 and 1891 was 11.65 per cent.

Two Stores Looted.

UTICA, N. Y., May 10.—Burglars on Wednesday night looted two stores in the Sauquoit valley. H. A. Hull's store was entered through a window, and several hundred dollars' worth of goods were removed. In Chadwicks, four miles distant, they forced a door on the store of A. M. Jones and took away another load of goods.

Hanged Himself.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The body of William Outhouse, Jr., was found hanging to a rafter in a barn near Ossining. On Tuesday his wife had a warrant issued for his arrest on the charge of assaulting her. Outhouse disappeared before the warrant could be served.

Marquis Ito Ill.

LONDON, May 10.—Marquis Ito, according to a dispatch to The Daily Mail from Yokohama, is suffering from brain trouble and is not likely to resume office. The correspondent says the ministerial deadlock continues.

A DAY IN LOS ANGELES

The Floral Parade Reviewed by the President.

AMID SHOWERS OF ROSE LEAVES.

Immense Throngs Greet the Visitors—A Visit Paid to the National Soldiers' Home.

LOS ANGELES, May 10.—From a broad blue canopied pavilion, surrounded by the members of his cabinet, the governor of Ohio and notables from many states, President McKinley yesterday reviewed the floral parade of the Los Angeles carnival. The city was packed. The population of Los Angeles, according to the census, is more than 100,000, but the streets must have held almost twice that number. Pasadena, Santa Monica and other neighboring towns in southern California were literally depopulated.

The scene on Broadway, where the reviewing stand was located, resembled Pennsylvania avenue in Washington on the day of an inauguration parade—every facade flamed with bunting, flags and pampas grass plumes, red, green and orange, the colors of the fiesta, prevailing; terraced stands of people, the windows walled in with them, the sidewalks to the roped street packed with them like sardines in a box.

Mrs. McKinley did not witness the show, but she drove along Broadway and received the plaudits of the multitude just before the procession appeared. The president rode at the head of the parade in an open carriage drawn by six spirited white horses, with yellow satin harness. At the head of each horse walked a Spanish caballero in green velvet and much gold braid. The carriage was a mass of white carnations and yellow coreopsis blossoms. A troop of cavalry with yellow horsehair plumes waving above their helmets and wreaths of flowers across their shoulders and blanket rolls of red carnations behind their saddles, headed by a band playing the "Star Spangled Banner," preceded the carriage of the chief magistrate to the reviewing stand.

As each carriage reached the reviewing stand the ladies in it arose and smilingly saluted the president with deep courtesies. The president was kept on his feet most of the time returning these greetings. He apparently enjoyed the experience hugely. Each lady carried a bag of rose leaves for use as confetti, and after saluting the president she threw a handful of the soft petals into his box. Before the parade was over he was ankle deep in rose leaves.

In the morning, previous to the floral parade, the president and his party were driven through the resident section of Los Angeles.

In the afternoon the ladies of the president's party went to Pasadena and took a drive there, while the president made a trip to the National Soldiers' home near Santa Monica. It is 18 miles distant, and he made the journey in electric cars. Three thousand of the president's old comrades of the civil war greeted him there. The old soldiers gave the president a remarkable demonstration. He was introduced by the governor at the home and spoke briefly.

Considerable excitement was caused by the discovery after the speaking that a pickpocket who had been at work in the crowd had relieved Secretary Wilson and Colonel Charles A. Moore of their pocketbooks. Later the thief was arrested. Several pocketbooks were found on his person, a gold nugget that Mr. Moore's son had obtained at the Congress mine in Arizona and Secretary Wilson's pocketbook, which contained $175. The thief proved to be a pickpocket well known to the police.

Upon his return to Los Angeles late in the afternoon the president received Governor Nash and the Ohio congressional delegation at the hotel. There was no public function in the evening. The president and Mrs. McKinley dined at the residence of Homer Laughlin. The president and members of his party returned to their train and left at 5 o'clock this morning for Del Monte, where they will spend Sunday. Stops will be made on the way at Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo.

President Carter Resigns.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., May 10.—At the meeting of the trustees of Williams college held here President Franklin Carter tendered his resignation to take effect Sept. 1. Although President Carter has been in poor health for some time and there have been rumors that his resignation would be tendered, the resignation came as a surprise to the board. A committee was appointed to report to the trustees at commencement on a successor.

New London Line Inaugurated.

BOSTON, May 10.—The new London service of the Leyland line was inaugurated yesterday with the sailing from East Boston of the steamship Iberian. She carried away 100,000 bushels of oats, 79,775 bushels of wheat, about 200 tons of flour, 150 tons of provisions and merchandise of a general nature and 500 head of cattle.

Episcopalians In Session.

BOSTON, May 10.—The annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal church of Massachusetts decided after a prolonged debate to divide the diocese and then intrusted the details of division to a committee which will report to a special meeting of the convention in the month of June.

A Deficit For Germany.

BERLIN, May 10.—Baron von Thielmann, imperial secretary of the treasury, admitted to the budget committee of the reichstag that there would be a deficit for the next fiscal year of an amount between 70,000,000 and 80,000,000 marks.

Job Printers Win.

UTICA, N. Y., May 10.—The job printing compositors who have been on a strike in this city since Monday for a raise from $13.50 to $14 per week have been successful. The men have returned to work.

Lightning Strikes a Schoolhouse.

STANSTEAD JUNCTION, Que., May 10.—Lightning struck the Bullock schoolhouse. About a dozen pupils were more or less injured, two, Miss Mary Reynolds and Miss Simmons, probably fatally.

Weather Probabilities.

Partly cloudy; probably showers; fresh east to northeast winds.

ing assortment of more staid and inexperienced speculators, men and women who have brought long standing hordes from secret places and from savings bank deposits with the determination to make one successful stroke and then retire with the proceeds. The demonstrations from this class, which includes many women speculators, furnished the hysterical scenes and sensations of the day.

There was a strong feeling in the morning before proceedings had commenced on the Stock Exchange that a panic could be averted only by the strongest measures and with the greatest difficulties. The fact was apparent that the corner in Northern Pacific was still unbroken. The excited bidding Wednesday night to secure the stock for delivery yesterday made that very apparent. The first efforts to avert the panic were devoted to circulating reports that the conferences between the contending interests in Northern Pacific, which continued in one form or another throughout the night, had resulted in a compromise which would free the shorts in the stock from their compromised position.

These efforts proved utterly ineffective in face of the first quotations for Northern Pacific on the tape. The price paid for the stock ran up quickly to $200 per share, and then to $300, to $500 and even to $700 per share on regular transactions and $1,000 per share for cash. The cash price paid meant that unfortunate shorts who were unable to borrow the stock for delivery had to pay whatever cash price the engineers of the corner chose to ask for it. The figures indicated in these opening transactions meant ruin for a very large outstanding short interest in the stock. The perception of this fact was the principal impelling cause in producing the demoralization in the stock market.

It was a very notable fact that throughout the most acute period of the disturbance there was nothing heard to indicate doubt of the sound and prosperous conditions of industry and business at large in the country. The stock market collapse was attributed exclusively to overspeculation and an overextension of credits used in holding stocks which it was not designed to keep, but to sell at a higher price.

The struggle of financial giants which broke the most remarkable movement that American stocks has ever had dates back but a fortnight. E. H. Harriman and his associates, so they relate the story in the street, discovered that brokers representing J. P. Morgan & Co. were buying Union Pacific. Harriman at once began increasing his own holdings, buying on a market that rapidly advanced, and when sure of control submitted a proposition for some basis of agreement as to the control of Burlington, just acquired by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific. That offer was rejected.

On Monday last there began a sensational movement in Northern Pacific, and the public got the first intimation of the battle for supremacy. Street & Norton took all of the stock they could get, seemingly without regard to price. Much of the stock sold to them was for short account and could not be delivered. It developed finally that there were three large interests in the property, two seeking its management and the third a speculative profit. Both the Harriman syndicate and the Morgan-Hill interests claimed control, and the predicament of the shorts was made worse by the fear of both the Harriman and Morgan syndicates to lend the stock to the shorts. It was this fear that led Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of the Harriman interests to seek an understanding with Morgan & Co. as to the lending of stock to shorts. To have loaned without an understanding was to court the danger of losing the stock and possibly the dearly purchased opportunity to control.

The shorts learned Wednesday that they were severely cornered and made frantic efforts to secure stock. The movement for their relief began that night, but the failure of the leaders to agree left them in desperate straits. There was some consolation in the extension of time for delivery, but that, after all, was merely deferring the reckoning. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. yesterday morning renewed their offer to loan the stock they hold, but it was stated that the Morgans for some reason did not care to enter the compact. The reckoning is to come today.

There have been wild times before this in Wall street, but none where the excitement was so intense and men so paralyzed. Brokers' offices were crowded with customers who, asked for additional margins, could not furnish them and waited dumbly, watching the broker trying to decide what to do. Out in the streets people from up town came riding and running toward the exchange, and a great many incidents, amusing or touching, were noticed by those whose business it was to be there. Just before noon a hansom cab rushed up to the entrance of the exchange, and an elderly woman alighted. Her face was pale, and she leaned on the arm of a colored attendant. Entering the building, she inquired for a certain broker and was told that he was not on the floor.

"How is steel preferred?" she asked of a doorkeeper.

"Eighty-three," was the indifferent response.

"God help me, I'm ruined!" sobbed the woman, burying her face in her handkerchief and blindly staggering back to her carriage.

Some men who were in hard luck themselves were telling of others who were worse off. Said one man:

"I was dining last night with a friend of mine and his wife. I knew that he had gone heavily short on Northern Pacific. The dinner proceeded gayly. Finally his wife said, 'Did you make any money today, John?'

"'No,' he said, laughing.

"'Did you lose any?'

"'No,' he said, laughing again. And the dinner proceeded gayly.

"As a matter of fact, everything he had had been wiped out."

One of the big private banking houses which was reported to have lost heavily was a scene of tears. The principals wept, and so did two old clerks. The "star customer," however, who had lost $700,000, received a reporter with this outburst:

"Say, look here, will you? The nerve! Here's a man up in Maine has sent me a circular, 'Where to spend your summer!' Think of that."

He held out the circular thoughtfully. Then he added:

"I'll spend my vacation up in the park, Central park, on a bench."

Wall street was crowded with the army of men and women who for the last few weeks have been putting all their savings into Wall street. Selling orders were given by the wholesale. The public was in a panic.

One man rushed into Theodore W. Meyer's office and cried:

"Sell my 500 Northern Pacific. Let it go at 300!"

Before the order could be transmitted to the floor of the Stock Exchange Northern Pacific had gone up to over twice that figure. When it was offered on the floor of the exchange, it was gobbled up instantly at 700. Mr. Meyer's customer was $200,000 richer than he would have been if the sale had been made at the figure he had authorized. He bought the stock a few days ago below 150.

Charlie Missing made one of the most sensational trades of the day. Before the opening he was given an order by a customer to buy 5,000 shares of Atchison at 72. The panic hit the stock hard, and by the time Missing got inside the Atchison crowd it was dropping at a terrific clip. He executed the order at from 43 to 50. Within three hours the stock was selling about 70, showing a profit to the lucky investor of nearly $150,000.

JOHN W. GATES.

Losses Light In Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.—The local stock market felt the effect of the panicky condition of the New York maryet yesterday to a more or less extent. Everything suffered in the excitement, and local issues had to be sacrificed to protect margins on the New York holdings, but the net losses were not large, and outside of United Gas Improvement, which broke five points, the market at the end of the day was back within a point or two of Wednesday night's level. One small firm got into difficulties and had to suspend business. There were numerous stories afloat of small fortunes being made in a short time, but few of them could be confirmed. A young man walked into the brokerage office of Norman MacLeod & Co. and offered to sell 100 shares of Northern Pacific which he had purchased some time ago at $25 a share. The offer was instantly accepted, and the seller, whose name is withheld by the firm, received $400 for each share, a net profit of $37,500.

A Panic Abroad.

LONDON, May 10.—Upon receipt of the Wall street quotations a panic seized the Glasgow Stock Exchange, and a wild scene was witnessed; the brokers scrambling to rid themselves of their holdings of stock. In the street Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, which had closed officially at 165, dropped to 145, but afterward rallied. Union Pacific, which opened at 118, declined to 98. There were other falls of less magnitude, and great apprehensions exist as to the outcome of the settlement which commences next Friday.

Jacksonville Picking Up.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 10.—The main streets of Jacksonville are being rapidly cleared of debris. Street cars will be operated by mules until the trolley system can be restored. Plans are being drawn for a large number of business structures. The river probably will be bulkheaded. Temporary structures are going up on all sides, the city requiring their demolition by Dec. 1. Thousands are being fed by the relief committee. No more dead bodies have been found. A large amount of insurance has been paid.

Roosevelt's Engagements.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The cornerstone of the new Methodist Episcopal church at East Norwich, on Long Island, will be laid by Vice President Roosevelt, he having just consented to act. The date is not yet announced. The vice president and Mrs. Roosevelt will be at the Pan-American exposition on May 20. On June 11 the vice president will deliver an address before the Long Island Bible society, which will meet in the Presbyterian church at Oyster Bay.

Brewer's Terrible Death.

TROY, N. Y., May 10.—Samuel Bolton, Jr., a widely known brewer of this city, met a tragic death. He was examining a huge kettle which contained boiling beer, when he fell into the fluid. Life was extinct when he was rescued. The coroner was notified, but deemed an inquest unnecessary. It is believed he was attacked with heart failure.

Cardinal Gibbons Off to Europe.

BALTIMORE, May 10.—Cardinal Gibbons left Baltimore for New York, whence he will sail for Europe tomorrow afternoon on the steamship Trave. The cardinal will spend three months in Europe. He will visit the pope, remaining at Rome for some time. Later he will be the guest of Cardinal Vaughan of London.

Russian Demonstration Suppressed.

LONDON, May 10.—A Reuter dispatch from St. Petersburg says that Russian troops suppressed a demonstration of workmen at Tiflis May 5 and that several persons were wounded on both sides by revolvers and knives. The dispatch asserts also that 41 arrests were made, including several students.

Great Northern's Stock Increased.

ST. PAUL, May 10.—The Great Northern railroad has filed the certificate of the increase of $25,000,000 in its capital stock with the secretary of state. The fee paid to the state was $12,500. The same certificate was filed with the Ramsey country register of deeds.

To Celebrate Seward's Birthday.

Cuba Taking Time, but Will Accept the Amendment.

HAVANA, May 10.—There now seems to be no doubt that the Cuban constitutional convention will accept the Platt amendment, but it is expected that there will be some delay before a final vote is reached. Senor Juan Gualberto Gomez is advocating public sessions. It is said that the colored orator wishes to make some interesting statements to the public before the convention dissolves.

It was in the plans to hold a meeting yesterday, but owing to delay in printing the report of the special commission which went to Washington the session was postponed until today.

General Rivera, who is in Honduras on leave of absence, has written to the convention advising the acceptance of the Platt amendment.

CONDENSED DISPATCHES.

Minister Conger arrived in Washington.

First edition of "Pilgrim's Progress" brought 1,475 guineas in London.

More riots occurred in Barcelona. Several people were killed and wounded.

A recount showed decrease in Maryland's population of 2,006 from original figures.

A locomotive trust, capital $50,000,000, will be organized to control two-thirds of the country's capacity.

Collapse of a Dock.

NEW YORK, May 10.—While a large steamer was unloading at the American cotton docks at Tompkinsville lest evening a section 50 feet in length fell out of pier No. 4, and the bags of raw sugar, bales of hemp and cotton stored on the pier went into the water. The crash was anticipated by a number of stevedores, who all got out of the way with the exception of one, an Italian, who was seriously hurt. The damage cannot be estimated, as the dock officials refuse all information. It is believed the accident was occasioned by the work of a dredge which had been operated near by.

Mark Twain at Princeton.

PRINCETON, May 10.—Samuel J. Clemens gave an interesting address before the students and friends of Lawrence Hutton, the author, in Alexander hall last night. Mr. Clemens came to Princeton as the guest of Mr. Hutton. Immediately upon his appearance on the platform the undergraduates greeted him with a long, loud locomotive cheer. The speaker then told a number of witty stories about his early life in the west, a war story and concluded with reading from one of his works on the "German Language."

Holland's Queen In Germany.

BERLIN, May 10.—Queen Wilhelmina and the prince of the Netherlands arrived yesterday at Schwerin, where they were enthusiastically greeted by the populace. The flag of the Netherlands was profusely displayed. Members of the grand ducal family met the royal visitors at the railway station, and all then went in procession through the gayly decorated streets to the town hall, where the burgomaster delivered an address of welcome, to which Prince Henry made a brief response.

The Watch Trust Fails.

BOSTON, May 10.—A director of the American Waltham Watch company says: "The officers of the American Waltham company have informed the promoters of the proposed watch trust that that company will not become a party to any consolidation of watch companies. Other companies have declined to go into any trust movement, so the $75,000,000 combination has been abandoned."

Methodist Church Burned.

ALBANY, May 10.—The Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, one of the largest Methodist churches in his city, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The building ignited from a defective gas jet and was burned to the ground. The loss will be about $75,000. Three firemen were injured, and it is believed that one will die. They were caught beneath a falling ceiling in the Sunday school room.

Population of England and Wales.

LONDON, May 10.—According to the returns of this year's census, the total population of England and Wales is 32,525,716. This is an increase over the population of 1891 of 3,523,191, or, in other words, an increase of 12.15 per cent in the last ten years. The increase for the decade between 1881 and 1891 was 11.65 per cent.

Two Stores Looted.

UTICA, N. Y., May 10.—Burglars on Wednesday night looted two stores in the Sauquoit valley. H. A. Hull's store was entered through a window, and several hundred dollars' worth of goods were removed. In Chadwicks, four miles distant, they forced a door on the store of A. M. Jones and took away another load of goods.

Hanged Himself.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The body of William Outhouse, Jr., was found hanging to a rafter in a barn near Ossining. On Tuesday his wife had a warrant issued for his arrest on the charge of assaulting her. Outhouse disappeared before the warrant could be served.

Marquis Ito Ill.

LONDON, May 10.—Marquis Ito, according to a dispatch to The Daily Mail from Yokohama, is suffering from brain trouble and is not likely to resume office. The correspondent says the ministerial deadlock continues.

A DAY IN LOS ANGELES

The Floral Parade Reviewed by the President.

AMID SHOWERS OF ROSE LEAVES.

Immense Throngs Greet the Visitors—A Visit Paid to the National Soldiers' Home.

LOS ANGELES, May 10.—From a broad blue canopied pavilion, surrounded by the members of his cabinet, the governor of Ohio and notables from many states, President McKinley yesterday reviewed the floral parade of the Los Angeles carnival. The city was packed. The population of Los Angeles, according to the census, is more than 100,000, but the streets must have held almost twice that number. Pasadena, Santa Monica and other neighboring towns in southern California were literally depopulated.

The scene on Broadway, where the reviewing stand was located, resembled Pennsylvania avenue in Washington on the day of an inauguration parade—every facade flamed with bunting, flags and pampas grass plumes, red, green and orange, the colors of the fiesta, prevailing; terraced stands of people, the windows walled in with them, the sidewalks to the roped street packed with them like sardines in a box.

Mrs. McKinley did not witness the show, but she drove along Broadway and received the plaudits of the multitude just before the procession appeared. The president rode at the head of the parade in an open carriage drawn by six spirited white horses, with yellow satin harness. At the head of each horse walked a Spanish caballero in green velvet and much gold braid. The carriage was a mass of white carnations and yellow coreopsis blossoms. A troop of cavalry with yellow horsehair plumes waving above their helmets and wreaths of flowers across their shoulders and blanket rolls of red carnations behind their saddles, headed by a band playing the "Star Spangled Banner," preceded the carriage of the chief magistrate to the reviewing stand.

As each carriage reached the reviewing stand the ladies in it arose and smilingly saluted the president with deep courtesies. The president was kept on his feet most of the time returning these greetings. He apparently enjoyed the experience hugely. Each lady carried a bag of rose leaves for use as confetti, and after saluting the president she threw a handful of the soft petals into his box. Before the parade was over he was ankle deep in rose leaves.

In the morning, previous to the floral parade, the president and his party were driven through the resident section of Los Angeles.

In the afternoon the ladies of the president's party went to Pasadena and took a drive there, while the president made a trip to the National Soldiers' home near Santa Monica. It is 18 miles distant, and he made the journey in electric cars. Three thousand of the president's old comrades of the civil war greeted him there. The old soldiers gave the president a remarkable demonstration. He was introduced by the governor at the home and spoke briefly.

Considerable excitement was caused by the discovery after the speaking that a pickpocket who had been at work in the crowd had relieved Secretary Wilson and Colonel Charles A. Moore of their pocketbooks. Later the thief was arrested. Several pocketbooks were found on his person, a gold nugget that Mr. Moore's son had obtained at the Congress mine in Arizona and Secretary Wilson's pocketbook, which contained $175. The thief proved to be a pickpocket well known to the police.

Upon his return to Los Angeles late in the afternoon the president received Governor Nash and the Ohio congressional delegation at the hotel. There was no public function in the evening. The president and Mrs. McKinley dined at the residence of Homer Laughlin. The president and members of his party returned to their train and left at 5 o'clock this morning for Del Monte, where they will spend Sunday. Stops will be made on the way at Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo.

President Carter Resigns.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., May 10.—At the meeting of the trustees of Williams college held here President Franklin Carter tendered his resignation to take effect Sept. 1. Although President Carter has been in poor health for some time and there have been rumors that his resignation would be tendered, the resignation came as a surprise to the board. A committee was appointed to report to the trustees at commencement on a successor.

Our Birthday.

January 2, 1868, The Constitutionalist was first published by W. L. and A. L. Force. As the city grew in size and importance, the need of a daily newspaper was felt by the publishers of The Constitutionalist, and so The Daily Press was started. The initial number of The Daily Press appeared just fourteen years ago today. It was then a six column, four page paper, containing eight columns of advertisements and six columns of local reading matter.

From that time its growth has been a healthy one, and each succeeding anniversary of its birth has found it with improved service and increased patronage. As Plainfield grew, The Daily Press kept pace, until now this city stands as one of the leading suburban cities in the neighborhood of New York, while The Daily Press holds an important position among the journals of the State.

The increased demand for advertising space and the betterment of the local news service soon make it necessary to increase the size of the paper. First to seven columns, then to eight, and finally the old blanket sheet was discarded and The Daily Press appeared October 24, 1894, as a six column, eight page paper. Three years ago, a new fast press, built by Walter Scott & Company, was installed in The Press office, which permitted the change of the eight pages from a six to seven columns. It also made provision for the rapidly increasing circulation.

We do not indulge in self glorification of our deeds in the past or wild boastings as to what will come in the future. We are here with the intention of doing our best. The Daily Press is the people's paper. It aims to give the news fully and truthfully. It will urge only such measurers as we believe are for the best interests of the people of Plainfield. We have no political affiliations but will treat all parties fairly and impartially.

With its advertisers, The Daily Press has but one list of rates. They apply to all. But the advertisers realize that The Daily Press is the best advertising medium in the city. It carries from six to eight columns more of local ads than any other newspaper. It has a greater circulation than any other newspaper in this city as well as reaching out to Somerville, Bound Brook, Westfield and the more immediate neighbors of Plainfield.

The Daily Press aims to be a live and independent newspaper, truthful and impartial. That has been its aim in former years and will continue to be its aim in the years to come.

The roster of officers for the local militia company has finally been completed. Dr. William Kempton Browning has been chosen to command the local soldier boys, having been advanced from the office of first lieutenant. Dr. Browning preferred to take the subordinate position and allow some man with more military experience to take the position of commanding officer. The place was left open for some time while an attempt was made to find the proper man. After the members of Company K had thought the subject over carefully they decided that Dr. Browning was the proper man and so he was elected to the office of captain by a unanimous vote.

Yesterday's issue of The Daily Press was read with unusual interest by residents of the city and borough on account of the publication of the full text of Frank Bergen's letter to Chairman R. I. Tolles, of the Councilmanic street committee. As the letter was the formal statement of the president of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, it was the first regular argument advanced against the project of municipal ownership of the water works by Plainfield. It showed just exactly what ground the company took.

For the fourteenth time, J. Frank Hubbard, of this city, has been raised to the position of director of the Union County Board of Freeholders. Mr. Hubbard has been a faithful servant to the county and has done his duties on that board with credit to the county and himself. The renewal of the honor at the hands of the board shows that his services have been appreciated by those who have worked with him.

The project of a county boulevard from Elizabeth to Plainfield is progressing slowly. It is still doubtful whether the boulevard will ever be extended to this city, but its reality between Elizabeth and the Cranford township line is now assured. The contract for the widening of the county road to the proposed boulevard ideas has been awarded by the County Coard of Freeholders.

Had the political complexion of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders been different, the honor of director would have been very likely to have come to North Plainfield. The Republican members of the board would have liked to confer the honor on Freeholder Andrew Lutkins, who represents the borough in the county legislative body.

The militiamen of Somerville are going to have a sham battle there on the afternoon of Memorial Day and have invited the Plainfield company to participate in the mock engagement. It will be the first experience of the Plainfielders under fire.

The Daily Press has been selected as one of the papers to publish the official reports of the Union County Board of Freeholders.

These are the days when the wise advertiser is telling the public of his many spring attractions.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence.)

Dunellen, May 10.—Although the weather last evening was not of the best, it did not deter a large audience from assembling in the Presbyterian church where the returned spinsters from Oklahoma again related their amusing experiences. Those who heard them last week enjoyed them as thoroughly as the new comers. The music by the Ladies' Orchestra was excellent. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, Miss Kate Dunham and Mrs. T. C. Bodine.

In attempting to turn about after leaving the scales at W. Cole's yesterday afternoon, two tons of hay on a wagon, belonging to W. H. Smalley, were overturned. Mr. Smalley, who was on top of the load, was warned just in time and escaped being buried. The hay, in falling, just cleared the trolley tracks and there was no blockade. Bystanders lent their assistance and the load was soon replaced.

The members of the boy's class and a scrub team will cross bats on the Lincoln avenue grounds tomorrow afternoon. The former team will be captained by Will Dealaman, while Walter Craig will look after the scrub forces.

Christian Schepflin has announced that he will open the bowling green Saturday, May 18. The members of the Middlesex Bowling Club will be present and engage in several games.

Alex. Trust, of San Francisco, is spending a few weeks with Paul Reusch and other relatives in this vicinity.

Mrs. A. A. Lake has gone to Blythbourn, L. I., for a few days on account of the illness of a relative.

Mrs. W. Elias and daughter, May, of Lenox, Mass., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Law.

Charles Tharp, the butcher, has purchased a new horse for use in his delivery service.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence.)

New Market, May 10—While Weston, Percy Vail's coachman, was driving across the Jersey Central Railroad's tracks at Dunellen yesterday, the horse stumbled and fell. As soon as the horse was unloosened from the shafts it was up and off before any one could stop it. The horse ran directly to the barn in New Market. Nobody was hurt.

A. G. Nelson's horse, which had its hoof partly pulled off on the railroad crossing a few months ago, was sold by Mr. Downy to a New York party a few days ago.

William Winges has some mason work to do in Metuchen. He expects to begin today.

REPUTATION SAVED HIM.

In Consideration of Wm. Calloway's Previous Good Conduct Sentence Was Suspended.

William Calloway, of Westervelt avenue, was given a hearing by Borough Recorder Doud last evening on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Calloway is a pensioner and it is said that occasionally after receiving the pension he indulges a little freely in strong drink. The Recorder, in consideration of the generally good reputation of Calloway, suspended sentence.

WORKMEN MET.

Enjoyed Ice Cream And Cigars After Transacting Business

Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., met last evening. Three members were elected and one was initiated. Arthur Osborn resigned as guide, on account of his removal from this city to Boston.

In the good of the order Deputy Grand Master Edward Mosher gave an interesting account of his visits. It was decided to send a delegation to Basking Ridge, Tuesday evening, May 14, to visit Bernards Lodge.

Before the meeting adjourned Receiver Randolph was sent out to purchase ice cream and cigars. He returned in a short time with some "hoky-poky" and a box of cigars. The rest of the evening was spent in a social way and interesting addresses were made by some of the members.

Granted Newcorn's Application.

Lawyer William Newcorn received word today from Advisory Master W. B. Williams, of Jersey City, that extra counsel fees have been denied Codington & Swackhamer in the case of Cory against Cory, divorce proceedings. Mr. Newcorn appeared at Jersey City last week and opposed the granting of extra fees, and Mr. Williams advises him that the application was denied on the merits of the case. Mr. Williams heard the motion in the absence of Vice-Chancellor Stevens, who is ill.

Will Preach During Dr. Schenck's Absence

Rev. R. B. McHatton, of Pittsburg, Pa., the talented young pastor of the Seventh Presbyterian church of that city, has been engaged to supply the pulpit at Trinity Reformed church for two Sundays in August, the 4th and 18th, during Dr. Schenck's vacation.

BOTH WENT TO JAIL.

Gottschalk Was Noisy and Blair Tried to Prevent His Arrest Last Night.

Henry Gottschalk, of Westfield, came to this city last evening for the ostensible purpose of attending a dance. The dance made him dry, and, after imbibing several drinks, he became noisy and refused to move on when ordered to do so by Patrolman Myers. The patrolman then placed him under arrest. William Blair, who was with him, interfered, and he was also taken into custody. In the city court this morning, Gottschalk was fined $5 and Blair $3. Both fines were paid.

Not the Right Man.

Frank Williams, a Polak, employed at Smalley's stone crusher, was arrested by Constable Gjettleson yesterday and arraigned before Justice Mosher on a serious charge preferred by a newly-arrived Polish girl. Although Williams was the man named in the warrant the girl declared he was not the party wanted. Being unable to speak English, she had been misinformed as to the right man's name. Williams was released.

Hit on Head With Bat.

During a baseball game on the Watchung avenue grounds, Wednesday afternoon, Raymond Randolph, of Central avenue, was accidentally struck on the head with a bat in the hands of Graff Simmonds, of Watchung avenue. A deep gash was inflicted which necessitated Randolph visiting Dr. Endicott's office. The latter was forced to take several stitches in the cut.

A Teacher Ill.

Miss Mertie Montague, of Central avenue, the teacher in the commercial course of the North Plainfield High School, has been unable to attend to her duties this week on account of a severe attack of tonsilitis. During her absence several graduates in the course are temporarily acting as instructors in her stead.

Successful Auction Sale.

P. H. Latourette, the auctioneer, yesterday disposed of the farming utensils and stock belonging to Robert Slorah, of McDowell street. There was a large attendance and very good prices were realized. The sale was very satisfactory to all the parties concerned.

Announcement of Engagement.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss May Brown, of Lyman place, to Charles Welch, a young business man at Pluckamin. The wedding will take place this summer.

CHAPTER XV.

Twelve days had elapsed since he received that trans-Atlantic warning, and yet nothing had occurred to suggest that Jeanne had arrived. It was on the morning of the thirteenth day. He was alone in his study when the postman left a letter for Blanche. He took it, and as he placed it on the table where it would meet her eye when she came in, he noticed that the superscription was written in a very poor hand, as if it were executed by an illiterate person. It was a small circumstance, but Goddard's mind was inflamed with morbid fears of impending evil. He sat down at the fire and took up the morning paper, but the letter on the table held his attention as if it contained a warning from the Infinite.

He heard Blanche coming, and, raising the paper, he pretended to be absorbed in reading, though he was really watching her face as she advanced to the table and took up her letter. Goddard saw a look of wonderment pass over her face as she opened the envelope. A moment later he heard her cry out softly:

"Oh!"

He rose and went to her.

"What is it, darling?" he asked, his heart sinking.

"Oh, nothing of importance!" She put the letter into its envelope and held it down by her side. "It really doesn't amount to anything."

But despite this assurance there was still a shocked expression in her face.

He was actually afraid to pursue his questions further, being sure that it was some artifice of Jeanne's. Perhaps some proposal from some confederate of hers leading to a clandestine meeting. Goddard went back to his chair at the fire. His body felt as heavy and lifeless as stone as he sat down. She put her letter in her pocket and moved towards the door.

"Will you not let me see your letter, Blanche?" he found courage to ask.

"Not now, dear," she answered, and it seemed to him that her mind was far away.

"Will you not tell me its contents?"

"I'd really rather not, dear," she said, and without another word she turned from the room.

Unable to bear the suspense longer he followed to the door. He overheard Blanche giving an order to James in a low, guarded tone and stopped at the door just out of sight and just within earshot of the two.

"I want to go to the city," she was saying. "I shall walk down and catch the trolley car for the station. If my husband asks for me say I shall not be home for luncheon."

Desperately concerned, Maj. Goddard began to walk back and forth across the room. A moment later, hearing steps in the hall, he went to a window and looked out towards the road. He saw Blanche descend the steps, cloaked and gloved for her mysterious journey. He waited till she had turned the corner below the gates and then went out of the house and followed her, taking care to keep out of her view. He saw her get on the trolley car, and seeing that he had ample time to catch the train he waited for the next car and boarded it.

When he reached the station the train was almost due. He saw nothing of Blanche and supposed she was in the ladies' waiting-room. He went into the men's waiting-room, and when the train came he stood at a window and watched her pass out and get into one of the coaches. Watching his opportunity he glided through the crowd of bystanders and took a seat in the smoking-car in the front part of the train.

He had half an hour to reflect over Blanche's unusual conduct, but he was no nearer to understanding it when his train arrived at the New York station than when he had left Lyndhurst.

From a good position, hidden by a truck loaded with luggage, he saw Blanche alight from the train and signal to a hansom. Then, while her back was turned towards him, he called another, and after he had taken his seat he pointed to Blanche's hansom which was turning into the street.

"I want to keep that lady in sight," he told the cabman; "do you understand?"

"Perfectly, sir," with a broad, pleased grin. "Detective, sir?"

"No; do as I tell you."

"All right, sir; pardon, sir."

The two cabs preserved a mean distance of half a block between each other. It was a cloudy day, as warm as spring. The asphalt pavements were wet and slick and the horses often slipped to the ground. Blanche's hansom turned into Fourth avenue and headed down town. Below Cooper Union it ran into the Bowery. And along this thoroughfare, with the double tracks of the elevated railway overhead, the two vehicles forged ahead as rapidly as the perpetual stream of cars, wagons and cabs would permit. They passed the City Hall park and then ran into Beekman street. Goddard saw Blanche's cabman scanning the doors in search of a number, and knew she was near her destination.

The major rapped on the top of the cab, and the driver looked in at him through the hole in the roof.

"Well, sir?" he said.

"If the lady should get out keep your eye on the house and put me down near there," ordered the major.

"Right you are, sir."

In the most disreputable part of the lower end of Beekman street the foremost hansom came to a halt before a red brick five-story building. the major saw the face of his ward for a single moment as she stood on the ground and held up her fare to the cabman, his own driver having reined in behind a wagon loaded with bales of hay.

Goddard felt like a spy, but he told himself he had the right to follow her, fearing that she was being led into danger.

"I shall get down here," he said, hurriedly, when Blanche had gone into the house. The cabman took his double fee reluctantly.

"Had I better wait about here, sir?" he asked, evidently the prey of curiosity.

"No, I shall not need you," and the major was off. When he reached the building Blanche had entered he saw nothing of her. The entrance was very unclean. A barrel of rags stood at the foot of the stairway and three tattered boys were tossing pennies in the doorway.

"A lady came in here just now," he said to the first smutty visage that turned towards him.

"Went upstairs," said the owner of the face.

"Do you know which floor?" asked Goddard.

The boy did not, and shook his head.

"She asked for the Simpsons'," said another urchin. "They are top floor back."

"Who are the Simpsons?" asked the major.

"I don't know, sir," said the first boy who had spoken. "You can't miss it; it's as high as you can go."

It then occurred to Goddard that he was unarmed, and as he did not doubt that Blanche had been beguiled into some sort of trap he felt his inability to defend her in an emergency, and yet he almost ran up the five flights of narrow, unswept stairs. Reaching the top, and seeing a door at the side of which stood a bedstead which had been taken apart and a mattress and ragged bed coverings, he bent his ear to listen. For a moment he heard nothing, and then suddenly from the room came the sound of weeping and the wailing of a woman's voice. This startled him, and he tried the door latch. It turned. The door opened into a cheerless room. Around the walls sat a dozen old men and women as still and silent as Quakers at a meeting. A door in this room opened into another chamber, and there he saw a throng of women and children, and thence issued the sounds of sobs and cries of grief. Bewildered, he went to the door and looked for Blanche. His eyes fell on the corpse of a woman covered to her wrinkled face with a white sheet. Looking over the heads of this group Goddard saw Blanche seated on a low couch between two sobbing young girls. She had an arm round the waist of each, and the major heard her trembling voice try to speak words of consolation.

"Oh, Mrs. Goddard," the elder girl said, "I cannot bear it—I simply cannot give her up. She was all we had—all—all!"

So much was Blanche concerned in the duty before her that she did not look up. A light broke upon the major, but he did not have the presence of mind to retreat unnoticed, as he might easily have done. His relief at finding his fears ungrounded was so great that he felt weak all over. Suddenly the younger of the two girls with Blanche looked up. She pointed at him, and touched her sister across Blanche's lap.

"It must be the new doctor," she said.

Blanche stared at him in bewilderment for an instant. A slight flush mantled her brow.

"No, it is my husband," she said; "excuse me a moment."

She came to him at once.

"Why did you come?" she asked, a look of embarrassment on her face.

"I—i am so surprised. I really do not understand how—"

He drew her to the side of the room away from several persons who were listening curiously.

"I have no excuse for spying on you," he said, lamely; "none, except that I was afraid you were in danger, and I came to—to protect you."

"I don't understand," she said. "I really do not."

For a moment he was reduced to saying:

"Pardon my foolishness, dear; do pardon me!"

"Oh, don't think I am finding fault," she said, quickly. "I am glad you are here now, but—"

"I may as well tell you that I have enemies, darling little girl, enemies who would entrap you—take your life, anything to take revenge on me. When first I saw that letter I did not like its appearance, and when you would not tell me about it my fears got the best of me."

"It was from Mary, there—the older of the two girls," replied Blanche. "I knew her and her mother when—" Blanche flushed a little—"when I used to visit this quarter when I was in school. Ever since then she and I have been friends, and I have tried to help her family. They are so poor. I ought to have told you that I was engaged in this sort of work, at least after we were married; but, knowing that your other wife was opposed to such things, I thought you might think I was parading my deeds, so I could not tell you about it."

"Oh, darling, you are an angel, and I am not worthy to touch the hem of your garments! God have mercy on me—you don't really know the man you have married. If you did you would turn from me as you would from a leper."

Her face shrank sensitively before the force of his strong sentences.

"You are the noblest, most abused man in the world, and I love you too dearly to believe anything against you," she exclaimed, with startled tenderness. "But you'd better leave me now. I am perfectly safe. I have been here often before. I know almost every family in the building. I shall be very busy all day. This death is awfully hard on these poor girls. You and I, who have so much to be thankful for, ought not to stand talking of imaginary troubles in the presence of such reality as this."

"When shall you come home?" he asked.

"On the five o'clock train, I think. Good-by, till then."

That afternoon while making some purchases in one of the big shops on Sixth avenue Blanche met Lottie Dean.

"Oh, you dear thing!" cried the latter, giving Blanche a little impulsive hug, "I am so glad to see you, but I haven't a moment to spare. Papa is in the carriage at the door, and is as crusty and impatient as a bear. You have been saying nice things about me."

"I always do that, dear," answered Blanche.

"You have been talking to Mr. Talley about me; he has told me of a number of nice things that only you could have said."

"Have you seen him lately?" Blanche inquired.

"Have I seen him? Well, I like that!" cried Miss Dean, with a pretty affectation of resentment.

"He has been to see you, Lottie?"

"Twice—three times in one week," announced Miss Dean. "Oh, he is so good and charming."

"Ah, I begin to see," answered Blanche. "He is a good man, Lottie. My guardian—I mean my husband—trusts him implicitly. He and a number of other business men are about to start a bank and they are going to ask Mr. Talley to be cashier."

"Oh, I am so glad," cried Miss Dean, excitedly. "I introduced him to papa the other night. I was awfully afraid papa would not want him to continue his visits, but he seemed to like him very much. Blanche, I shan't forget that I met him at your house—that is, if—if—"

"Don't say 'if' when it is already three times a week," broke in Blanche, with a laugh, and the two girls parted.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 12—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Practice Christianity.—I John iii, 14-18.

John preached a gospel of assurance and not of doubt or of skepticism. "We know" is the keynote of his epistles. He was not only sure of his truths about God and Christ and the life to come, but also about himself. He did not hesitate to declare that he was a Christian. He could have sung with genuine sincerity, "Blessed assurance! Jesus is mine!" Nor was his assurance misplaced. It was logical. He based his assurance upon facts. His proof of possession was practice. "We know that we have passed from death to life, because we love the brethren." John's declaration of positive assurance was no idle or presumptuous boast. It was a sincere claim, based upon the facts. Practice is the only proof of possession. If we profess Christianity, but do not practice it, we may be assured that we do not possess it. Many are uncertain on the point of assurance. But we need not be. If we practice what we profess, we may know. Assurance is possible to all Christians.

The world will judge of our Christianity by the way we practice it. This is the only logical method of judgment. Christ taught His disciples to judge professors by their practice. In the sermon on the mount he says: "Beware of false prophets which come to you in wolves' clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit." We may try to deceive men, but they will judge us by our lives; we may try to put grapes on thorns and figs upon thistles, but the deception will be apparent. It will be seen at a glance that they are not the fruit of the thorns and thistles. If we want to be considered Christians, we must practice Christianity. The world will judge us by our fruits.

In the day of judgment Christ's standard of judgment will be our practice. "Not every one that sayeth unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in heaven." If by any means we should deceive men by a pretended practice of Christianity, we cannot deceive Christ in the day of judgment. He will judge our lives not only in the light of our actions, but also in the light of the motives that prompted them. The secrets and intents of the heart are all known to Him. "Be not deceived. God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

If Christianity is worth professing, it is worth possessing; if it is worth pretense, it is worth practice. Why, therefore, should we be satisfied with profession and pretense? God will give us the reality. Why should we be satisfied with the shadow? God's Holy Spirit can and will change our hearts and lives if we will. Let us be willing. If we profess Christianity, let us practice it. Prove your profession by your practice, and be not satisfied until you can say, "I know, because I do."

Math. v, 14-18; vii, 12, 21-29; xxv, 31-46; John xv, 1-14; Acts ii, 41-47; Rom. xii, 9-21; Eph. vi, 1-8; Phil. iv, 1-10; I Thess. v, 11-25; Rev. ii, 10.

Do Not Worry.

The word worry comes from an old English word, which means to strangle. It is a disposition which, if indulged in, will strangle our peace and happiness and our spiritual life. Most of the worry of this world is extremely foolish, for it is usually over things that never occur, and most people can look back and ridicule themselves over their needless anxieties. God takes care of His creatures, the birds and lilies; of course He will of us.

As a cure for worry some have laid down this old rule: Do not worry about the things that you cannot help, for it will do no good. Do not worry about the things you can help, for you are wasting time that might be spent in doing them. But these are semi-worldly maxims. A better rule is to give yourself up to God and ask Him to kill the old self life out of your heart and give you a clean heart. Get the blessing of a pure heart, and then your doubts will be gone, and you can trust God to take care of you and believe that all He does is for the best.—Philadelphia Methodist.

Inspiring Hope.

Without the light of truth and the light of God in the soul the future must ever be dark, but the Christian has a blessed hope and expectation of the glorious reappearing of the Saviour who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto Himself a people for His own possession, zealous of good works.—Lutheran Observer.

Sympathy With Distress.

We should speak comfortingly to those in sorrow and to the depressed. A word of sympathy timely spoken is balm to a wounded heart. The letter written in the spirit of Him whose words were full of comfort is sometimes the opening of a soul to grace and peace.—United Presbyterian.

Uncertainty.

Those who today ride upon the crested waves of prosperity may tomorrow be struggling for life in the trough of the sea, so uncertain is the tenure of life.—Christian Instructor.

Quatrain.

We rail at Time and Chance and break our hearts
To make the glory of today endure,
Is the sun dead because the day departs?
And are the suns of Life and Love less sure?
—Richard Hovey in London Public Opinion.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning May 12, "Practical Christianity." Text, I John iii, 14-18.

"He that loveth not his brother, whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?"

The lowest depth of torment to which a soul can descend is to be filled with malice and hatred. Remove from such a one the power of injuring the one disliked, and the impotent rage will be exquisite torture. No other hands can inflict such suffering upon us as our own. Human sensibilities, coupled with a self determining will, open vastest possibilities of pleasure and pain. From divine love to satanic evil is a wide range, and every mile of the tract is open to the human explorer. Enmity needs no justification in reason, seeks none and could find none if it did seek. There is always a cause for hatred, but it is quite likely to be the goodness and lovableness of the hated one which awaken it.

Christian love is an active exercise of heart powers and is not proportioned to the worth of the object on which it is expended, but by the need of that object. Not what a person is, but what he can be made, is the spur of Christian effort.

Theoretical religion is good, but it must have application in practical life to keep it alive. It is needful to talk over the law of love to God and man and find out in thought the meaning of loving one's neighbor as oneself. It is excellent to discuss and analyze the parable of the good Samaritan, but if it stops there no soul profit will abide. There must be practice, practice, practice! One must himself be the good Samaritan to know neighborliness—not playing the part with a persistent self consciousness all the time of the nobility of the action and curiosity to know what folks will say about it and obtruding self satisfaction mixed with disdain and contempt of those who have passed on as priest and Levite. That's not Christian love, but hypocrisy, and a vast deal of it is apparent in the ostentatious benevolence of the times.

The true heart feels distressed when it sees a fellow being in pain, misery, trouble and sin. "What can I do to help him?" is the question which springs up in the mind and rushes over the lips. One's own cares, needs and aims are driven from mind and the whole attention is drawn to the relief of another. It may be hard work that is required, but it is not irksome. Muscle, vein and brain may be taxed sorely, but no lash is needed for the heart. Rather the heart plies the spur when other faculties lag. Love exults to do the lowliest and hardest task. Love is the luxury and prime necessity of existence. It is the driving wheel of all life activities.

How shall we gear it into daily work? Do it in thinking. Find out the good things in others. Keep eyes and ears open to discover their good points and their excellences. You will be surprised in a month's time to find what splendid folks are living all around you and you had never discovered them. Appreciate people.

Talk good things about people and to them. Mother wit is best shown in kind words rather than in brilliant speeches. Smart after dinner speeches have ruined more reputations than they have made. One court jester is all a kingdom can support. Don't seek the office; there are many fitter ones before you. You couldn't be a Mark Twain or a Carlyle however you should try, and you don't need to be one.

Build up a reputation and character on clean, sweet, wholesome, helpful speech. If scolding, growling, cursing, faultfinding and sarcasm are needed in the world let some other person take the contract; don't you bid for it.

Then lift as you see the chance. Look out for that cash. Don't clutch the dimes too closely, but be more indulgent to another's needs than to your own appetites. The choice is always open between a cigar in your lips and bread in the mouth of a hungry child. You can smoke and forget that other one's feelings or you can relieve that famished faintness and forget the smoke. "You pay your money and take your choice." It all costs whichever way you look at it. Some things pay and others make more assessments on stock than they declare dividends.

Out of the False Into the True.

Out of the discord of evil
Into the peace of God's love;
Out of the false and the seeming
Into true joy from above.

Out of all earth fogs and sorrows
Into the light of Love's face;
Out of all sickness and yearning
Into true health, strength and grace.

Out from all malice and hatred
Into affection, God crowned;
Out from the world, with its glitter,
Into the bliss newly found.

Out of the shadow of matter
Into the radiant One Mind;
Out from the promptings of error
Into the rest pure hearts find.

Out from all lust and self thinking
Into the Christ purity;
Out from all self centered interest
Into Love's deep mystery.

Out from the senses' blind thraldom
Into the light of God's day;
Out of mortality's selfhood
Into the one perfect way.

Thus mounting daily, we conquer
All that would stand in our way,
Learn the great lesson of meekness
And enter the eternal day.

Know that the Father is waiting,
Ready to welcome his own;
Hear the glad voices of angels,
Reap the good seed we have sown—

Seed sown in soil we made ready—
Ready through thorn roads once trod,
Now yielding their bountiful harvest
And garnered safe unto our God.

Thus living as taught by the Master
We enter our heaven on earth,
And our lives bear the fruits of the Spirit
That hallowed our loved Saviour's birth.

THE COST OF IT ALL.

China Must Pay Dear For Boxer Outbreak.

A CLAIM OF 450,000,000 TAELS.

A Difference of Opinion as to How the Indemnity Shall Be Paid. A Foreign Loan Probable.

PEKING, May 10.—An indemnity claim of 450,000,000 taels will be presented to the Chinese plenipotentiaries today. Official Chinese throughout the empire have been communicating with the court and giving advice. Most of them seem to favor a loan guaranteed by the foreign powers. Others, prominent among whom is Chang Chi Tung, believe in raising the money in every possible way without a loan and in paying off the entire demand within five years.

The court has considered methods of raising 20,000,000 extra annually and provisionally approves the plan, but the Chinese plenipotentiaries have instructions to obtain a reduction of the indemnity demand as far as possible.

Whatever the final demands of the powers may be it is not believed that the opposition will be much more than a matter of form.

The ministers of the powers met yesterday morning and decided that the Chinese should be given to understand thoroughly that the amount did not constitute the claim, but was the total of the expenses, including private claims considered fair, and was meant more to obtain an opinion from official sources as to China's ability to pay and also as to what means she would employ.

To Prepare For Court's Return.

TIEN-TSIN, May 10.—Hui Ju Fen, former director of Chinese railways, has arrived here on his way to Peking. He is said to be one of five officials whom Emperor Kwang Su has sent to prepare the capital for the return of the court.

Lipton's Yacht Crippled.

SOUTHAMPTON, May 10.—The 60 mile racing trial of the Shamrock I and the Shamrock II from Southampton water to Weymouth was suddenly terminated off the Needles by a bad squall, during which the gaff topsail yard of the new challenger was carried away and her gaff crumpled up. She was forced to abandon the contest and returned to Southampton in tow of the Erin for repairs. The accident was primarily due to the carrying away of a heavy backstay, a block of which fell and struck the deck at Sir Thomas Lipton's feet. Had the block fallen a foot nearer, Sir Thomas Lipton would probably have been killed. The Dennys have a new gaff nearly ready. In the afternoon trial the challenger sailed 12 miles in one hour and ten minutes. It is expected that the next trial race will take place tomorrow.

Italian Laborers Mobbed.

KANSAS CITY, May 10.—Jerome Fedeli, Italian consul in Kansas City, is quoted as saying that the labor trouble in Iola, Kan., that resulted in several Italians being driven from that town by American workmen will be investigated immediately. "Eleven of the Italians reached here yesterday," said Consul Fedeli. "Two or three of these were injured, and at least one of them was carried from the train in a blanket. I shall report the matter at once to Count Rozwadowski in Chicago, who has jurisdiction of the state of Kansas." A special from Iola says the leaders of the mob have been arrested and held under bond.

Wireless Message Experiments.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Recent experiments in wireless telegraphy off the coast of Malta have resulted in the successful transmission of a message 134 miles, according to United States Consul Grout at Malta in a report to the state department. The message was received in an unexpected way. While experimenting on a ship in the open sea the consul says the operators were surprised to receive a message in Italian asking as to the position of their ship. It afterward developed that the message came from an Italian war vessel at Syracuse.

Tube Workers Shut Out.

READING, Pa., May 10.—As a result of the strike of 1,650 men at the tube works of the Reading Iron company the management has addressed them an open letter recognizing their right to quit work, but regretting their hasty action. The company regrets the loss of services of so many faithful men, and the letter concludes by expressing the hope that they may speedily find employment on terms entirely satisfactory to themselves. This is accepted as meaning the closing of the big plant indefinitely and also the other mills of the company, which employ 800 men.

O'Brien's Paper Seized.

DUBLIN, May 10.—The police have seized Mr. William O'Brien's weekly paper, The Irish People. It is reported that the seizure was made on account of reflections upon King Edward.

Shirt Factory Burned.

BALTIMORE, May 10.—The shirt manufactory of Morris & Co., 23 and 25 South Gay street, was destroyed by fire, causing an aggregate loss of $85,000.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

In Robert Tilney, the Leal's baseball team has a good catcher. With him behind the bat, a runner has a hard time stealing bases.

Tomorrow the St. Mary ball team will have for its opponents, the Lincoln Cadets of Bayonne. The game will be played on the Fourth street grounds beginning at 3:30.

A game has been scheduled between the second team of the North Plainfield High School and the third class team of the Plainfield High School for Saturday afternoon on the Westervelt avenue grounds.

A feature of the city High School's last two games has been the improvement shown by Davis, as first baseman, on the former team. He has exhibited an aptitude for muffing lately, but Saturday this fault had well nigh disappeared.

The work of J. Montross, the former pitcher for St. Mary's team, is much appreciated by the Hope chapel nine. He was not in his usual form in the game against the Borough High School boys Saturday, but generally he handles the ball well.

Dupee, as a pitcher, seems to be at his best when fortune frowns upon his team. When matters looked serious for the Leal boys in the game with the Borough High School boys, Dupee sized up to the occasion and prevented any more scoring on the part of the opposing team.

There is a notable absence of system in the field work of the North Plainfield High School team. The boroughites show a lack of proper coaching. Prof. Sander, of the manual training department of the Somerset street school, was depended upon to train the lads, but his time is so occupied with school work that he has been unable to give the nine proper attention.

The game between the Battin High School nine and the North Plainfield High School nine, which was arranged to be played on the former's diamond at Elizabeth Saturday, has been declared off. Under the original agreement the game was scheduled for Saturday afternoon, but by the request of the Elizabeth lads it was changed to Saturday morning. This week the Battin High School manager notified Manager Smith, of the local team, that the team would only consent to play the boroughites Friday. As it is impossible for the North Plainfield boys to play Friday, the game has necessarily been cancelled.

No game will be played by the Plainfield High School baseball team tomorrow.

Leal's School and the Alis teams will cross bats on Pittis' field tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. A good game is expected.

S. D. Drake has offered to lay out a baseball diamond and erect stands at Dewey Park for the Plainfield High School nine providing the team will play there in the future.

The Plainfield Athletic Association will play its first baseball game with the Garwood A. C., tomorrow afternoon. It will be played on the former's grounds on South Second street, near Clinton avenue, where the football contests took place during the winter. Both diamond and outfield have been scraped and rolled, insuring fast playing. The teams are both showing up well and a good game is expected. The batting order of the teams will be as follows:

Garwood A. C.	Plainfield A. A.
Brown, ss.	Jackson, cf.
Haldy, 2b.	Connors, 2b.
Colwell, c.	Scott, ss.
Ball, 3b.	Mumford, lf.
Hegeman, p.	Doyle, p.
Tunison, cf.	Crothy, c.
Fream, 1b.	Connelly, rf.
McMahon, rf.	Dodd, 3b.
Washington, rf.	Lederer, 1b.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

In the three man State championship shoot held at Newark Wednesday the Middlesex Gun Club, of Dunellen, won first prize, making a total of 82 out of a possible 90. The shooters comprising the team were Neaf Apgar, Jacob Hoffman and Thos. Brantingham. In the election of officers of the New Jersey State Sportsmen's Association, under whose auspices the shoot was held, Neaf Apgar was made a member of the legislative committee.

MANY BROKEN WIRES.

Lots of Trouble Last Night on Lines of the Electric Light Company.

All last night linemen in the employ of the electric light company were kept on the jump from one part of the city to another repairing broken wires. At times whole sections of the city were plunged in darkness and the escapes from shocks on the part of passersby were numerous.

On West Front street, opposite Grove, a wire snapped in two just as a number of people were passing beneath Several of them jumped barely in time to escape being struck by the falling ends. Patrolman Myers was quickly on the spot and kept guard until the arrival of the repair men. At Fourth street and Central avenue a live wire set fire to the limb of a tree and for a time there was a brilliant display of sparks and blue flame. The lights below Liberty street, from Fourth street south, were all out until after midnight.

Roberts, North Creek, Ark. L. W. Randolph.

Preparing School Government.

The election of senators, which form a part of the new system of co-operative government to be tried in the Plainfield High School, was held this morning. Ballots were cast for a president of the senate and two members from each of the four classes, representation between boys and girls being equal. The result will be announced Monday.

Gathered Him In.

Andrew McMurray, of Westfield, will have cause to remember a visit to this city which he made last evening. He became disorderly on North avenue and was having a royal time when a patrolman happened along and gathered him in. This morning he appeared in the city court in a penitent manner. He paid a $5 fine for his fun.

MUSIC ENGAGED.

Final Arrangements Were Made For Exempt Firemen's Trip To Bayonne May 15.

Final arrangements were made last evening for the Bayonne trip, May 15, by the committee of the Exempt Firemen's Association. The association, accompanied by the Warren Engine Company, will leave here at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and return at 9 o'clock in the evening.

The Fife, Drum and Bugle Corps of the First Regiment, N. G. N. J., of Newark, which is composed of fifty men, has been engaged for the trip by the Exempt Firemen's Association. There are twenty-one fifes, thirteen snare drums, thirteen bugles, two base drums and cymbals in the corps, which is considered one of the finest in the State.

The excursion tickets will be in the hands of the committee for sale. They can also be obtained at the railroad depot on the day of the parade.

LETTER IN DEFENCE OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

First Public Statement Made By Christian Scientists Regarding the Ellis Case.

WRITTEN BY WM. A. CHILDS.

IS A MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLICITY.

Reviews the Happenings at Fanwood From Their Point of View—Claims That There Was No Attempt to Interfere With Physicians.

A great deal has been said in the newspapers of New York and vicinity regarding the Christian Science healers from Cranford who visited the home of LeRoy J Ellis, of Fanwood, where four children subsequently died of diphtheria. The members of the Christian Science sect have had nothing to say on the subject heretofore. Joseph B. See, who is the head of the band at Cranford, called at The Daily Press office yesterday afternoon. He left a letter prepared by William A. Childs, of Englewood, a member of the publicity committee of the Christian Scientists. It is the first public statement made by Christian Scientists regarding the Ellis case.

It is as follows:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In view of the grossly false impressions which the public has been permitted to receive as to the responsibility of Christian Science and its practitioners for the recent spread of diphtheria to four of the five children of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy J. Ellis, of Fanwood, and the deaths of two of them and as to the extent the acts of these practitioners menaced the public with this disease, it seems imperative, in simple justice, that a precise statement be published of exactly what Christian Scientists did and did not do in these matters.

For this purpose the writer has carefully collected all essential facts; facts as to which he understands Mr. and Mrs. Ellis are in entire agreement, and he begs leave to present them briefly and chronologically.

Thursday, April 11, near midnight, the first child was first taken ill. Mrs. Ellis promptly telephoned for Mrs. See, a Christian Scientist, of Cranford, who did not come, and Mr. Ellis immediately sent for the family physician, living near by, who came at once, that night, and prescribed for the child, but did not diagnose the case as diphtheria until three and a half days later. In the meantime, during this period, or much of it, the child was out and about and mingling with other children, although in the doctor's care and under his treatment, and later that of other physicians also, from that night of the 11th until its demise the 23d. And in the care and under the treatment of the physicians, the disease spread to three of the four remaining Ellis children, one of whom died, making two deaths in all.

The telephone message to Mrs. See that night of the 11th was not delivered until the following day. On its receipt Mr. See repaired to the Ellis home, was told the family physician had the case, and departed. He did not go there again at any time. But Mrs. See, as an intimate friend of the family, called the following Sunday afternoon, before it was known that the child's complaint was contagious or even serious, and was accidentally present when the doctor made one of his visits, this time bringing with him another doctor in consultation, and, for the first time, pronounced the case diphtheria.

This announcement, naturally, greatly distressed the parents, and they both begged Mrs. See to remain over night and endeavor to sustain and comfort Mrs. Ellis.

She complied, but, returning home next morning, did not again go to Fanwood. That she should fumigate her clothing or bathe in bichloride of mercury, or do both, at the time of her departure, was not suggested to her by the doctor, or by any one, nor did it then occur to her, more than to them to do these things. She states, had the suggestion been made, she certainly would have complied with it. Later that same day, and sometime after her departure, the Ellis house was placed in quarantine. Nevertheless because of her exposure at this visit, the Cranford Board of Health six days later, the 21st, quarantined Mrs. See and also her husband who had not been in the Ellis house in nine days, and their household, for seven days thereafter, that is, until the 28th!

TAPPEN WILL FIGHT.

Decided to Contest Place in Middlesex County Board of Freeholders.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, May 11—By a vote of 13 to 8, the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders has decided to retain P. C. Staats, of Dunellen, as a member of the board, while Luther Tappen, of Metuchen, was excluded. Both men were elected by their respective boroughs, although according to law neither is entitled to a seat. Neither Dunellen nor Metuchen has the required population of 3,000 which gives them a representative to the board. It is said the retaining of Staats and the exclusion of Tappen was done for party reasons. The latter was offered financial backing to contest the decision and has announced his intention of doing so.

WON HIS RACE.

Lively Race by Douglass Darby Saved Much Property From Flames.

By the aid of his fast trotting sorrel horse, "Sunday," Douglass Darby, of Fanwood, was instrumental in saving from total destruction by fire yesterday afternoon a valuable lot of cordwood and other timber.

David Hand, of Netherwood, who owns the wood kept on Mr. Darby's property, ordered a colored employe to burn a pile of brush which had accumulated on the place. A short time after this was done, Mr. Darby, in passing the place, noticed that the flames from the brush heap had spread to the cordwood and ties, and threatened the adjoining property.

Urging his horse on he quickly notified Mr. Hand and aroused the neighborhood. Friendly hands put out the fire as quickly as possible but the loss was considerable. Approximately seventy cords of the 270 which stood on the property were destroyed together with a quantity of railroad ties.

AT DEWEY PARK.

Athletic Events Planned There For Memorial Day.

Arrangements are being made for an interesting series of sports to take place at Dewey Park on Decoration Day.

In the morning at 10 o'clock a game of baseball will be played between teams from Plainfield and New Brunswick, which are yet to be chosen. A three mile foot race open to all men connected with newspapers published in this State, editors excepted, will be a feature of the afternoon sports. Conred Knoth, of this city, challenges all comers in this contest. The winner will receive a silver cup.

A free-for-all bicycle race will also take place. The ten men making the best time in this race will each be awarded a badge. A silver cup is awarded to the winner of two out of three successive games played on the Dewey Park grounds, the contest on Decoration Day being the first game in the prize series.

Changed Route in Trenton.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, May 11.—The Johnson trolley syndicate has decided to change its proposed route through this city. In consequence, options on the Calhoun street properties will be allowed to expire. The first trip on the Morrisville Yardley trolley road was made this week. By a resolution of the Morrisville Council the new company is required to protect properly all dangerous spots along the road.

Graduation of Juniors.

The twelfth anniversary of the organization of the International Epworth League, will be celebrated at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church tomorrow evening. An interesting programme has been prepared in connection with the graduation of juniors. Special music will be rendered by the recently organized choir and Pastor McMurray will deliver a suitable address.

Accident Delayed Freight Traffic

The west bound passenger track of the Central Railroad was blocked for an hour this morning by a drawhead pulling out of the freight car as it was passing the Clinton Avenue station. The Philadelphia express and the Easton local were switched over to the west bound freight track at the North Avenue station after a slight delay.

Non Support Case Adjourned.

The case of the overseer of the poor against John VanNess, for non-support, which was to have been tried before City Judge Runyon this morning, was adjourned for one week. VanNess' counsel, W. G. DeMeza, stated that he had not looked into the matter fully and was not prepared to present it properly.

To Preach to Odd Fellows.

Rev. Mr. Young will preach a sermon before Union Lodge, I. O. U. of O. F., tomorrow evening in their lodge rooms.

THE VERDICT WAS REDUCED.

JURY IN CHRISTIANSEN - LAMBERT CASE GAVE VERDICT FOR $2,500.

But Defence is Not Yet Satisfied and Will Appeal Case to the Supreme Court.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, May 11.—The jury in the case of Christiansen against Lambert brought in a verdict last evening of $2 500 for the plaintiff, after a deliberation of nearly seven hours. This case was called Wednesday afternoon before Justice VanSyckel, sitting in the Circuit Court, and occupied the rest of that day, Thursday, and all of yesterday. The plaintiff, was represented by J. E. Stricker, of Perth Amboy, and Former Judge Gilhooley, of this place. The defendant was represented by Murphy & Blatz and Craig A. Marsh, of Plainfield. From the start the case was a hard fought one. The verdict of the jury at the first trial some time ago was $7,000.

The counsel for the defendant were not satisfied. Notice of appeal to the Supreme Court has been given by counsel for the defendant. During the summing up, yesterday Former Judge Gilhooley paid a flattering compliment to Mr. Marsh, saying that he is admittedly the leader of the Union County Bar. His summing up was considered unusually effective. In fact the case thoughout was handled with great credit to counsel on both sides.

The case was that of where the plaintiff sustained severe injuries while working for the defendant and he claims the latter responsible for his injuries.

PASSION PLAY.

Will be Reproduced by Many Pictures at St. Mary's Church Tuesday Evening.

The "Passion Play," as enacted by the peasants of Oberammergau, will be reproduced by moving pictures at St. Mary's church Tuesday evening.

Following the biographic pictures, which are said to be very realistic, a collection of colored stereopticon views are shown. The story of the Cross is told during the evening by the lecturer who has the matter in charge.

FIRE LADDIES WILL PLAY.

Game of Baseball to be Played on Memorial Day.

The fire laddies of the North Plainfield Fire Department are looking forward with interest to a baseball game in which they are to participate on Decoration Day. A team, representing Warren Engine Company, will cross bats with a nine selected from members of the West End Hose Company.

In a similar game last year, the West End Hose Company's nine won in a close played contest and this fact adds interest to the game scheduled. L. B. Bodine is captain of the Engine Company's team and Chas. Keller is at the head of the opposing nine. The place for playing the game has not yet been settled upon.

Leased Hotel at Atlantic City.

Thomas Hibbard, of Hibbard & Jones, proprietors of the Hotel Imperial, has leased the Hotel Wyoming, Atlantic City, for the summer season. The hotel is on Arkansas avenue, and is but a few steps distant from the boardwalk. It has 125 rooms, and is equipped with all modern improvements. Lately it has been refurnished throughout. Mr. Hibbard takes possession June 1.

Valuable Real Estate at Auction.

Persons intending to buy real estate in Plainfield or suburbs should not fail to attend the auction sale to be held May 18 at 2 o'clock at Clinton avenue and West Third street, as the property must be sold to close up the business of the late John D. Runyon and C. H. Hand.

Delegates to Conference.

Miss Grace Emmons and Miss Abbie VanCleef, of Trinity Reformed church, will represent the Young Women's Mission Band at the Woman's Home Missionary Society conference to be held Tuesday in the Fifth Avenue Collegiate church, New York.

LaVere's Band Engaged.

LaVere's Band, of this city, has been engaged by the management to furnish music at the all-day carnival to be held at Dewey Park Decoration Day.

Mrs. J. F. Garretson and daughter Kittie, of West Fourth street, left today for Seigfreid, Pa., where they will visit Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Garretson. They will return home tomorrow.

On account of the present disagreeable weather it is not likely that Cornelius Schenck, Jr., of West End Park, will leave the hospital today. He is steadily growing stronger and if the weather is pleasant he will go home the first of next week.

WEDDED IN MORNING AT GRACE CHURCH.

Marriage of Miss Hilda Mary Braithwaite to Middleton O'Malley Knott.

VERY PRETTY CEREMONY.

BRIDE CAME TO THIS COUNTRY FOR THE MARRIAGE.

Wedding Luncheon at Home of Martin I Cooley, of Rockview Avenue—Couple Met Abroad—Will Reside in Plainfield.

The marriage of Miss Hilda Mary Braithwaite, of Turlough Park, Castlebar, Ireland, to Middleton O'Malley Knott, of Plainfield, took place this morning in Grace P. E. church at 10 o'clock, in the presence of one hundred guests from this city and New York. Rev. Floyd Appleton, formerly curate of Grace church, but now of St. Paul's P. E. church, Brooklyn, performed the ceremony. He is a very close friend of the groom, and for this reason he officiated The wedding was a very pretty one.

The bride is the daughter of the late John Henry Braithwaite, of Liverpool, England, and a niece of Charles Lionel Fitzgerald, of Turlough Park, Castlebar, Ireland. She and the groom met two years ago while he was abroad, and after their engagement it was arranged that she should come to Plainfield for the marriage, it being impossible for the groom to go to her home. The bride arrived in New York a week ago today on the Etruria, and since then was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, of Rockview avenue, where she made final preparations for the event of today.

At the ceremony this morning Miss Grace W. Cooley was the maid-of-honor, and Gifford W. Cooley was the best man. Prior to the arrival of the party, Mrs. Wm. A. Freeman, who presided at the organ, rendered a programme of favorite selections. As the party entered the church and proceeded to the altar the Tannhauser wedding march was rendered.

The ushers, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and Robert Strong, of this city, led the way, follow by the maid-of-honor, who was gowned in old blue crepe, trimmed with a delicate shade of pink. She also wore a hat of yellow chiffon, trimmed with pink roses. She carried a bouquet of pink roses Then followed the bride, accompanied by Martin I. Cooley. The bride's gown was of white liberty silk, trimmed with valenciennes lace. She wore a veil and carried lilies-of-the-valley. At the altar she was received by her cousin, Lionel Serjeantson, of London, England, who gave her away in marriage. The groom and best man entered the church from a front door and met the party and officiating cergyman at the altar, where the ceremony making the happy couple one was performed according to the form of the Episcopal church.

Following the ceremony, the bridal party left the church, while the Mendelssohn wedding march was played. They went directly to the home of Mr. Cooley, on Rockview avenue, where a wedding luncheon was served to fourteen guests. After the luncheon, Dr. and Mrs. Knott left Plainfield to enjoy their honeymoon in the south. Upon their return they will reside at 1311 Putnam avenue, where the groom will continue his practice as a veterinarian. Before their departure, the bride and groom received a shower of best wishes from the guests present as well as congratulations from the other side of the water.

A large collection of very elegant presents was received, many being brought by the bride from relatives and friends at her former home. The many friends of the groom, as well as the newly made acquaintances of the bride in this city and New York, also remembered them handsomely with tokens of much value and beauty.

A Matter of Pride.

Of course all are all proud of the country they live in, and wherever they go they make that pride known; and if you are proud of the house you live in you should make it manifest by having it numbered in such neat, legible and durable way as will be insured to you by leaving an order at Collier's.

Eight Members Elected.

The Young Men's Association of Hope chapel held an adjourned meeting last evening and elected eight members. The advisability of preparing a set of rules and regulations to govern the new gymnasium was discussed and will be reported upon at the next meeting.

MANY KNEW JOHN J. CURREN.

A POPULAR CITIZEN HERE WHERE HE SPENT MOST OF HIS LIFE.

One of the First Members of Carpenters' Union—Funeral Will Be Held Monday

In the death of John J. Curren, which occurred at his home on East Second street, yesterday, after a brief illness from a complication of diseases, Plainfield lost one of its most popular citizens. He was in his thirty-fourth year. With the exception of a very short time, he had always resided in this city. During that period he made a host of friends, by all of whom he was well liked.

He was a carpenter by trade and was employed for a long time by James Manning, with whom he served his apprenticeship. He was one of the first to join the Carpenters Union and had always been an active member.

He leaves, besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Curren, with whom he lived, two sisters, the Misses Mary and Kathryn Curren, and two brothers, Thomas and John Curren, all of whom reside in this city.

The funeral services will be held from his late residence Monday morning at 8:45 and from St. Mary's church at 9:30, where a solemn requiem mass will be said for the repose of his soul. Interment will be at St. Mary's cemetery.

FISH DEALERS FOUGHT.

Rivalry Over the Choice of Location Resulted in a Fistic Encounter This Morning.

John Benner and William Goff, two rival fish peddlers, became involved in a dispute this morning, over the question as to who should locate his wagon on the west side of Somerset street at the corner of Front, in order to catch the Saturday trade. Benner has secured the coveted spot for several Saturdays past, but when he arrived this morning, Goff was ahead of him.

The latter paid no heed to Benner's claims to ownership and refused to move. Words were finally succeeded by blows and the men were engaged in a rough and tumble fistic encounter when a patrolman stepped in and separated them. Both were ordered to appear in the city court but neither obeyed as no formal complaint was made. In the meantime Goff holds the fort.

AT SPRING MEETING.

Borough Teachers Are in Attendance at Meeting at Bound Brook.

Superintendent Wightman and the teachers of the North Plainfield schools attended the spring meeting of the Somerset County Teachers' Association, held at Bound Brook today

The chief matter of interest at the meeting was the address of Superintendent Demerest, of Hoboken, who explained a new method of reading in the schools which is claimed to be superior to the system in use in the schools of this city and the borough.

The next meeting of the association will be held in North Plainfield early in October.

Visited Pan-American.

W. R Cock, of East Fifth street, returned last evening from a business trip to Buffalo. While there he saw the first electric illumination of the Pan-American Exposition buildings and grounds and he says that it defies description. It requires 5,000 horsepower to illuminate the grounds and buildings. In Mr. Cock's opinion the Exposition will be the greatest success of the time.

Want Bridge at Grant Avenue.

At the meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders held at Somerville Wednesday a petition was received from the citizens of North Plainfield for a bridge across Green brook at Grant avenue. The petition was ordered placed on file.

Getting Ready For Parade.

In anticipation of the parade at Bayonne on Wednesday, the engine of the Warren Engine Company has been brightly polished by the company's engineer, John Schenck.

Luncheon at Hillside.

A subscription luncheon was given yesterday at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Clubhouse, which in spite of the rainy weather proved to be a very pleasant affair.

Luncheon for Friday Afternoon Club.

A delightful luncheon was given yesterday by Mrs. John Clapp at her home on Mercer avenue, for the Friday Afternoon Club, of North Plainfield.

Infant Baptism.

There will be infant baptism at the Crescent Avenue church tomorrow morning, at which time an offering will be made for the Freedmen's Mission.

CITY WON CASE.

Ending of the Much Talked of Milliken Suit Against City.

The suit of Mrs Sarah Milliken against the City of Plainfield for alleged damages from the sewage beds was terminated this week in the Supreme Court, before Judge Van Syckel. Craig A. Marsh, representing the city, appeared in court and made a motion to strike out the pleadings of the plaintiff in answer to her last plea, claiming that they did not answer the plea.

S. S. Swackhamer, counsel for the plaintiff, desired to amend the pleadings, but this was not considered regular, and Mr. Marsh opposed this on technical grounds. At the request of Mr. Swackhamer, a non-suit was agreed to and was granted by the court, thus practically bringing to an end a most important suit.

CIRCUS NEXT WEEK.

Fine Performance is Booked to Appear Here Wednesday and Thursday.

Welsh Bros.' Big Railroad Shows and Trained Animal Exposition, which will shortly appear here, have been newly equipped throughout and doubly enlarged in all their various departments. It is an entirely new show this year, teeming with myriads of extraordinary attractions, spectacular equine displays, great array of aerial and acrobatic champions, funny clowns, and not forgetting the renowned Takezawa Royal Imperial Japanese Circus Company (eight people), an exceptionally wonderfully clever troupe of Flowery Kingdom performers in a series of master acts.

The musical programme of the entertainment is a special feature. Fifteen first-class musicians comprise the band and orchestra, directed by Herbert H. Whittier. Much interest will be centered in the street parade that takes place every morning at 11 o'clock. The show will give two performances daily, at 2 and 8 o'clock at Plainfield Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

DEEDS RECORDED.

Those Filed in the County Clerk's Office at Elizabeth This Week.

The following deeds have been recorded in the County Clerk's office at Elizabeth: The Plainfield Real Estate Company to W. A. Boone, lots 18-20, block 10, map of Plainfield Real Estate Company, $1; Joshua D. Loizeaux et ux to W. A. Boone, lot 19, block 10, same map, $7,500; Mary Hamman to Mary A. Murphy, lots 4-10, on Magie's land, located on East Second street, Plainfield, $1; Frederick K. Fish to Hugh H. Abernethy, on the corner of Grant avenue and Eighth street, Plainfield, $7,500; John B. Prosbasco et ux to David N. Force, corner land, formerly of Dime Savings institution, Plainfield, $350.

CELEBRATED BIRTHDAY.

Bowling Auxiliary of Gesang and Turn Verein Gave Party to a Member.

The Ladies' Bowling Club, a recreation association connected with the Gesang and Turn Verein, gave a party in Saengerbund Hall Thursday afternoon, in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Katie Melcher, of Elizabeth, who is one of the members of the club.

An exciting bowling match between members of the club made the afternoon a pleasant one. A large bouquet of cut flowers and a cut glass vase were presented to Mrs. Melcher by her associates. Refreshments were served during the afternoon.

Y. M. C. A. for Colored Men.

NEW HOSPITAL SITE IS FINALLY CHOSEN

Contract Closed For Lot on South East Corner of Randolph Road and Park Avenue.

WILL BUILD AT ONCE.

LOT SELECTED IS TEN AND A HALF ACRES IN EXTENT.

Committee From Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital Has Carefully Examined Many Proposed Sites—Plans Must be Secured.

The location of the new buildings of Muhlenberg Hospital has finally been settled by the committee from the Board of Governors of the hospital, which had the subject under consideration. The committee has, with the approval of the Board of Governors, closed a contract with the owners of the Randolph property, located on the south east corner of Park avenue and Randolph road, for ten and a half acres of land for the new hospital site.

The board has had under consideration a number of sites in the southern part of the city, including the one offered by James E. Martine on Thornton avenue. The availability of the different sites has been carefully considered and the decision of the committee is now made public. Action will be soon taken to return Mr. Martine's offer with the thanks of the board.

Now that the site of the new hospital buildings has been definitely settled, the work of building will be started as soon as possible. It will be first necessary to secure the plans for the buildings. Several designs have already been submitted in past years, but the new buildings will not be built according to any of them. As soon as the plans are prepared and the contracts awarded work will begin at once. While the board has enough funds to start the work it is hoped that considerable more money will be subscribed so that the hospital can be built on the most modern lines.

This new site is owned by the Randolph estate, all the heirs of which have now agreed to the purchase on the terms made by the board. It is believed that it will be an ideal spot for the location of a hospital, close to the city and yet away from all the noise and bustle. It is on one of the leading thoroughfares of the city and is located close to the trolley line.

TWELFTH ANNIVERSARY.

Will Be Observed By Chapter No. 1 of the Epworth League.

The twelfth anniversary of the Epworth League will be held in the First M. E. church tomorrow evening, beginning at 7:45 o'clock. Henry A. McGee will give a talk on "God's Estimate of Worth," Samuel H. Tugwell will speak on "The Law of Service" and Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass will address the members of the Junior League on "Methodism's Appeal to Youth."

Reports of the year's work will be submitted and appropriate music will be a feature of the evening.

May Walk Tomorrow.

The annual May walk of the Gesang and Turn Verein will take place tomorrow morning. The members of the organization will assemble at Saengerbund Hall at 5:50 o'clock. They will march leisurely to a place selected on West Seventh street near New Market, where the day will be spent in German fashion.

In Justice Mattison's Court.

Bed Bugs and Cock Roaches.

For destruction and complete riddance of Cock Roaches, Beetles, Wood and Water Bugs, Bed Bugs, Ants, Rats, Mice, etc., "Rough on Rats," though poisonous, if used with care is most effective. In fact it is the only thing that will permanently annihilate Bed Bugs and Cock Roaches. As an exterminator of Rats and Mice, "Rough on Rats" is the old reliable that never fails nor disappoints. They "don't die in the house." Is sold all around the world. Is used by all civilized nations of the earth. Is the most extensively advertised, the best know and has the largest sale of any article of its kind on the face of the globe. It gives satisfaction every time. Beware of imitations. I employ no peddlers. Have a suspicion of any dealer offering substitutes said to be as good. 15c. and 25c.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

Many pedestrians have remarked of the pronounced improvement made in regard to the conspicuousness of the new street signs. While the method of hanging them at a convenient height above the sidewalk is in general use throughout the country, Topeka, Kansas, has originated a somewhat unique plan in this matter. In that city, on each of the four corners, is inlaid in the sidewalk two iron lettered signs of the street names. Each signs points in the direction in which the streets runs.

Capt. S. C. Peck, a veteran of the Civil War, who spent much time in the South during the war, and is well acquainted with Jacksonville, which was recently destroyed by fire, remembers the first disastrous fire in that city in March, 1863. He was then a lieutenant in his company, and was in Jacksonville when the fire broke out and destroyed the city. He with hundreds of others had great difficulty in making their escape on a boat, and it was fortunate that they got away at the time they did. It was the belief at that time that the fire was of incendiary origin. The recent fire recalls to Capt. Peck's mind many things concerning the fated Southern city.

Shudders at His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about ready to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by L. W. Randolph. Only 50 cents.

—Several candidates will be received by Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, Royal Arcanum, at the meeting to be held Thursday evening, May 16.

—Mr. W. J. Baxter, of North Brook, N. C., says he suffered with piles for fifteen years. He tried many remedies with no results until he used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve and that quickly cured him. L. W. Randolph.

—Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, will initiate two candidates at the meeting to be held next week Tuesday evening.

—If people only knew what we know about Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, it would be used in nearly every household, as there are few people who do not suffer from a feeling of fullness after eating, belching, flatulence, sour stomach or water-brash, caused by indigestion or dyspepsia. A preparation, such as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which, with no aid from the stomach, will digest your food, certainly can't help but do you good. L. W. Randolph.

Isn't it Worth 25c. To Be Cured of Constipation
People who suffer from habitual constipation with all its attendant ills, clogged stomach and bowels, sluggish liver, heartburn, indigestion, and thin and impure blood, are too apt to believe that the only remedy is violent purgatives. The contrary is the case. Such cathartics, even if they do move the bowels, are irritating and griping, leave the stomach inflamed and enfeebled and the constipated condition recurs with greater difficulty of cure and the sufferer constantly growing worse. There is a laxative that moves the bowels without pain or griping, cleanses the stomach, sharpens the appetite, stimulates the liver, strengthens the nerves, and purifies the blood, while its marvellous tonic properties tone up the entire system and keep it healthy.
Laxakola Does It
Its remarkable tonic properties reach every organ—the liver, kidneys and stomach, nerve, heart and brain—and removes the cause of your debilitated condition. This is the only way to secure an absolute and permanent cure.
Laxakola is the only medicine for babies, is purely vegetable and its action is gentle, speedy and effective. For coated tongue, simple fevers, colds, chills and languid feeling it is the ideal medicine.
It tastes good. ☞ Children like it and ask for it.
Laxakola, the great tonic laxative, is not only the most efficient of family remedies, but the most economical, because it combines two medicines, viz: laxative and tonic, and at one price. No other remedy gives so much for the money. At druggists, 25c. and 50c., or send for free sample to LAXAKOLA CO., 182 Nassau Street, N. Y., or 356 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

WAS NOT KIDNAPED.

Willie McCormick's Body Is Found In a Creek.

HAD BEEN MISSING SINCE MARCH 27.

The Disappearance of the Lad Was One of the Most Mysterious of Recent Years, and Search Had Been Constantly Made.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Willie McCormick's body was found yesterday afternoon in Cromwell's creek at One Hundred and Sixty-first street and Railroad avenue, only a few blocks away from the home of the boy's parents in Highbridge. Only a few days ago the search for the missing boy whose disappearance was one of the most mysterious happenings in years here took the despairing turn of dredging sewers, Captain Titus, the head of the detective bureau, having become convinced that the boy was dead. Shortly after 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon police headquarters received a meager report from the Morrisania police station announcing that Policeman Elten had found the body, that it was in a sad condition and that the clothing had been identified by the boy's sister.

Cromwell's creek is on the dividing line between the Morrisania and Highbridge police precincts.

It was six weeks ago last Wednesday, on March 27, that Willie McCormick, 10 years old, disappeared. He started from his home on Ogden avenue, Highbridge, a little after 7 o'clock, in the evening to attend devotional exercises at a church not far away and was never seen alive again. His disappearance was reported to the police just before midnight that night, a general alarm was sent out, and from that day to this many false clews were followed and false identifications were sent in.

Kidnapers were held to account for the mystery of course, and the theory was helped at first by an alleged letter from a kidnaper received on April 2 demanding money. Gypsies arrested in Washington were thought for a time to know something about the case. Rewards amounting to $6,000 were offered for the recovery of the boy by a neighbor and by M. G. McCormick, the boy's uncle. Pat Sheedy took a hand in the matter and offered to do what he could to clear the mystery.

As late as this week persons in this city and out of town reported that they were sure that they had seen the boy recently on cars or in other public places. Hundreds of letters were received by the afflicted family, showing that the public sympathy was generally aroused.

Rear Admiral Schley In London.

LONDON, May 11.—Rear Admiral Schley, when interviewed by a press representative, said: "I am here for a little rest and pleasure. I have not been in London for 25 years. I had an enjoyable cruise in the Atlantic, and the visits of our ships have done a lot of good to American relations there, and our reception was most cordial. I have nothing to say regarding the vice admiralty or the policy of the navy. I have kept my mouth shut, and I intend to do so. When I get back to God's country, I will make my will and prepare for my retirement in October." Admiral Schley, who looks well and hearty, will sail for home on the St. Paul May 18.

Cloudburst In West Virginia.

WHEELING, May 11.—A cloudburst east of Wheeling caused the overflowing of Peters, Chapels and Woods runs, tributaries of Wheeling creek. At Triadelphia the Baltimore and Ohio tracks were covered with water for several hours, and trains were held up, including two passenger trains. At Greggville a little child, name unknown, is said to have been washed away and drowned. Between Greggville and Leatherwood, a suburb, the wall of water came down ten feet in height, taking bridges, outhouses and logs. It is feared several lives were lost, but nothing definite can be learned. In Wheeling the rainfall was 1.1 inches in 40 minutes.

Wreck on the West Shore.

ROCHESTER, May 11.—The Continental limited on the West Shore was wrecked early yesterday at the same place as occurred on the previous night the wreck of train No. 9, near Chili station. The limited had received notice to pass the place of the earlier wreck carefully, and was only running about ten miles an hour when three cars of the train left the tracks. The passengers were thrown from their berths and a panic ensued. Marvin Fields of Bellona, N. Y., received internal injuries and his back was sprained. William Edwards of Toronto had a shoulder dislocated. A few of the other passengers received minor injuries.

Clung to Log While Father Drowned

CORNING, N. Y., May 11.—George W. Mourhess, aged 80 years, was drowned in the Gang Mills pond three miles west of this place at midnight. Mourhess and his son were fishing, and the boat was caught between some piles and overturned. Neither could swim, and the son was obliged to see his father die without being able to help him. The son hung to a pile for two hours and was finally rescued in an exhausted condition.

Queer Railway Accident.

LUDWIGSHAVEN, Bavaria, May 11.—A curious accident occurred to the Strassburg express by which a woman was killed and several other persons were injured. Owing to the airbrakes failing to work the train dashed through the station wall, crossed a street 30 feet wide, plowed through a freight train on the harbor siding and went over an embankment into the harbor.

Government Has Narrow Escape.

LONDON, May 11.—In the house of commons last night the government had a narrow escape from defeat. The Scotch education estimates were being discussed, and a motion to reduce one of the votes was only defeated by a majority of 12.

Indians Threatened With Famine.

FLORENCE, A. T., May 11.—The Gila river on the Sacaton reservation has gone dry, and no grain will be harvested by the Indians. Great destitution will ensue, and government aid will be required to relieve the situation.

Negro Lynched For Small Offense.

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 11.—Henry Johnson, a negro, was lynched Thursday night for shooting at a young white man named Foraker. The latter was uninjured.

RIOTING IN DETROIT.

Ten Thousand Men and Boys Clash With Police.

STREET HARANGUES FORBIDDEN.

But the Officers Have a Hard Fight In Trying to Enforce the Rule. Many Persons Were Seriously Injured.

DETROIT, May 11.—Fully 10,000 men and boys ran riot in the main streets of this city for more than three hours, and a continual running fight with police, both mounted and on foot, made an exciting night in the heart of the city. The net result so far as known is 12 citizens and 5 policemen injured. The names of but two of the citizens are known at present. They are Mike Waldin and Louis Caplin. Both men had their heads crushed by being trampled on by horses ridden by the mounted police in a charge on the crowd.

The officers injured are: James Tuomey, scalp cut by a brick; Henry Scott, hit on head with cobblestone; Thomas Murphy, cheek cut open with a brick; George Moore, badly cut about head by brick and taken home in an ambulance; Barney Roonan, hit with a brick.

Director of the Police Frank T. Andrews, who recently superseded the old police board through the passage of the Ripper bill by the legislature, issued an order to the police to allow no one to stand about the wagon of one Tom Bawden, a local single tax exhorter, who had incurred the ill will of the police director by the extraordinary nature of his remarks on so called wealthy "tax dodgers."

When Bawden began his exhortation Thursday night, a crowd quickly gathered. Director Andrews supervised the work of the police in keeping the people moving. The crowd good naturedly hooted at the police, and no violence was done.

Last night, however, the temper of the crowd changed when it was announced that Director Andrews had called on the reserve officers to assist in keeping the Campus Martius clear. The single tax exhorter came with his wagon and found the campus jammed with people. The police refused to allow him to locate at any particular point, and he drove from one street to another, the crowd following. The mob frequently blocked traffic, and the police attempted to disperse it.

In a moment stones began to fly through the air, and a general mix up followed, in which the foot police used their clubs and the mounted men charged. The officers fired their guns in the air, and the mob returned to the fusillade with bricks and cobblestones. At one time when the mob had gathered about the central police station at Fort and Randolph streets bricks were thrown through the windows.

In a charge made by the mounted police at this point Waldin was knocked down, and three horses trampled over him, cutting his head so badly that he was taken to the Emergency hospital. Officer George Moore was hit with a stone in this charge, and his cheek was laid open. He was taken to his home in an ambulance. The other officers were not seriously hurt.

At one stage of the riot a section of hose was secured by order of the police director and the stream turned on the crowd, but the hose was cut, and the man who wielded the nozzle was driven into a saloon and pounded over the head with an iron cuspidor.

Mayor Maybury was down town watching the crowd and at one time made a speech to the people from the postoffice steps cautioning them to do no violence, but stated that he was not in sympathy with the order of Police Director Andrews denying free speech on the public street.

Shamrock II Still Disabled.

SOUTHAMPTON, May 11.—The broken gaff of the Shamrock II was sent ashore for repairs immediately after the accident Thursday, and every endeavor was put forth with a view to a resumption of the trials today, but Captain Sycamore late last night said it would be impossible to start before Monday. The telescoping topmast is already giving trouble. It was sent down for resetting, and now it is impossible to get it hoisted full up. Some gear must be cut adrift before it can be put right. A heavier gaff was ordered from the Dennys before the accident, but it has not yet arrived.

Burglars Use Chloroform.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y., May 11.—A burglar entered the house of William Reilly, chloroformed Reilly and his wife and ransacked the house. He secured a small amount of money and a few pieces of silverware. Later the house of James Cade was entered by a burglar, and Fanny Greenwood, whom the intruder attempted to chloroform, fought vigorously and attempted to hold the burglar until help arrived, but he escaped. The police have arrested a man who they believe to be the burglar.

Girls Stabbed In Moscow.

MOSCOW, May 11.—Many young girls, usually from 15 to 18 years of age, have been stabbed in the breasts by a redheaded man at night and in public places during the past fortnight. The latest victim to these attacks is the daughter of an official. The police are using extraordinary endeavors to apprehend the criminal, but so far without result. Nearly every redheaded man in the city is under surveillance.

Atkinson Wants Freer Trade.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Mr. Edward Atkinson of Boston made an argument before the industrial commission for what he called "freer trade." He said that not more than 5 per cent of the people of the country was benefited by a protective tariff, while the other 95 per cent of them "pay the bill."

They Want Dole Removed.

HONOLULU, via San Francisco, May 11.—The territorial legislature has passed a resolution containing a memorial to President McKinley to remove Governor Dole. He is charged with obstructing legislation.

Korea Cancels Contract.

LONDON, May 11.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Kobe, dated May 10, says that Korea has canceled the French loan of 5,000,000 yen and the contract to construct a railroad from Seoul to Wiju.

THE PRESIDENT'S TOUR.

Mr. McKinley Rides In a Flower Covered Carriage.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Cal., May 11.—The route of the president's train northward from Los Angeles lay through the Santa Clara valley, nestling under fog swathed mountains to the coast, where it ran for hours along the edge of cliffs overhanging the Pacific ocean. At every stopping place there was a flower show rivaling in beauty the floral parade which the president witnessed at Los Angeles. At Ventura and Santa Barbara the president was simply overwhelmed with flowers.

The carriages in which he rode were lined with flowers, and the streets over which he passed were paved with them. There was no abatement of the enthusiasm which has attended the president's progress since he entered California.

As he approaches his destination at San Francisco the programmes at the different stops are more enjoyable and less fatiguing. A drive through the city was in each case the principal feature at the places where he stopped yesterday. The president was very much interested in the old Spanish missions, filled with historic relics, which he visited both at Ventura and at Santa Barbara. San Luis Obispo was the last stop of the day.

An unusual incident occurred during the president's stay at Santa Barbara. The residence of the chief of the fire brigade caught fire. The fire chief, who was on the street awaiting the coming of the president, was informed that his house was in flames.

"Let it burn," he replied. "I will wait and see the president. I can build another house, but I may never have another opportunity to see the president of the United States." And he stoically remained while his house burned to the ground.

"I saw the president," he said when informed that his house was in ruins. "I saved the lot anyway."

CLOUDBURST NEAR PITTSBURG.

Railroad Tracks Awash and Parts of Them Carried Away.

PITTSBURG, May 11.—A heavy rain of one hour's duration caused considerable damage last night near Pittsburg. South of Pittsburg, at Carnegie, a cloudburst up Campbell's run sent a flood of water down that carried away bridges and fences and barns. The water was piled up a foot high over the Panhandle tracks at Carnegie. The flood subsided in three hours.

At Tarentum, 30 miles northeast of the city, the heavy rain flooded the creek, washed away 200 feet of the Western Pennsylvania tracks, carried off a county bridge and a mile of farm fencing. No lives were lost.

Nearly all the creeks and runs within 20 miles of Pittsburg became bank full, and cellars were flooded in several small towns.

Revolt In Santo Domingo.

SANTO DOMINGO, May 11.—The districts of Moca and La Vega are up in arms against the government. Congress has decreed the suspension of constitutional guarantees in the revolting districts. Several arrests have been made, and the government is taking active measures. The vice president of Santo Domingo, Horatio Vasquez, is at the head of the government troops operating against the rebels. General Lora has been killed, and General Bobea has been taken prisoner. The city of Santo Domingo is quiet.

Insurance Company In Trouble.

ALBANY, May 11.—Superintendent Francis Hendricks of the state insurance department has sent to District Attorney Philbin of New York county a letter inclosing a copy of the financial statement of the Manhattan Fire Insurance company of New York city, which the department has found to be of a fraudulent character. He requests the district attorney to begin criminal proceedings against the officers of the company who were responsible for the report.

The Right to Picket Denied.

CHICAGO, May 11.—In the branch appellate court a decision was handed down denying the right of striking workmen to "picket" a shop for the purpose of dissuading others from entering the works. The decision was given on an appeal from Judge Holdom's court in contempt proceedings brought against strikers who had violated an injunction prohibiting them from "picketing" during a strike two years ago.

Porto Rico Customs.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 11.—Porto Rican customs for the month of April show a decrease from the month of March. The receipts for the island in March were $87,758. In April they were $84,123. Exports in March amounted to $1,149,574. In April they were $979,702.

Three Drowned.

NORWICH, N. Y., May 11.—Edward Hall, aged 65; his daughter, Dora, 20, and George Sholes, 28, were drowned in the Chenango river south of Oxford last evening. Their boat capsized. The body of the girl has been found.

EXPOSITION HANDS STRIKE.

"Unfair" Lumber Assigned as the Reason.

BUFFALO, May 11.—Last evening 650 carpenters and joiners employed at the exposition grounds went on strike. Unless the men's demands are granted by the exposition company the walking delegates threaten to call out every man employed at the exposition grounds.

The men do not ask for higher wages. The trouble is over what the carpenters call "unfair" lumber, which, as interpreted by the union men, means material furnished by mills employing nonunion men. The present strike is the outgrowth of the recent strike of mill hands. Most of the mill owners settled with their men, but a few are still holding out. The exposition company had contracts with the latter firms, and some of their lumber was delivered at the exposition grounds yesterday afternoon. The union men were not asked to handle it, as the mill owners sent out their own carpenters, but they objected to it going into the buildings on which they were employed, and as soon as the nonunion men started to work last evening a general strike of the union carpenters was ordered.

The question is a perplexing one to the exposition officials, as they cannot dictate to an exhibitor what firm he is to buy his lumber from. When seen, Director of Works Carlton was noncommunicative and would not say what the officials intended to do about the matter.

Unfavorable weather throughout yesterday kept down the attendance. The only part of the exposition where workmen will be employed after the 20th will be in the section assigned to the various states.

A KNOTTY PROBLEM.

Court Says Indemnity Must Be Paid by Customs.

PEKING, May 11.—The court has informed Li Hung Chang that the indemnities to be paid to the powers must be met out of the customs revenue and that the collection of money in any other way will not be permitted.

In answer to this Li Hung Chang replied that the amount of the indemnity demanded was immense and that the customs receipts would not be sufficient to pay it. For that reason it was indispensable that revenue should be raised from other sources.

Chang Chih Tung, the viceroy of Wuchang, who is always ready to question the motives and methods of Li Hung Chang, has memorialized the throne, asking that Li be ordered to consult with the ministers. Chang argues that Li can secure a reduction in the amount of the indemnity. The court fails to appreciate the foreign demand or Li Hung Chang's endeavor to comply with it.

The Americans have evacuated the districts under their control, with the exception of the Forbidden City, which they will continue to occupy in spite of foreign objections unless orders to the contrary are received from Washington.

Mail Under Turkish Escort.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 11.—The European mail bags arrived here yesterday by the special Austrian train and were received at the railroad station by the directors of the foreign postoffices. Escorted by Turkish policemen, the mail bags were conveyed to the Austrian, British and French embassies. The embassadors of the foreign powers in Constantinople recently sent notes to the porte characterizing the seizure by the Ottoman postal authorities of foreign mail bags as a breach of international law and holding the porte responsible for the consequences. In reply to the protest the porte maintained the right of the Ottoman postoffice to receive and distribute foreign mails.

Lord Hopetoun to the Parliament.

MELBOURNE, May 11.—Lord Hopetoun, the governor general, in a speech on the Australian commonwealth delivered in parliament, the senate and house of representatives attending, said that among other things to be considered was the constituting of a high appellate court with federal jurisdiction, the creation of an interstate commission to regulate affairs between the states, the restriction of Asiatic immigration and the importation of labor from the south sea islands and the arbitration of industrial disputes concerning the tariff. Lord Hopetoun said that any policy tending to destroy industries and the established state tariffs was inadmissible.

Count Boni Very Ill.

PARIS, May 11.—Count Boni de Castellane has been suffering from intestinal trouble for the past week. Although his condition is not regarded as serious, he has been ordered to take complete rest, and his social engagements have been postponed. His case is now diagnosed as the commencement of appendicitis, but he is not thought to be in danger. Inquiry at his home in the Avenue du Bois-de-Boulogne elicited the information that his condition was improved.

A Notable Man Dead.

CUMBERLAND, Md., May 11.—Otis Parker Jewett, Sr., aged 96 years, is dead at Barrelville, near Cumberland. He retired from business in New York city some years ago and came here, where he acquired extensive coal holdings. Mr. Jewett was interested in the first transatlantic steamship line and the first Atlantic cable. Upon one occasion he is said to have lost $400,000 in one day while operating in the Stock Exchange.

More Lackawanna Men Out.

BUFFALO, May 11.—All the roundhouse and asphalt men of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad have been called out on strike, and the local shops are now practically tied up. About 80 men joined the strikers yesterday, making a total of about 400 men now out. The engineers who were asked to make repairs on engines refused to make them.

CALM AFTER STORM.

Stock Market Rallies Quickly After the Panic.

A STRONG TONE AND HIGHER PRICES

The Wild Convulsion Which Swept Away Many Fortunes Seems to Have Left No Lasting Trace.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Like sunshine after a storm, better conditions prevailed in the stock market yesterday, and men who survived Thursday's panic and had money left picked up many bargains. There was plenty of excitement in Wall street, but the frenzied scenes of the preceding day were lacking, and a booming market gave heart to the bulls who had nearly been swallowed up in the great slump.

All day the general tone of the market was strong, and confidence returned. Profit taking by those who got in at rock bottom prices caused the market to sell off a little at times, but the general tendency was toward a higher level, and closing prices in many issues were far above the previous day's close.

Aggressive strength was developed by Burlington, it advancing 12½ points over last night, and the market rallied at the close, some stocks, including Union Pacific, recovering to the highest. Active buying marked the end of the day's trading, and despite a feverish tendency the market was generally firm. The Stock Exchange will be closed today to give the tired brokers and their clerks time to straighten out their business. The total transactions in stocks during the day amounted to 1,984,000 shares.

There was no vestige of panic in the Wall street district. The extraordinary convulsion which swept fortunes away in a twinkling and sent prices tottering has evidently left no lasting mark in the financial world. Individual sufferers are plentiful, but the stock market generally is very near to the basis upon which it was before the Northern Pacific catastrophe.

Not a Stock Exchange house has suspended as a result of the panicky fluctuations and wild rush to sell 24 hours ago. One failure was announced on the Consolidated Exchange, but its effect was nil, and confidence was evident everywhere.

After the close of the Stock Exchange reports were current that Jacob H. Schiff had admitted that the control of the Northern Pacific road rested with J. P. Morgan & Co. Mr. Schiff's attention was called to this report, and he characterized it as false. Another member of the Harriman syndicate made this statement:

"We believe now, as we did Thursday, that we control the Northern Pacific road. Nothing has happened overnight or during the day to change our opinion. As for the Burlington deal, concerning which there has been so much adverse criticism, we believe it will go through without a further hitch."

Lawson Made a Fortune.

BOSTON, May 11.—Thomas W. Lawson is credited with having won from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 through the slump of Thursday. He has been selling short on certain lines for the last two months, awaiting the opportunity which he freely predicted was bound to come within a brief time. It is said that he warned his friends of the impending disaster on several occasions and quietly prepared himself for the fray.

Made a Fortune.

READING, Pa., May 11.—Daniel B. Shepp, one of the proprietors of the Globe Bible Publishing house, Philadelphia, yesterday called up his brother-in-law in this city by long distance telephone and said: "Tell my father that I've made $400,500. I watched my chance and sold Northern Pacific at 1,000."

A Farmer's Winnings.

DANBURY, Conn., May 11.—Chauncey Beers, a farmer, of Roxbury, has held some Northern Pacific stock for some time. He came to town and discovered that it had jumped to a high figure. He sold it and cleared $20,000.

Big Company In Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, May 11.—The Union Depot, Bridge and Terminal Railroad company of Kansas city, with a capital stock of $8,000,000, has been chartered at Jefferson City. This is the company of which Theodore C. Bates of Boston is the head and which has plans to construct a north end union depot, to build a three deck bridge on the piers of the old Winner bridge and to build and operate terminals on this side of the river and also in Clay county, across the river from Kansas City.

Explosion Kills Four.

ALTOONA, Pa., May 11.—While a locomotive on the Huntington and Broad Top railway was hauling a freight train into Mount Dallas yesterday morning the boiler blew up, killing four of the train's crew. The dead are: A. S. Bergstresser, engineer; D. S. Edward, fireman; P. A. Hollinshead, conductor, and R. C. Ritchey, brakeman. The bodies of all four were hurled some distance, and the locomotive was literally blown to bits. The cause of the accident is being investigated.

Manchester's Debts.

LONDON, May 11.—The Duke of Manchester's affairs were again aired in the bankruptcy court, when the accounts lodged disclosed a total indebtedness of £37,794 and assets of £7,545. The liabilities include £5,000 in connection with theatrical speculation and £6,000 for the promotion of a company.

Striking Plasterers Win.

CLEVELAND, May 11.—The strike of union plasterers inaugurated here a few days since has practically ended in a victory for the men. They demanded $3.50 instead of $3 per day. All but four contractors have conceded the demands, and these are expected to sign the new scale today.

Winter Wheat Acreage.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Returns to the statistician of the department of agriculture made up to May 1 show the area under winter wheat in cultivation on that date to have been about 28,267,000 acres.

Lake Steamer Burned.

HOUGHTON, Mich., May 11.—The steamer Bon Voyage was burned on Lake Superior. Five women were drowned. The rest of the passengers and crew escaped.

Doing The Right Thing.

Hunterdon county has finally deserted its backward policy and has made its first appropriation for "good roads." While other counties all through the State have been building many miles of fine macadam and telford roads, Hunterdon county has refused to take advantage of any of the road acts which the Legislature has passed and has continued to allow its people to plough through the mud and mire on stormy days or nearly smother with dust during the dry spells.

It has seemed remarkable that such a state of affairs should exist in any locality in New Jersey. Of late, the newspapers of Hunterdon county have raised their voices in behalf of the policy of "good roads." Their united efforts have caused the people to bestir themselves and action by the Board of Freeholders of that county is the result.

At the meeting of the Freeholders last Wednesday, the appropriations were fixed and included $20 000 for stone roads. While this is only a little step and will result in the building of but few miles of good roads, it is a progressive act and the thinking people of that county are rejoicing. As soon as the good folk of Hunterdon see what direct benefits they derive from good roads, there will be much pressure brought to bear on the Freeholders that the coming years will be a great increase in the size of the appropriation for that object.

It was a great mistake on the part of the Common Council when the time for the beginning of street sprinkling by the street railway company was placed at May 15. It should have started April 1. During the dry days for the last month the passage of each trolley car has been the occasion for a perfect whirlwind of dust. The residents along the line of the trolley have suffered the worst while pedestrians who have to be in the neighborhoood have received occasional dust snowers that have been sufficiently impressive. Everyone will be thankful when May 15 comes around and these dust showers cease.

The members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Middlesex county have brought down a storm of criticism about their heads because of their action in seating the member of the board from Dunellen borough and refusing to seat the member from Metuchen. The counsel of the board declared that both men were not eligible to membership in the board, as neither place was entitled to separate representation, lacking the required population, 3,000, which is prescribed by law. The case is now to be carried to the courts.

When the grand council of the Royal Arcanum was recently in session at Trenton, the choice of the meeting place for next year came up. An attempt was made to secure the selection of Newark, but it was defeated on the ground that Newark possessed insufficient hotel accommodations and that its water supply was impure. It is rather hard on Newark to have its defects so publicly advertised, but there is no doubt about the truth of both statements.

Reports are again gaining circulation that another strike is likely on the Jersey Central Railroad. The reports of the trouble between officials and employes are greatly exaggerated. Any trouble that may exist is likely to be settled in amicable fashion. Previous to the last strike agitation on the Jersey Central, The Daily Press gave the statement of one who knew that all trouble would be settled without any strike. And that statement came true.

A communication is published in today's Daily Press from William A. Childs, a member of the publicity committee of the Christian Science church. It gaves a statement of the circumstances of the Ellis case from the point of view of the Christian Scientists. It is the first public statement made by them and will consequently be read with much interest by those who kept in touch with the happenings at Fanwood and Cranford.

The New Jersey Chapter of the American Institute of Architects has notified the Union County Board of Freeholders that certain portions of the conditions of competition for the new courthouse plans do not conform in all particulars with the code of the Institute. As it is likely that no architects will compete in violation of their code, the board will probably so alter the conditions as to make them conform with the code.

Elaborate plans are being made for the firemen's parade at Bayonne next Wednesday. The Exempt Firemen's Association, of this city, together with Warren Engine Company, of the borough, has arranged to make a particularly fine showing. The silver hose carriage, which is to accompany the Exempts, will be one of the finest in line.

A significant thing is that the authorities of the borough do not care to have the light and power wires of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company placed underground on Somerset street There is a committee investigating the feasability of a municipal water and electric light plant.

The vote in the Hunterdon County Board of Freeholders, which gave the first appropriation for stone roads ever made in that county, stood eleven to seven. The names of those eleven should be inscribed on a roll of honor.

Case Adjourned In City Court.

On request of the defendant's counsel, the case of the city against Jamee Brown for illegal liquor selling, which was to have been tried in the city court this morning, was adjourned. City Judge Runyon instructed Brown's lawyer, W K. McClure, to arrange a day for the trial, as soon as possible. The defendant was released on his own recognizance.

LETTER IN DEFENCE OF CHRISTIAN SIENCE

The day after Mrs. See went home, a Christian Scientist from New York responded, April 16, to the pleadings of Mr. Ellis by telephone, oft repeated, that some one come to care for Mrs. Ellis. This visitor could remain only an hour, however, but repeated the visit the next day and again the third day, on which last day a Christian Scientist from Cranford, a former neighbor, came and remained continuously for two days, sustaining Mrs. Ellis, administering the medicines to the children, preparing their nourishment, etc. Both these persons were graciously received by the family physician, who expressed the hope to the first that he could be of some help to them; and, as a matter of fact, yielding to the importunity of Mrs. Ellis, he did attempt for a brief season to treat one of the children, but it was under conditions known in Christian Science to be most unfavorable and rarely attended with success.

Finally, at the urgent solicitation of Mr. Ellis and with the emphatic approval of three physicians, which included the Board of Health, and to the intense relief of everyone, on April 23, still another Christian Scientist came, Mrs. E. Hope Norton, of New York, a lady of four score years, an angel, fearless alike of storm and contagion, came and stood in the pouring rain, while discussing arrangements with Mr. Ellis from an open window and came again the following day, waiting about for hours, until they could make ready and carry out the one remaining child untouched by that dreaded disease, dreaded by all but the Christian Scientist who knows that it is not of God, and who does not dread that which is not of Him; came and rescued that child from further exposure and took it to her home and carried its mother there also. And how has the press from ocean to ocean chosen to construe the acts of these afflicted parents and of the four Christian Scientists who in turn attempted to aid in ministering to the needs of that stricken household?

Let a few quotations from "headlines" indicate this: "War on Christian Science aroused by diphtheria epidemic." "Board of Health drove the last band of healers out of town." "Telephones busy warning Cranford people of the approach of Christian Science fugitives." "Volunteer detectives and armed citizens stand guard day and night to prevent secret visits of Christian Scientists." "Members of the See family deliberately entered the strickened home." "Community aroused to a high pitch." "Christian Scientist loses her daughter." "Science mother loses another child." "Christian Science fails again." "Notwithstanding that diphtheria has caused the death of two of her children, Mrs. Ellis' faith in Christian Science has not faltered." "Scientists break through the barriers about diphtheria infected house and bring mother and boy to New York."

William A. Childs.

It Saved His Leg.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c. Sold by L. W. Randolph.

Complainant Didn't Appear.

Although several times ordered to do so by the police, Simon Spriggs, of West Third street, failed to make his appearance in the city court this morning and substantiate the charge he made that Lucy Thompson, a neighbor, had thrown a pail of water over his son. Mrs. Thompson was present, but as Spriggs did not deem it necessary to obey the police, City Judge Runyon dismissed the complaint.

CHAPTER XVI.

Major Goddard's most intimate friend in New York was Father Surtees, a priest, who lived in a comfortable home in Madison avenue. Goddard liked him for his liberal views on all religious subjects, and for his exemplary life. They had been chums at Harvard, belonged to the same regiment, in which Father Surtees was chaplain, and frequently met in their club. They had made a tour of Europe together, had slept in the same bed; in short, were ideal friends.

The afternoon following the incident recorded in the foregoing chapter Goddard went to visit this priest. The afternoon was as cloudy as the preceding day had been, and Father Surtees' study was lighted by a green-shaded lamp on his big writing table, which was strewn with manuscripts and notes for a book he was writing.

"I hope I am not interrupting," said the major, as he was shown in.

"You can't interrupt me, old man," said Father Surtees, emphasizing the first word of his greeting as he warmly pressed Goddard's hand. "I am always ready and waiting for you. But —" as the major sat down before the glowing grate fire and his features stood out in relief in the light of the lamp—"you really do not look well, old man."

Goddard smiled and motioned to a chair. His smile was a very artificial affair, his gesture mechanical.

"Sit down," he said, "before I lose my courage."

Father Surtees complied, wonderingly.

"You have been a profound mystery to me for the last month, Rowland. Would you believe I was joking if I were to tell you I have lost sleep worrying over you lately? When I close my eyes at night I often see your face and its awful gloom and mystery drives my rest away. I am glad you came. I was going to look you up if you hadn't."

"Do you remember how I laughed once," said the major, "at the idea some fellow at the club advanced that there could really be such a thing as an unpardonable sin?"

"I think I agreed with you," said the priest, stroking his round, beardless face, while his gray eyes gleamed in the light of the fire.

The major drew a deep breath. It was like the sigh of a dying man.

"Would you mind lowering that lamp?" he said.

"Certainly not." And rather Surtees leaned back in his rocking chair and turned down the light.

"I like it this way myself," he said. "One can think better in a subdued light like this from the grate."

"I am not a member of your church," began Goddard; "but if I were to make a special request would you allow me to make a confession to you—to unburden a conscience that is tottering on the verge of spiritual despair?"

"You know I should listen to anything you said, dear friend, as I would to the trouble of a brother."

Goddard drew himself up in his chair.

"I am hungering for something else," said he. "I have heard that a confession made in due form under the rules of your church really does help men maddened by the consequences of—of their crimes. I want that aid—whatever it is. I want it if you can by any hook or crook get it for me."

"If you have done wrong, God will pardon it," answered the priest, bending forward and sympathetically looking into the face of his visitor. "The pardon of God is the most beautiful law of the universe. You can get it. You have it now, for I see that you have already repented as deeply as man can."

Goddard laughed harshly.

"Wait until I tell you my story," he said.

"I am ready to hear it."

"I dislike to begin it, because I know that you will never look at me in the old way again," said the major; "but to know that I have confided my agony to some one will help a little."

"Nothing you have done could make me feel differently towards you, my old friend, so go ahead. I feel that God will let me help you. I think I have helped every soul that has ever confessed to me."

Then in a low, uneven voice Goddard told the story of his first love for his ward, his intention of making her his wife.

"Ah, I remember that well!" put in Father Surtees. "I remember when you first came to me in your boyish enthusiasm and told me about her. Then you remember, when you introduced me to her, how her rare beauty, her wonderful personality swept me off my feet in admiration. Why, old man, I felt like shouting for joy when you told me she was to be your wife."

"Then I met the other," said Goddard.

"Ah, yes, you met the other!" The eyes of the priest were fixed on the rug at his feet. And as the major began the second part of his recital, and plunged into the details of Jeanne's plot, Father Surtees' face seemed to turn to bronze in the fitful gleams of the burning coals. He sat listening with clenched hands, his fine features almost awry from the mental strain upon him.

"Merciful God!" he exclaimed.

"I knew you would be quite unprepared for my disclosure," said Goddard. "You see, even your church can't undertake to palliate such stupendous offenses against human law and order."

"And you say you now love Blanche?" said the priest.

"As I never dreamt I could love—it has been a revelation of all the forces of tenderness which lay dormant in me. There is but one solution I can make of it, and that is that God has visited this love upon me as the only adequate punishment for my crime. I tell you there is a hell. I am in it. I had rather undergo the physical pangs of an eternity in burning flames than to bear this a month longer."

Father Surtees clasped his quivering hands between his knees.

"God have mercy on you," he said. "Poor, poor Blanche! I have never seen a creature nearer to God, my friend."

For about five minutes nothing more was said. Then Goddard broke the stillness.

"I have thought of suicide," he said.

"That could not possibly help you or her," declared the priest.

"I am withheld even from that cowardly act because the shock would kill her. Don't you see how I am buffeted about by the consequences of my crime?"

"I see I see. And for the same reason you cannot tell her that she is not your wife."

"No, that would kill her. Dr. Fleming said she would not be able to bear the slightest shock or excitement."

"When did you see him?"

"I have not seen him since he examined Blanche."

"How did you find out that Blanche has this—this terrible disease?"

"I have just told you that Jeanne told me that Dr. Fleming had confided it to her. He enjoined it on her to keep it even from me, and by all means from Blanche."

"Ah!" Father Surtees' brows were knitted together. As he uttered that exclamation he rose and began to walk back and forth across the room. Suddenly he turned and stood over Goddard.

"Do you think she could have induced you to take a hand in this plot if you had believed Blanche to be perfectly sound, physically?"

"Certainly not; it is because she has such a short life, and—"

Father Surtees laid his hand on the major's shoulder.

"Then," he said, "your wife must have known that it would require most extraordinary pressure to induce you to enter into her scheme, and—and has it never occurred to you that her story may be a deliberate lie out of whole cloth?"

The major could hardly formulate an answer. His eyes were wide open, and his face was like a death mask.

"Blanche," he began, presently, "is taking Dr. Fleming's medicines. I have seen that."

"Medicines," said the priest, "are often given for slight ailments. That fact ought not to substantiate the statement of your wife—that fiend incarnate—especially when it looks as if she could have gained her purpose by misleading you."

Maj. Goddard groaned. As he bowed there beneath the earnest look of his friend he seemed a wreck of past manliness.

"What can I do? Is there anything?"

"There is but one thing right now," answered Father Surtees. "You ought to go at once to see this Dr. Fleming. I see by the papers that he arrived yesterday, and is at the Sherman house."

There was a startled stare in the eyes of the major as he rose.

"Come with me," he said, huskily; "come with me."

"I should like to. I am very impatient, Rowland, to know the truth on that point. Much depends on it; very much."

PRETTY ACCESSORIES.

Many Adjustable Additions to the Present Costume.

To add attractiveness to a dark or dull tinted costume a corselet or belt of a bright color may be worn, with a cravat to match and a touch of the same color in the hat. Another method is to have adjustable revers of striped or checked taffeta or of satin with black or colored velvet ribbon bands, these revers to be tacked on over the plain ones belonging to the bodice.

Today's illustration shows a young girl's gown of pearl gray voile. The skirt is edged with a cording of mandarin silk and opens at the left side over a panel of white guipure. Lacings of mandarin ribbon with gold tips pass across the upper part of the opening. The plaited bodice has a yoke of guipure, a line of mandarin ribbon passing under the plaits and tying in a bow in front. The plain sleeves have mandarin cordings at the wrist and a frill of guipure. The collar is of guipure, the soft belt of mandarin silk. The hat is of pearl gray silk and is trimmed with mauve clematis with foliage, and has a mandarin bow under the brim. JUDIC CHOLLET.

YOUNG GIRL'S GOWN.

THE SACK.

It Is Now Worn In Many Varieties of Style.

The loose sack has at last made its way into favor and is accepted as an established fact. For several years vain attempts were made to revive it, and only by gradual means has this been accomplished. Now it is a favorite wrap for traveling and ordinary rough usage, although its best purposes are served when it is employed for children, who appear to better advantage and are more comfortable in loose coats than in tight jackets.

All these sacks are not plain. There are many degrees of elegance shown, and occasionally this form is employed for exceedingly rich evening wraps. Simple sacks are more general, however, although the one illustrated is a typical model of the more pretentious variety. It is of beige cloth and is stitched at the edges and seams. It has a bolero of taffeta of the same shade heavily embroidered in an open design, with a turned down collar and short sleeves. The long cloth sleeves of the sack are loose and are gathered in at the wrist to form a frill. Straps of velvet with steel buttons close the bolero. The hat of silk is draped with tulle and trimmed with primroses and a black velvet bow with a steel buckle. JUDIC CHOLLET.

NEW SACK.

Didn't Work.

Swindler—Madam, I have called for the suit of clothes which needs brushing and pressing.

Lady of the House—What suit?

"Your husband's Sunday suit, ma'am. He called at the shop as he went down this morning."

"And he said I was to let you have them?"

"Yes'm."

"Did he appear in good health and spirits?"

"Why, certainly."

"Look and act naturally?"

"Of course. Why?"

"Because he has been dead 18 years, and I have some curiosity on the subject."

"I—I have made a mistake, perhaps!"

"Perhaps you have. The man you saw go out of here an hour ago is my brother. Good morning."—N. Y. World.

Already Cooked.

The city boy in the country also has "experiences." A little lad, by spending the summer on a farm, learned many things.

It was a new experience for the little fellow, and everything was delightfully unfamiliar. He found out for the first time that hens made eggs, and this knowledge filled him with a desire to see one of them at work.

Being a patient waiter, the lad finally had his wish gratified, and exultingly seizing the product of the cackling fowl, he marched into the house with his prize.

"Let me have it," said the farmer's wife, "and I'll cook it for your dinner."

"Oh, I guess the hen cooked it, all right," said Master Carl. "It's warm."—Portland Argus.

An Insect with a Spring-Board Nose.

Among the curious insects of the Malay peninsula recently studied by Mr. Nelson Annandale, of the London Zoological society, is one called the lantern fly, which is remarkable for its sudden leaps, made without the aid of its wings. It was only after he had carried a specimen back to London and carefully examined it that Mr. Annandale discovered that a curious projection on the front of its head, a kind of nose with a crease in it, was the leaping organ. When bent back under the abdomen and suddenly released it sent the insect flying.—Youth's Companion.

Skulls as Personal Effects.

A missionary returning to Basle from Patagonia brought with him a collection of ancient Patagonian skulls. The custom house officers at Les Verres opened the chest, inspected the contents and informed the owner that the consignment must be classed as animal bones and taxed at so much a pound. The missionary was indignant, and eventually the officers agreed to reconsider the question. When the waybill had been revised it appeared in the following form: "Chest of native skulls. Personal effects already worn."—London Chronicle.

Jumping Fly.

A curious lantern fly, discovered by naturalists in the Malay archipelago, possesses the power of jumping a distance of several feet without opening its wings. It has a projection on its head which, when bent back and suddenly released, throws the insect into the air. This fly was seen to jump from the ground to the roof of a hut.—Science.

The Magnet.

"Look here, Dunwell, how do you manage to bring out all your apartment house debtors? When I ring the bell no one shows up."

"It's dead easy! I go down disguised as a health food sample distributer. In two minutes every occupant of the house is in the hall."—Chicago Daily News.

A Bad Sign.

Clara—I am afraid that Charley Stretcher isn't going to make a good husband for Sadie.

Maud—Why not?

"She tells me that when they came back from their wedding trip he had some money left."—Puck.

A Serious Oversight.

Dooley—What's the matter wid ye anyhow, Mick—all tattered an' scratched all over?

Mick—Ay, an' me own dog done it! I went home sober last noight, an' the baste didn't know me!—Punch.

To Prepare for Trouble.

After all there appears to be only one way in which to prepare for trouble, and that is to save your money.—Atchison Globe.

A Stage Fright.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Legitimate Business Unaffected by Wall Street Panic.

NEW YORK, May 11.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

A panic in Wall street does not mean that legitimate business has suddenly ceased to prosper, nor is the condition of mercantile trade and manufacture adversely affected by a violent fall in prices of securities. Throughout the entire country fundamental conditions were never as sound as at the present time, reports from nearly every city this week showing an exceptional volume of transactions and payments promptly met.

Production is not overtaking demand at the finished steel mills, and all Pittsburg plants are two months behind orders, while 90 days is the limit at many.

Although the total number of furnaces in blast on May 1 was 40 smaller than on Feb. 1, 1900, The Iron Age estimates the weekly capacity at 301,125 tons, which exceeds all previous high water marks. The activity of steel manufacturing is emphasized by the decrease of 34,279 tons in furnace stocks during April despite the unparalleled production.

Less sensational events transpired in the cereal markets than in the preceding week, although quotations are slow to recede. Corn eased off a few cents, but is still about 10 cents a bushel, or nearly 25 per cent above the quotation at the corresponding date in the two preceding years. Foreign purchasers have been driven out of the domestic markets by the high quotations, and Atlantic exports for the week were only 1,211,244 bushels compared with 3,709,880 a year ago. Prospects for the current crop are bright according to correspondents.

Recovery in the price of cotton was only temporary, and heavy liquidation of options was accompanied by a fall in spot middling uplands to the lowest figure recorded this year. The situation is similar regarding wool and woolens. Raw material is abundant and a large clip probable, while manufacturers have only a light demand for goods.

Failures for the week numbered 187 in the United States against 192 last year and 26 in Canada against 15 last year.

The Iola Rioters Under Bonds.

IOLA, Kan., May 11.—The four men arrested for rioting Wednesday night when Italian workmen were forcibly removed from their bunks and conducted to the station and sent away have given bond, and the preliminary trials have been set for May 18. No further violence has occurred, and the cement plant is running without interference. The news that the Italian consul at Kansas City would take a hand in the affair has made no impression here, people considering it simply a matter of form. The Italians were offered protection by the sheriff and county attorney if they would return to work, but they declined and so were furnished transportation out of town.

Killed by a Live Wire.

LANCASTER, Pa., May 11.—Roland Newbold, aged 13 years, was stricken by death last evening while playing a merry game of hide and seek with a number of young companions. The boy had climbed a pole to hide himself, and when about 20 feet above the ground he slipped and to save himself from falling grasped a wire. It was a heavily charged feed wire of the Electric Street Railway company. Unable to let go, the boy hung in midair, with over 6,000 volts of electricity playing through his body, until a man climbed the pole and carried the insensible form to the ground. He was pronounced dead a few minutes later.

Moving Up Day at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, May 11.—Moving up day is being celebrated at Syracuse university, and all classes are excused. In celebration of the event the freshmen worked all the previous night decorating the campus. A lumber wagon was placed on the roof of the gymnasium building. Mowing machines, ice water tanks, popcorn stands and other objects are strewn about the campus. After a celebration in chapel, which included speeches, singing, etc., the freshmen held a novel parade, in which members of the faculty and prominent college men were caricatured.

Lawyer's Charges Sustained.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—The jury in the suit of Theodore Cuyler Patterson, a prominent lawyer and horseman, against H. Mason Clapp, a wealthy member of the Union League, to procure payment of a $2,500 fee rendered a verdict in favor of the complainant. In his bill Mr. Patterson charged Mr. Clapp $1,000 for twice preventing the latter's wife from leaving him, $1,000 for preventing contemplated lunacy proceedings against Mr. Clapp and $500 for dissuading Mr. Clapp from contesting his mother's will.

Ecuador Suspends Obnoxious Decree.

LIMA, Peru, May 11.—A reliable Peruvian minister says that he has received a cable message from Quito which says that the government of Ecuador, desirous of maintaining cordial relations with Peru, has acceded to the observations of the Peruvian envoy and suspended the obnoxious decree by which were created the frontier departments of Napo and Zamora.

Found Drowned.

SPORTING.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Hope chapel and the Clinton avenue teams will play a game of baseball this afternoon on the Plainfield avenue grounds.

The baseball game between the North Plainfield and the Plainfield High School teams, next Wednesday, will be played on the Hope chapel team's grounds on Plainfield avenue.

The North Plainfield Juniors would like to arrange games with teams whose members are 14 years of age and under. All applications should be addressed to William Perrin, 87 Grandview avenue.

An interesting game of baseball was played Thursday afternoon between the American Eagles and the Excelsiors, both of the borough. The game was played on the Somerset street grounds. The Excelsiors won by the score of 18 to 17 Edward Coley and James Downey formed the battery for the Eagles, while Arthur VanArsdale and Wm. Nischwitz were the battery for the victorious team. During the latter part of the game VanArsdale was hit with a ball and Arthur Clark took his place.

The make-up of the Hope Chapel team in the game with the Clinton Avenue nine, this afternoon, will be considerably changed. Roseberry will be brought in from centre field and put behind the bat. Cose will be put on first base instead of Evans, the regular man, and several others will be changed in positions.

GOLF.

There will be the regular weekly play, if the weather permits, for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course this afternoon.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Harry Keen, of West Fourth street, and Wm. Baker, of Watchung avenue, are riding new wheels.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Lance, of Somerset street, is improved from a recent illness.

Silas Codington, of Grove street, is detained at his home by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hibbard, of the Hotel Imperial, have returned from a visit to Philadelphia.

Rev. J. F. Carter has returned from Richmond, Va., and is stopping with Rev. Scott Wallace, of East Third street.

Edward Nelson, of West Front street, leaves May 29 for Europe. He goes on business for the Watchung Silk Company, of which he is an employe.

—The Union Bible class taught by Rev. D. M. Stearns will meet Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

—Skin affections will readily disappear by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Look out for counterfeits. If you get DeWitt's you get good results. It is the quick and positive cure for piles. L. W. Randolph.

A BIG BILL

won't stare you in the face if you use Hygeia Ice. It will last longer than the natural ice. You will have no doctor bill on account of germs from ice, for Hygeia Ice is made from artesian well water, filtered to make it doubly pure. Take this matter into consideration and order our wagon to stop at your door. Pure ice costs no more than the unhealthy.

BRIEF ITEMS OF INTEREST TO EVERY DAILY PRESS READER.

Some Of the Doings In City and Borough Told In Concise and Pertinent Paragraphs.

—The carpenters and joiners will hold a special meeting tonight. See notice in advertisement columns today.

—Rev. E. E. Jackson, of the Mt Olive Baptist church, will preach concerning the Jacksonville fire tomorrow evening.

—The teachers of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet this evening at the home of Mrs. Frank Vail, of Putnam avenue, for the study of the lesson. Rev. G. M. Shott, of Scotch Plains, will teach the lesson.

—"I have been suffering from Dyspepsia for the past twenty years and have been unable after trying all preparations and physicians to get any relief. After taking one bottle of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure I found relief and am now in better health than I have been for twenty years. I cannot praise Kodol Dyspepsia Cure too highly," thus writes Mrs. C. W. Roberts, North Creek, Ark. L. W. Randolph.

Jews in the Roumanian Army.

No Jewish soldier in the Roumanian army can be promoted to a commission, however brave and loyal he may be. The saying is that as long as he is with the flag he is a soldier. When he ceases to be, he becomes a Jew again. Even if he enlists for a second term of service, he does not, like others who do so, earn a pension thereby. An army surgeon, if he be a Jew, and the best surgeons in Roumania are Jews as a rule, only ranks as a common soldier, whereas his professional inferiors rank as officers. No Jews are admitted into the military schools, and, however high the scholastic or university distinctions and grades of a Jew, he has to serve as a "ranker" for three years, instead of being let off as a "volontaire" with one year's service. Such is the treatment accorded to the 30,000 Jews belonging to the active army and reserves of the Roumanian state.—National Review.

Singular Plurals.

Having settled the plural of rhinoceros as rhinocerates, we are plied for further information as to the plural of other recondite nouns. "Albatross," for example. So solitary a bird scarcely needs an answer. The plural of "blouse" can scarcely be passed as "blice," though the analogy of the mouse is in its favor. And what of the tailor's "goose," which bothers one of our correspondents? We can only suggest the expedient of the tailor who was ordering a couple of these instruments from the manufacturer. "Please send me," he wrote, "two tailor's—;" then came the difficulty, "geese" or "gooses?" He tried back. "Please send me a tailor's goose." Then, as an afterthought, in a postscript, he wrote: "Please send two."—London Chronicle.

Remains of Spanish Invaders.

While prospecting for quicksilver in the Chico mountains, near the Rio Grande, 70 miles south of Alpine, Tex., a party of Americans discovered a large cave in which were the skeletons of 26 men, lying side by side. On exploring the cave further they found several copper kettles, two Spanish hatchets, three short swords with Spanish inscriptions, some stone utensils and crude mining tools. Deeply cut in one of the stone jars was the name "Narvaez," and below it the figures "1526." In 1528 a Spanish expedition under the explorer Navaez left Tampa bay, Florida, and was never seen again.—Chicago Chronicle.

DR. COOLEY'S PRIVATE BATHS.

TURKISH, RUSSIAN AND ROMAN BATHS ARE GIVEN.

His Sanitarium on Somerset Street is Fitted Out to Equal Any Baths in The State.

Among the luxuries of this life, which are rapidly becoming necessities, are the Turkish, Roman and Russian baths. Those who have enjoyed these baths need not be told of the exhilaration and pleasure afforded by them, but to the uninitiated they have only to take a short trip to Dr. J. H. Cooley's sanitarium, near the end of the Somerset street trolley line, to be able to enjoy these baths, where the appointments are equal to any to be found in New York.

Dr. Cooley has, after many months of work, succeeded in fitting up one of the finest baths in the State, and that his efforts are appreciated is amply attested by the liberal patronage accorded. Many persons who have heretofore gone to New York are now visiting this place, where entire satisfaction is given.

Besides the Turkish, Russian and Roman baths there are given alcohol and salt rubs, the needle bath and cold plunge. The pool holds 5,000 gallons of pure artesian water and is delightfully refreshing for bathers.

Thomas Rayner, who has had an experience of eighteen years, is in charge of the baths. He thoroughly understands his profession, giving the most exacting and careful attention to patrons. The various rooms are all fitted up in white tiling and are scrupulously clean. The proper temperature is maintained in every room, thus making it impossible to contract cold. There is every convenience provided for the full enjoyment of the baths. The furnishings are perfect. From the time the bather enters the warm room, with a temperature of 140 degres, and as he goes through the massage and steam rooms to the cooling rooms, the experience is one of continued pleasure. The bather feels mentally and physically refreshed, and altogether like a new person. During the hours for women there is an experienced woman in charge, who gives the same attention and care that is given to men.

Dr. Cooley, at great expense, has established this place so that people in Plainfield and vicinity may fully enjoy such baths, which he is now fully prepared to give. To increase the water supply an immense reservoir is being built on the mountain that will hold 400,000 gallons of water. This will be filled from springs.

The hours for women are from 8 a. m. to 2 p. m., and the men's hours are from 3 to 9 p. m. The Sunday hours for men are from 8 a. m. to 1 p. m. Single baths are given for $1; six tickets for $5. There seems to be no reason why the public should not amply support such an institution as Dr. Cooley has established. A visit to the baths will convince anyone of their excellence and will certainly result in many visits.

HOPE CHAPEL BOYS SURPRISED THEMSELVES

Defeated Clinton Avenue Nine Saturday Afternoon by Score of 11 to 6.

WAS NO GREAT PLAYING.

GAME CALLED AT END OF SEVENTH INNING ON ACCOUNT RAIN.

New Man Behind The Bat For Hope Chapel—Many Changes on Other Team—Game Was Won in The Sixth Inning.

To the surprise of even its own members, the Hope chapel team defeated the Clinton avenue nine in a more or less exciting game of baseball played on the Plainfield avenue grounds Saturday afternoon. With the score 11 to 6, the game was called by mutual consent at the end of the seventh inning because of the rain, which from a drizzle had increased to a steady downpour. The Hope chapel boys were jubilant.

With the exception of the catcher, the makeup of the winning team was not changed. On account of the absence of Hartfelder, H. Montross was substituted behind the bat. There were, however, some material changes on the Clinton avenue team. Martin the regular second baseman, played short-stop in place of Bolsteril. McLoughlin, a substitute, filled Martin's position at second base. Bolman was shifted from left to right field and Suthphen was placed in the left field at the beginning of the game, although in the second inning Herlich was put on in his stead.

The Clinton Avenue boys' defeat was to some extent due to the unusually poor work of their pitcher, Squiers, although when the winning runs were made the majority of the players on team seemed to go to pieces. The weak field work of the Clinton Avenue team in the sixth inning was responsible for the great showing made by the Hope chapel boys.

As for features there were few in the game. Neither team did any remarkable work in the field. In the box J. Montross, of the Hope chapel team, pitched good ball and seemed, at times, to be the whole life of the team. His delivery was swift and H. Montross, who caught, had all he could do to hold him. Both left fielders, Mague, of the Hope chapel nine, and Herlick, of the Clinton Avenue team, did some poor work during the course of the game. Martin, at short-stop, and Rogers, behind the bat, for the Clinton Avenue boys, did well.

At the bat McLaughlin appeared to do the best work for Clinton Avenues. For the Hope chapel team's work the hit of J. Montross to centre field in the third inning and a similarly placed hit by Gordon in the following inning brought cheers from the nine's supporters. Auten's two-bagger in the sixth inning, however, was a clever piece of batting. It had the effect of bracing up the other batters in Hope chapel's nine and before the inning closed six base hits were made.

The batting order follows:

Hope Chapel.	Clinton Avenue.
Mague, lf.	Squires, p.
Gorden, 3 b.	Giddis, cf.
Smith, ss.	Martin, ss.
Roseberry, cf.	Symons, 1 b.
S. Montross, p.	Suphen, Herlick, lf.
Evans, 1 b.	Rogers, c.
H. Montross, c.	Bergmiller. 3 b.
Hand, 2 b.	Bolmer, rf.
Auten, rf.	McLaughlin, 2 b

The score by innings:

Hope Chapel.....	1	0	0	2	1	7	0	11
Clinton Avenue....	1	2	0	1	0	2	0	6

Base hits—Hope chapel, 11; Clinton Avenue, 6. Two base hits—Hope Chapel, 2; Clinton Avenue, 0. Errors—Hope Chapel, 4; Clinton Avenue, 6. Struck out—Montross, 11; Squires, 8 Base on balls—Montross, 3; Squires, 4. Hit by pitched ball—Montross, 0; Squires, 5. Umpires—Newman and Shirley. Scorer—Foster.

Lots of Fun For Children.

Welsh Bros.' Railroad Shows and Trained Animal Exposition, which appear here Wednesday and Thursday, have many features especially arranged for the entertainment of their many children patrons. There are twelve laugh-making and pantomimic clowns in an ever-shifting medley of harmless fun. DR. HAYES HAS PASSED AWAY.

DEAD AT HIS HOME ON EAST FRONT STREET.

Graduated From Princeton—Lived in Plainfield Since 1871—He Was Born in Newark.

Dr. James Hayes, an old and respected Plainfield citizen, passed away at his home on East Front street yesterday. He had been an invalid for the past two years, but his illness was not considered serious until a short time ago. Death was due to a complication of diseases.

Dr. Hayes was the son of the late Samuel Hayes, an old practicing physician of Newark. He was born at that place He graduated from Princeton University and also from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York. For nine years after his graduation he practiced in Brooklyn, but removed to Plainfield in 1871. He has been living a retired life ever since. He was a member of the Crescent Avenue church.

The deceased leaves a wife, one son, James Hayes, Jr., and one daughter, Miss Sarah Hayes, all of whom live in this city. The funeral services will be held from his late residence tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Interment will be made at Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Newark.

RAIDED CRAP GAME.

Scotch Plains Specials Captured Fifty Men in Fanwoon Township Yesterday Afternoon.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, May 13—A crap game in which fifty sports from this place, Plainfield, Scotch Plains and Fanwood, were participating, near Recreation Park yesterday afternoon, was suddenly terminated by the arrival of special policemen from Fanwood township. The latter, eight in number, surrounded the park before the players were aware they were anywhere in the vicinity.

All submitted to arrest quietly. After their names were taken they were released with a warning.

YOUNG WOMAN MISSING.

Left Her Home in Cranford Tuesday and Has Not Been Heard From.

Alice Ditzel, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ditzel, of Cranford, left her home Tuesday morning and has not been heard from since. When last seen Miss Ditzel was aboard a trolley car bound for Elizabeth. The young woman is twenty-six years of age.

According to a description furnished by Mr. Ditzel, who called at The Daily Press office Saturday, she is as follows: Height, five feet, five inches; an abundance of dark hair; light complexion and dark eyes. She wore a "picture hat," trimmed with ostrich feathers.

Mrs Ditzel, the mother, is confined to her bed from continued worriment over her daughter's strange disappearance.

Inspection of Police.

The annual inspection of the police force was conducted Saturday afternoon in the Marsh building. Mayor O. L. Jenkins and the members of the police board were present. The men drilled with much precision, and were complimented by the board for their high standard of efficiency. As at present constituted the force consists of a captain, a sergeant, two roundsmen, twelve patrolmen, and a doorman.

Don't Forget.

Those who are at the head of the movement to relieve a destitute family in North Plainfield hope that the people of the city and borough will not forget to contribute to this worthy object. The family is in need and an effort is being made by the City Union of King's Daughters to supply it. A number of persons have already responded in a generous manner.

Chain Snapped and Trouble Followed.

In coasting down the hill near the felt mill at Scotch Plains yesterday, George L. Apgar, of East Front street, narrowly escaped serious injury. While going at full speed, the chain of his bicycle broke and wound about the rear wheel, smashing the spokes and throwing the rider to the ground. He was badly cut and bruised but was otherwise unhurt.

Interesting Address To Young Men.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck Ph. D. of Trinity Reformed church, gave an interesting address at the men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. There was special singing under the direction of H. J. Martin, and baritone solos by Prof. G. A. Morris.

Spoke to Elizabeth Young Men.

City Judge Runyon delivered an address before the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon. A large audience listened to the stirring appeal made by the earnest young speaker.

WHAT WATER SUPPLY COSTS

SOME OF THE FACTS CONCERNING DECKERTOWN.

As Given by Mayor Vandruff to Borough Council.—The Water Rates.

The address of Mayor S. S. Vandruff on municipal ownership of water works, as experienced in Deckertown, was listened to with marked attention at the Borough Council meeting two weeks ago.

The Mayor has devoted much time and study to the question and his remarks were considered as of special value by the Councilmen inasmuch as he is a disinterested person. In opening, he desired it explicitely understood that he spoke impartially on the subject and without fear or favor from the company which now supplies the borough with water.

Deckertown, said he, had given the idea of public control of the water supply thorough consideration. The theory had now received a practical test and was, in his opinion, an unqualified success. After four years of trial, he claimed, that under no circumstances would the people of his borough be prevailed upon to part with the control of their water plant. One syndicate had offered $100,000 for it, but that was promptly declined

The Mayor declared that the plant was a self sustaining institution. The people own not only the equipment of the works, but the lake, which is the source of the supply. This supply, as chemically analysed by C. C. Vermeule, a recognized expert, is proven to be as pure as any in the State.

The water rates he believed to be very reasonable. In this connection, he cited some of the charges made for water. For a private dwelling, $6 is the rate per annum. In case of an additional family an extra charge of $4 is made. A bath tub and water closet costs $3 each. For a wash bowl $1.50 is charged. For a hose sprinkler, for a yard not over fifty feet in front, the rate is $3 Public drinking fountains and the like are supplied free. A stable, with one horse and carriage, is furnished with water for $3 and for each additional horse $2. The rates for building purposes are: Per M brick ten cents; per perch of stone ten cents and per yard of plastering one cent

LOST THEIR FIRST GAME.

PLAINFIELD A. A. BOYS DEFEATED BY GARWOOD A. A.

A Brisk Shower Came Up And Stopped Play With Visitors One Run Ahead.

In a six-inning ball game, the greater part of which was played in a drizzling shower, the Plainfield Athletic Association was defeated Saturday by the Garwood A. C. The score was 7 to 6. The game was very close throughout.

Although it was the Plainfield men's first game this season, their playing was very good. While it is true a large number of errors were made, the Garwoods were not far behind in the same thing. In Doyle, the local team has an excellent pitcher, while in his position behind the bat, Crothy could not be improved upon. If they had received the support they deserved, there is no doubt but what the game would have ended in the defeat of the visitors. The game was devoid of any brilliant playing, although as a rule it was very fast.

The Garwood team is an excellent one and plays well together. Its battery, Fallon and Colwell, understand each other thoroughly. Brown, who played shortstop, was feared the most by the Plainfield men and was responsible for the most of them getting put out.

At the end of the sixth inning, the rain which had been slowly falling turned into a downpour. The game was called after a part of the seventh inning had been played.

The batting order was as follows:

Garwood A. C.	Plainfield A. A.
Brown, ss.	Jackson, cf.
Haldy, 2b.	Connors, 2b.
Colwell, c.	Scott, ss.
Ball, 3b.	Mumford, lf.
Fallon, p.	Doyle, p.
Tunison, cf.	Crothy, c.
Fream, 1b.	Connelly, rf.
McMahon, rf.	Dodd. 3b.
Washington, rf.	Lederer, 1b.

The score by innings:

Garwood—	1	1	3	1	1	0	—	7
P. A. A.—	1	2	3	0	0	0	—	6

Struck out by Doyle, 10; by Fallon, 3. Base on balls, Doyle, 5; Fallon, 3. Base hits, P. A. A., 9; Garwood, A. C., 10. Time of game, one hour and a-half. Umpire, H. J. Higgins.

PRESIDENT M'CUTCHEN LEADS FOR HIS CUP.

Finished Second In Competition at Park Golf Club Saturday.

M. T. TOWNSEND SECOND.

FIRST HONORS FOR SATURDAY WENT TO H. D. HIBBARD.

Good Field Out For the Regular Saturday Event—Course Was Soft and Slow On Account of Recent Rains.

As a result of Saturday's play on the links of the Park Golf Club course, Charles W. McCutchen now leads for the President's cup, the trophy which he offered to the club a year ago. A field of nearly a score of golfers entered for the weekly competition for the cup while many more spent the afternoon on the course in events of their own arrangement. The course was in good condition, although the recent rains made it a trifle soft and slow. The turf on the putting greens is growing freely.

First honors of the day went to H. D Hibbard who made a 106 With the aid of his handicap, it made him 88 net, which was low score for the day. The best playing was done by Morgan T. Townsend, whose card showed 103 which was good for third place in the trophy play. Charles W. McCutchen was second, with a net score of 90

Mr. McCutchen now stands in the lead for the President's cup, having scored five points this season. Morgan T. Townsend is second with four and Joseph H. Howell and H. D. Hibbard are tied for third place with three points each. The standing is as follows:

Morgan T. Townsend	4
Joseph H. Howell	3
Charles W. McCutchen	5
H. D. Hibbard	3
William J. Buttfield	2
W. de la R. Anderson	½
Herbert S. Rogers	½

Late in the afternoon a shower came up and ended the afternoon's play sooner than usual. It did not interfere, however, with the completion of the rounds in the competition.

The lowest scores turned in during the afternoon were as follows:

	Gross.	Hand.	Net.
H. D. Hibbard....	106	18	88
C. W. McCutchen..	130	40	90
M. T. Townsend..	103	10	93

DEATH OF MRS. LANEHART.

Passed Away This Morning at Her Home on Manning Avenue.

Mrs. Lanehart, wife of William Lanehart, aged eighty years, passed away this morning at her home, 29 Manning avenue, after a short illness, during which she suffered but little. She and her husband have been residents of the borough for nearly two years and during that time they made a number of warm friends.

Mrs. Lanehart was a sincere and devoted Christian and for years was a member of the Dutch Reformed church. She did not unite with any church in this city. One son, who lives at Easton, Pa., survives her besides a husband. The funeral will be private and the interment will take place at Amsterdam, N. Y.

PRICE WAS $10,200.

Purchase of New Hospital Site From the Randolph Estate.

The property which has been purchased for the new hospital site has a frontage of 625 feet on Park avenue and 646 feet on Randolph road. It comprises eight acres. The purchase price is $10 200, which is divided among the four heirs of the Randolph estate. They are Ann Wooden, Alex. Randolph, Rachael Randolph and Samuel Randolph.

MANY HONORED HIS MEMORY.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF JOSEPH A ROBINSON LARGELY ATTENDED.

Held From the Congregational Church Saturday Afternoon—Beautiful Flowers.

Impressive and beautiful were the funeral services of Joseph Alexander Robinson, held from the Congregational church Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The sanctuary was taxed to its capacity to care for the many sorrowing friends who came to honor the memory of one so generally beloved. The service was conducted by Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, pastor of the church where Mr. Robinson had been such a faithful worker.

In a few sentences, Rev. Mr. Goodrich spoke of the Christian life which was ended. It was rather a subject for rejoicing than sorrow that he had fought the fight against the world, the flesh and the devil and come out victorious. No word better expressed his life and services for his God and his home than 'faithful" He had been faithful to all his trusts and his career of unselfishness and love was one that would always be remembered. Mr. Goodrich also offered a prayer

There were two selections by the quartette, which used to sing regularly at Sunday-school when Mr. Robinson was superintendent. The quartette was composed of Miss M. G Morse, Miss Julia M Belknap, Morris C. VanAredale and Stacy Raynolds. The selections were "I Heard the Voice of Jesus" and "The Wondrous Story."

Particularly beautiful were the floral tributes which covered and surrounded the casket. In the centre was a huge floral piece composed of purple orchids, white roses and lilies of the valley. It was marked "From the Officers and Employes of the Lawrence Cement Company in New York city and elsewhere, in memory of their associate and in token of their high esteem for his earnest spirit, consciencious work and unfaltering loyalty"

The pallbearers were John G. McLaughlin, J. Harry Manning, Louis I. VanAlstyne, Charles E. Steiner, Seymour L Smith, of Brooklyn and Stanley E. Boucher, of New York.

Interment was made in Hillside cemetery where a brief service was held at the grave.

GAVE TEA AND MUSICALE.

DORCAS CIRCLE OF KING'S DAUGHTERS IN CHARGE.

Successful Attempt to Raise Money for the Support of the City Nurse.

The Dorcas Circle of King's Daughters held a very successful tea and musicale in the parlors of the Park Avenue Hotel Saturday afternoon. The object was to raise money toward the support of the city nurse who is employed by the City Union of King's Daughters. There was an excellent attendance, in spite of the threatening weather, and the circle will realize a satisfactory sum as a result.

The parlors and dining room were attractively decorated in purple and white, the colors of the organization, while ferns and potted plants added much to the scene of beauty. Mrs. Edward Beekman, Mrs. Frederic W. Stack and Miss J. Louise Jenkins had charge of the decorations.

While the tea was in progress, between the hours of three and six o'clock, a delightful musicale was given. The programme was furnished by Miss May Vincent Whitney, pianist; Miss Bertha VanN. Willis, soprano; Miss Aimee Emmons, elocutionist; P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, and Charles L. Lewis, baritone. The selections were all popular and greatly enjoyed by those present.

Mrs. Louis R. Ross and Mrs. Beekman served at the table, and they were assisted by Miss Anna Clark, Miss Anna Wickoff and Miss Lillian Oakley. Mrs. Frank Rowland and Mrs. E. S. F. Randolph presided at the candy table, while Mrs. Frederic W. Stack and Miss Jenkins were at the cake table. Miss McIntosh was the cashier.

Miss Edith Little, president of the Circle, is deserving of much credit for the success of the affair. She planned it, and, with the assistance of the members, carried it through perfectly. The officers of the Circle are: President, Miss Edith Little; vice-president, Mrs. E. S. F. Randolph; secretary, Miss Anna Clark; treasurer, Mrs. Frederic W. Stack.

Prices Reduced.

Woodhull & Martin announce a reduction in the price of all high pile carpets. The continued rainy weather has affected the carpet business in some measure, and the firm propose to reduce their stock by making special prices.

PLAY AT HILLSIDE LINKS.

WEEKLY COMPETITION FOR THE GOLF COMMITTEE CUP.

Only Event of the Day—Townsend Rushmore is Now in the Lead For That Trophy.

The weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup was the only event on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course Saturday afternoon. During the early part of the day there was a very large number of enthusiasts on the course, but the threatening weather later in the afternoon kept many away. However, there were a goodly number of entries for the contest and they all finished with good scores.

Last week Townsend Rushmore won the first honors with the lowest net score of 86, while Howard Wright and Howard Huntington had a tie score of 87, giving them each a point and a half.

Mrs. N. P. Rogers won the first honors with a net score of 83. E A. Stevenson and A. G. Henderson tied for second honors with a net score of 84. Mrs. Rogers and Townsend Rushmore are now tied for first honors with three points each.

The standing for the cup at present is as follows:

	Points
Townsend Rushmore	3
Mrs. N. P. Rogers	3
Howard Wright	1½
A. G. Henderson	1½
Howard Huntington	1½
E. A. Stevenson	1½

The afternoon's scores were:

DEATH OF MRS. BOHAN.

Passed Away Saturday After a Career of Four Score Years.

Mrs. Jane Bohan, widow of Richard Bohan, died Saturday at her home, 429 Orchard place at the ripe age of eighty-one years.

Death was due to her advanced age. Mr. Bohan formerly resided in Morristown. She leaves one son Richard E. Bohan, who resided with her.

The funeral services will be held from the residence of the son, Richard E. Bohan, 429 Orchard pikce, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock. The interment will be at Morristown.

Hit By Pitched Ball.

The first accident of any consequence so far this season, in local baseball games, occurred in the contest between the Leal's and Alis' nines on Pittis Field Saturday afternoon. Turnbull, the pitcher for the Alis team, was hit on the left side of the head by a swift ball pitched by Ralph Schoonmaker, of the Leal's nine. Turnbull was knocked unconscious and it was over a half hour before he recovered. The blow was purely accidental.

Carriages Locked Wheels.

A coach belonging to J. T. Closson, driven by Patrick McFee, caught in the rear wheels of Frank Burke's rig on East Front street opposite Park avenue, this morning. McFee's team started to run away but was caught after it had gone about 100 feet. The coach was badly scratched and the whiffletree was broken. Burke's wagon was badly wrecked and had to be taken apart to release it.

The class is composed of all the card signers and any who have a desire to converse with the pastor about uniting with the church.

TWELFTH YEAR FOR THE EPWORTH LEAGUE

Anniversary Was Observed Last Evening at The Local M. E. Church.

SPECIAL PROGRAMME GIVEN.

ADDRESSES MADE ON THE WORK OF THE LEAGUE.

Local Workers Spoke at First Church, Hugh Monro at Grace, And Pastor at Monroe Avenue Church—Graduation of Juniors.

The twelfth anniversary of Chapter No. 1, Epworth League, of the First M. E church, was appropriately celebrated last evening at the church. The members of the League occupied front seats and the congregation was a large one. During the service there was special music by the choir, including solos by Miss Templin, soprano; Mrs Stephen H. Tugwell, alto; and Charles L. Lewis, baritone.

Nelson A. Miller, president of the Chapter, was in charge of the service. The first speaker was Henry A. McGee, who took for his subject 'God's Estimate of Worth." He congratulated the members of the chapter because they had grown to such numbers and had accomplished so much for the church. He then compared God's estimate and man's estimate of worth and from the comparison drew many helpful lessons.

Stephen H. Tugwell spoke on "The Lord's Service." He said that one must judge service by the motive. A man serves his employer for the pay he gets, while children serve their parents because it is their duty. There is only one way to serve the Lord and that is to give Him the sacrificial service. In conclusion Mr. Tugwell spoke concerning the possibility of service and mentioned a number of essential things that have made the Epworth League such a power.

Thomas MacDonald, secretary of the chapter, then presented the annual report. This showed the membership to be 130. Eleven new members were added during the year. Fifty-five calls were made, of which forty-three were on strangers. There was a balance at last report of $12 41. The receipts during the year were $49.33. There was expended $49 45 and the present balance is $12.29. The membership of the Junior Epworth League is twenty-five, fifteen boys and ten girls. After the report, Dr. Snodgrass gave a helpful talk on "Methodism Appeals to You"

The twelfth anniversary of the international organization of the Epworth League was commemorated at Grace M. E. church last evening by a special service conducted under the auspices of the League of that church.

Andrew Wilson, the recently elected president of Grace church's Epworth League, had charge of the meeting, which was addressed by Hugh Munro, of New York. The church edifice was well nigh crowded. A special orchestra composed of Dyckman Winckler and Martin Korff, violinists, and Whitney Frazee as cornetist, and led by Joseph Moon as precentor, furnished instrumental music. Mrs. G. W. Gardner acted as accompanist and also sang a contralto solo during the evening's sacred exercises. At the offertory Mr. Winckler played Schubert's "Ave Maria."

The topic chosen by Mr. Munro for his address was "The Call for Young Discipleship." The three thoughts which he said suggested themselves to him in this connection were: First, loyalty to the Bible as the infallible and inspired Word; second, belief in the atonement, and third, consecration. He dwelt largely on the first thought and took occasion to strongly arraign the exponents of higher criticism.

At the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, the exercises were similar to those held by the other local chapters. Overhanging the platform were the league colors in broad streamers of red and white, while about the pulpit were grouped a pretty display of palms and plants. These comprised the decorations.

An interesting part of the programme was the graduation of a large class of Juniors to the Epworth League. The customary questions were propounded by Edward Beekman, president of the league, who was also in charge during the evening. At the close the right hand of fellowship was extended the gradustes by the president and the pastor, Rev. John McMurray. In addition to the choruses in which the congregation took part, a well rendered vocal selection was given by Bertram Tallamy and a selection by a chorus composed of Messrs Lewis and Bertram Tallamy, Williams, McGee and Schutt. The programme terminated with a stirring address by Rev. John McMurray, on the subject, "Life, its purpose and living.
